You have informed us that, in order to complete the merger, the articles of incorporation of the Continuing Fund will have to be amended to allow for Class A shares to be issued to a corporation, and to allow a transfer of those Class A shares from the Terminating Fund to the individual investors of the Terminating Fund. However, if the Continuing Fund amends its articles in this way, under the present wording of the Act, paragraph 204.8(2)(a) (which, in conjunction with section 204.841, levies a penalty tax on a registered LSVCC if its articles cease to comply with paragraph 204.81(1)(c)) will be triggered.

The “asset purchase merger” transaction described in your letter does not appear to contravene the tax policy underlying the labour-sponsored funds tax credit program. Consequently, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance modifications to the income tax provisions concerning the labour-sponsored funds tax credit that would permit, without triggering a penalty tax under section 204.841, a Continuing Fund to issue, in the course of an asset purchase merger of the Continuing Fund and the Terminating Fund, its Class A shares to a Terminating Fund in exchange for the net assets of the Terminating Fund if those Class A shares of the Continuing Fund are transferred to the Terminating Fund’s Class A shareholders upon the redemption by the terminating fund of the Class A shares of the Terminating Fund. We would also recommend that those modifications be made effective in respect of asset purchase mergers completed after 2004.

While we cannot offer any assurance that our recommendation in this matter will be accepted, we hope our statement of intent in this matter will be helpful in responding to your concern.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Emewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Technical Notes: Section 204.81 sets out the conditions for the registration of labour-sponsored venture capital corporations (LSVCCs). Subsection 204.81(1) permits the Minister of National Revenue to register a corporation as an LSVCC under Part X.3 if its articles satisfy specified conditions, and other requirements are met. Subparagraph 204.81(1)(c)(v) sets out the requirements of a federally-registered LSVCC's articles regarding the circumstances in which the LSVCC may redeem shares of its capital stock. The current rule generally provides, pursuant to clause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(E), a minimum holding period of eight years for corporations that are incorporated after March 5, 1996.

Clause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(E) is amended to require that the articles of a federally-registered LSVCC provide that the LSVCC shall not redeem its shares unless the redemption occurs either

- more than eight years after the day on which the share was issued, or
- in February or on March 1st but not more than 31 days before the day that is eight years after the day on which the share was issued.

Proposed Amendment — 204.81(1)(c)(vii) opening words — Reference to TFSA

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 10, 2009:

Mr. Kevin P. Zimka, Blake, Cassels & Graydon LLP, Vancouver, BC

Dear Mr. Zimka:

I am writing in response to your letter dated October 14, 2009, in which you identified an issue regarding the amendments made to the registration requirements for labour sponsored venture capital corporations (LSVCCs) in order to permit the shares of such corporations to be held through a tax-free savings account (TFSA). Specifically you have noted that no reference to TFSA's has been added to subparagraph 204.81(1)(c)(vii) and clause 204.81(1)(c)(vii)(C) of the Income Tax Act (the Act).

In your letter you have noted that, because TFSA's are not referred to in subparagraph 204.81(1)(c)(vii) and clause 204.81(1)(c)(vii)(C) of the Act, shares in an LSVCC cannot be transferred from a specified individual, as defined in subsection 204.81(1) of the Act, to a trust governed by a TFSA, or vice versa or between TFSA's with the same specified individual.

We agree with your concern and we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that subparagraph 204.81(1)(c)(vii) and clause 204.81(1)(c)(vii)(C) of the Act be amended to add a reference to trusts governed by TFSA's, effective for the 2009 and subsequent taxation years. In addition, it has been noted that consequential changes to clause 204.81(c)(v)(A) and to subclause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(D)(II) of the Act are also needed to reflect the introduction of TFSA's. We will also be recommending to the Minister of Finance that a reference to trusts governed by a TFSA be added to these provisions, effective for the 2009 and subsequent taxation years.

The recommended amendments to the rules governing the interaction between TFSA's and LSVCCs would, of course, be subject to the amendments to the rules governing TFSA's announced by the Minister of Finance on October 16, 2009.

If our recommendation is acted upon, we anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future income tax bill. While I cannot offer any assurance that the Minister will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(B) the investment was approved by special resolution of the shareholders of the corporation before the investment was made.

"Eligible labour body" substituted for "national central labour body" in para. (b), cl. (c)(ii)(B) and subpara. (c)(iii) of subsec. 204.81(1) by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), s. 119, applicable to 1992 et seq.

Regulations: 6706 (prescribed conditions for 204.81(1)(c)(v)(G)).

Forms: T5005: Application to register a labour-sponsored venture capital corporation.

(1.1) Corporations incorporated before March 6, 1996 —

In applying clause (1)(c)(v)(E) in relation to any time before 2004 in respect of a corporation incorporated before March 6, 1996, the references in that clause to "eight" are replaced with references to "five" if, at that time, the relevant statements in the corporation's articles refer to "five".

(1.2) Deemed provisions in articles —

In applying subsection (1) in relation to any time before 2004, to a corporation incorporated before February 7, 2000, if the articles of the corporation comply with subclause (1)(c)(v)(E)(I) (as modified, where relevant, by subsection (1.1)), those articles are deemed to provide the statement required by subclause (1)(c)(v)(E)(II).

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 171(2), will add subsecs. 204.81(1.1) and (1.2), applicable after February 6, 2000.

Technical Notes: However, federally-registered LSVCCs that were incorporated before March 6, 1996 may contain statements in their articles that provide that the LSVCC shall not redeem certain of its shares unless the redemption occurs more than five years after the day on which such a share was issued. New subsection 204.81(1.1) provides that in applying clause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(E), at any time before 2004, in respect of a corporation incorporated before March 6, 1996, the references in that clause to the word "eight" are replaced with references to the word "five" if, at that time, the relevant statements in the corporation's articles refer to the word "five". This is intended to ensure that the extended (February, or March 1st) redemption provisions required of a federally-registered LSVCC's articles apply equally to shares originally subject to a minimum five year holding period and those subject to a minimum eight year holding period.

New subsection 204.81(1.2) is a transitional rule that provides a federally-registered LSVCC, incorporated before February 7, 2000, with a reasonable amount of time to amend its articles as required by clause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(E). Subsection 204.81(1.2) provides that, in applying subsection 204.81(1) at any time before 2004 to such an LSVCC, if the LSVCC's articles comply with subclause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(E)(I) (as modified by subsection 204.81(1.1)) those articles are deemed to provide the statement required by subclause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(E)(II).

New subsections 204.81(1.1) and (1.2) apply after February 6, 2000. These amendments are part of a set of amendments, announced by the Minister of Finance (News Release 2000-009, dated February 7, 2000) [reproduced under 211.8(1)(a)B(i)(B), (C) — ed.] concerning the redemption requirements for federally-registered LSVCCs. For information on a related amendment, see the commentary to subsection 211.8(1).

(2) Registration number — On registering a corporation under subsection (1), the Minister shall assign to it a registration number.

(3) Successive registrations — Where an eligible labour body causes more than one corporation to be registered under this Part, for the purposes of paragraph (6)(h) and section 204.82, each of those corporations shall be deemed

(a) to have issued a Class A share at the earliest time any such corporation issued a Class A share, and, where the corporation did not exist at the time referred to in paragraph (a),

(b) to have been in existence during the particular period beginning immediately before that time and ending immediately after the corporation was incorporated, and

(c) to have had, throughout the particular period, fiscal periods ending on the same calendar day in each year in the particular period as the calendar day on which its first fiscal period after it was incorporated ended.

History: "Eligible labour body" substituted for "national central labour body" in subsec. 204.81(3) by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), s. 119, applicable to 1992 et seq.

(4) Determination of cost — For the purposes of this Part, the cost at any time to a corporation of an eligible investment that is a guarantee shall be deemed to be 25% of the amount of the debt obligation subject to the guarantee at that time.

(5) Registration date — Where the Minister registers a corporation for the purposes of this Part, the corporation shall be deemed to have become so registered on the later of

(a) the day the application for registration of the plan is received by the Minister, and

(b) where in the application for registration a day is specified as the day on which the registration is to take effect, that day.

(6) Revocation of registration — The Minister may revoke the registration of a corporation for the purposes of this Part where

(a) the articles of the corporation do not comply with paragraph (1)(c) and would not comply with that paragraph if the corporation had been incorporated after December 5, 1996;

(a.1) the corporation does not comply with any of the provisions of its articles described in paragraph (1)(c), except where there would be no failure to comply if the provisions of its articles were consistent with the articles of a corporation that would be permitted to be registered under this Part if it had been incorporated after December 5, 1996;

(b) an individual acquires or irrevocably subscribes and pays for a Class A share of the capital stock of the corporation in the period beginning on the 61st day of a calendar year and ending on the 60th day of the following calendar year and the corporation fails to file with the Minister an information return in prescribed form containing prescribed information before April of that following calendar year;

(c) an individual acquires or irrevocably subscribes and pays for a Class A share of the capital stock of the corporation in the period beginning on the 61st day of a calendar year and ending on the 60th day of the following calendar year and the corporation fails to issue to the individual before April of that following calendar year an information return in prescribed form stating the amount of the consideration paid for the share in that period;

(d) the corporation issues more than one information return described in paragraph (c) in respect of the same acquisition of or subscription for a Class A share;

(e) the financial statements of the corporation presented to its shareholders are not prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles;

(f) the corporation fails within 6 months after the end of any taxation year to have an independent valuation of its shares made as of the end of that year;

(g) [Repealed]

(h) the corporation does not pay the tax or penalty payable under section 204.82 by it on or before the day on or before which that tax or penalty is required to be paid;

(i) tax was payable under subsection 204.82(3) by the corporation for 3 or more taxation years;

Proposed Amendment — 204.94(2) — Exemption for child welfare organizations

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Jan. 7, 2008: Ms. Lenore Burton, Director General, Canada Education Savings Program, Human Resources and Social Development Canada, 140 Promenade du Portage, Phase IV, Gatineau, QC K1A 0J9

Dear Ms. Burton:

This is in reply to your letter of April 13, 2007 in which you request that we consider an amendment to the Income Tax Act (Act) to address an anomaly in the tax treatment of child welfare organizations that have established registered education savings plans (RESPs) on behalf of children in their care. We also acknowledge several discussions between our respective officials on this matter. Please excuse the delay in replying.

Under section 146.1 of the Act, an RESP may be established on behalf of a child in care by the child's "public primary caregiver", which is defined as the department, agency or institution that maintains the child or the public trustee or curator of the province in which the child resides. We understand that child welfare services generally are administered by a provincial government department. However, Ontario and Nova Scotia have created independent non-profit organizations to provide child welfare services.

We understand that, in the course of coordinating a common RESP provider for children in care across Canada, concern was raised that the child welfare agencies in Ontario and Nova Scotia may be subject to the 20 percent tax on accumulated income payments in Part X.5 of the Act.

As you know, this special tax generally applies where an RESP is terminated because the beneficiary does not pursue post-secondary education and the accumulated investment income is paid out to the subscriber. The tax is intended to discourage the use of RESPs strictly for tax deferral purposes and is in addition to regular income tax.

While paragraph 149(1)(l) of the Act will provide an exemption from regular income tax with respect to any accumulated income payments made to child welfare agencies in these provinces, there is no comparable exemption from Part X.5 tax.

We understand that this is not an issue for most provinces, as any accumulated income payments made from an RESP established by a provincial government department would be immune from taxation under the constitution [Constitution Act, 1867, s. 125 — ed.] However, because Ontario and Nova Scotia use non-profit organizations, constitutional immunity is not available.

You have asked that the Act be amended to expressly exempt child welfare organizations from being liable for Part X.5 tax. This will ensure that all child welfare organizations — regardless of legal structure — are able to reallocate the full amount of any investment income of an RESP that is not used for the beneficiary's post-secondary education to other RESPs established for other children under the organization's care.

We have considered your request and are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that Part X.5 of the Act be amended so that it does not apply to a "public primary caregiver" as defined in subsection 146.1(1) of the Act. This is consistent with the fact that non-profit child welfare organizations are already exempt from regular income tax on accumulated income payments and will provide comparable tax treatment for all RESPs established by child welfare organizations.

I trust that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you. Please feel free to share this letter with the child welfare organizations and the financial institution that was selected to be the common RESP provider.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Related Provisions: 206.2 — Tax on advantage.

(d) an amount paid under the Canada Disability Savings Act;

“benefit”, in relation to a registered disability savings plan, includes any payment or allocation of an amount to the plan that is represented to be a return on investment in respect of property held by the plan trust, but which cannot reasonably be considered, having regard to all the circumstances, to be on terms and conditions that would apply to a similar transaction in an open market between parties dealing with each other at arm’s length and acting prudently, knowledgeably and willingly.

Related Provisions: 206.2(2)(a) — Tax on benefit.

“qualified investment” for a trust governed by a registered disability savings plan means

- (a) an investment that would be described by any of paragraphs (a) to (d), (f) and (g) of the definition “qualified investment” in section 204 if the reference in that definition to “a trust governed by a deferred profit sharing plan or revoked plan” were read as a reference to “a trust governed by a registered disability savings plan” and if that definition were read without reference to the words “with the exception of excluded property in relation to the trust”;

(b) a contract for an annuity issued by a licensed annuities provider where

(i) the trust is the only person who, disregarding any subsequent transfer of the contract by the trust, is or may become entitled to any annuity payments under the contract, and

(c) a contract for an annuity issued by a licensed annuities provider where

(i) annual or more frequent periodic payments are or may be made under the contract to the holder of the contract,

(ii) the trust is the only person who, disregarding any subsequent transfer of the contract by the trust, is or may become entitled to any annuity payments under the contract,

(iii) neither the time nor the amount of any payment under the contract may vary because of the length of any life, other than the life of the beneficiary under the plan,

(iv) the day on which the periodic payments began or are to begin is not later than the end of the later of

(A) the year in which the beneficiary under the plan attains the age of 60 years, and

(B) the year following the year in which the contract was acquired by the trust,

(v) the periodic payments are payable for the life of the beneficiary under the plan and either there is no guaranteed period under the contract or there is a guaranteed period that does not exceed 15 years,

(vi) the periodic payments

(A) are equal, or

(B) are not equal solely because of one or more adjustments that would, if the contract were an annuity under a retirement savings plan, be in accordance with subparagraphs 146(3)(b)(iii) to (v) or that arise because of a uniform reduction in the entitlement to the periodic payments as a consequence of a partial surrender of rights to the periodic payments, and

(vii) the contract requires that, in the event the plan must be terminated in accordance with paragraph 146.4(4)(p), any amounts that would otherwise be payable after the termination be commuted into a single payment; and

“affiliate” of a corporation (in this definition referred to as the “parent corporation”) at any time is any other corporation where, at that time,

- (a) the parent corporation controls the other corporation,
- (b) the parent corporation or a corporation controlled by the parent corporation owns

 - (ii) shares of the capital stock of the other corporation having a fair market value of 25% or more of the fair market value of all the issued shares of the capital stock of that other corporation, or

(iii) that has not been satisfied at or before that time by the issue of new units of the trust or by a payment of an amount by the trust;

Proposed Amendment — Former 206(1)“cost amount”(b)(i)–(iii)

(i) after 2000 and at or before the end of the taxation year, by the trust in respect of the interest (otherwise than as proceeds of disposition of the interest), and

(ii) that has not been satisfied at or before that time by the issue of new units of the trust or by a payment of an amount by the trust;

(iii) [Repealed]

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 173(2), will replace subparas. (b)(i)–(iii) of the definition “cost amount” in former subsec. 206(1) [repealed by S.C. 2005, c. 30] with subparas. (b)(i) and (ii) to read as above, applicable to months that end after December 20, 2002 and before 2005, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: Part XI of the Act set out rules for a 1% per month penalty tax on excess foreign property held by deferred income plans. Part XI was repealed, effective for months that end after 2004, in Budget Implementation Act, 2005, S.C. 2005, c. 30. A number of amendments are being made to Part XI that are effective prior to its repeal.

“Cost amount” is defined in subsection 206(1) for the purposes of Part XI. The definition was introduced in 2001 to deal with arrangements that provided for trust income to be “capitalized” without the trust issuing new units. Under the definition, the cost amount otherwise determined of a taxpayer’s interest in such a trust reflects the capitalized amounts. For months that end after December 20, 2002 and before 2005, the definition is to be read to clarify that it applies to trusts under which all beneficiaries are registered plan trusts (e.g., trusts described in paragraph (e) of the definition “trust” in subsection 108(1)).

“designated value” of a property at any time means the greater of

- (a) the fair market value at that time of the property, and
- (b) the carrying value at that time of the property;

“excluded share” means

- (a) a share that is of a class of shares listed on a prescribed stock exchange in Canada, where no share of that class has been issued after December 4, 1985 (otherwise than pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into before 5:00 p.m. Eastern Standard Time on December 4, 1985),
- (b) a share last acquired after 1995 that is of a class of shares listed on a prescribed stock exchange in Canada, where
 - (i) no share of that class has been issued after July 20, 1995 (otherwise than pursuant to an agreement in writing made before July 21, 1995), and
 - (ii) the share would not be foreign property if the expression “primarily from foreign property” in paragraph (d.1) of the definition “foreign property” in this subsection were read as “primarily from portfolio investments in property that is foreign property” and that paragraph were read without reference to “(other than an excluded share)”, and

- (c) a share last acquired after 1995 as a consequence of the exercise of a right acquired before 1996 where the share would not be foreign property if the expression “primarily from foreign property” in paragraph (d.1) of the definition “foreign property” in this subsection were read as “primarily from portfolio investments in property that is foreign property” and that paragraph were read without reference to “(other than an excluded share)”;

“foreign property” means

- (a) tangible property situated outside Canada except automotive equipment registered in Canada,
- (b) automotive equipment not registered in Canada pursuant to the laws of Canada or a province,
- (c) intangible property (other than any property described in paragraphs (d) to (g)) situated outside Canada including, without restricting the generality of the foregoing, any patent under the laws of a country other than Canada and any licence in respect thereof,
- (d) any share of the capital stock of a corporation other than a Canadian corporation,
- (d.1) except as provided by subsection (1.1), any share (other than an excluded share) of the capital stock of, or any debt obligation issued by, a corporation (other than an investment corporation, mutual fund corporation or registered investment) that is a Canadian corporation, where shares of the corporation can reasonably be considered to derive their value, directly or indirectly, primarily from foreign property,

Proposed Amendment — Former 206(1)“foreign property”(d.1)

(d.1) any share (other than an excluded share) of the capital stock of, or any debt obligation (other than a debt obligation described in subparagraph (g)(iii)) issued by, a corporation (other than an investment corporation, a mutual fund corporation or a registered investment) that is a Canadian corporation, if shares of the corporation can reasonably be considered to derive their value, directly or indirectly, primarily from foreign property,

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 173(3), will amend para. (d.1) of the definition “foreign property” in former subsec. 206(1) [repealed by S.C. 2005, c. 30] to read as above, applicable to months that end after October 2003 and before 2005, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: “Foreign property” is defined in subsection 206(1). Under paragraph (d.1) of the definition, foreign property includes certain shares and debt issued by Canadian corporations, if shares of the corporation may reasonably be considered to derive their value primarily from foreign property. Paragraph (g) of the definition treats as foreign property the indebtedness of a non-resident person other than indebtedness issued by various international organizations or indebtedness issued by an authorized foreign bank and payable at a Canadian branch of that bank.

For months that end after October 2003 and before 2005, paragraphs (d.1) and (g) are to be read to provide that a mortgage obligation that is fully secured by real property situated in Canada is not foreign property.

(e) except as prescribed, any share of the capital stock of a mutual fund corporation or investment corporation that is not a registered investment, other than a share of the capital stock of an investment corporation that was last acquired before October 14, 1971,

(f) any property that, under the terms or conditions thereof or any agreement relating thereto, is convertible into, is exchangeable for or confers a right to acquire, property that is foreign property, but not including property that is

(i) a share of the capital stock of a Canadian corporation listed on a prescribed stock exchange in Canada, or

(ii) a right issued before 1984 and listed on a prescribed stock exchange in Canada to acquire a share of the capital stock of a Canadian corporation,

(g) indebtedness of a non-resident person, other than

(i) indebtedness issued by an authorized foreign bank and payable at a branch in Canada of the bank, or

(ii) indebtedness issued or guaranteed by

- (A) the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development,
- (B) the International Finance Corporation,
- (C) the Inter-American Development Bank,
- (D) the Asian Development Bank,
- (E) the Caribbean Development Bank,
- (F) the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development,
- (G) the African Development Bank, or
- (H) a prescribed person,

Proposed Addition — Former 206(1)“foreign property”(g)(iii)

(iii) a debt obligation that is fully secured by a mortgage, charge, hypothec or similar instrument in respect of real or immovable property situated in Canada or that would be fully secured were it not for a decline in the fair market value of the property after the debt obligation was issued,

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 173(4), will add subpara. (g)(iii) to the definition “foreign property” in former subsec. 206(1) [repealed by S.C. 2005, c. 30], applicable to months that end after October 2003 and before 2005, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: See under 206(1)“foreign property”(d.1) above.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, November 3, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

This is in reply to your letter of September 22, 2003 in which you seek an amendment to the Income Tax Act to address certain practical difficulties of monitoring the foreign property character of Canadian-based commercial mortgage-backed securities (CMBS).

We understand that CMBS in Canada are generally issued as certificates representing undivided co-ownership interests in a pool of mortgage loans secured by commercial real property situated in Canada. To determine the foreign property character of the certificates, it is necessary to determine the character of each of the mortgage loans in the pool based on the attributes of the issuer. As the issuers are typically private corporations, obtaining the information necessary to make on-going determinations as to the applicability of paragraphs (d.1) and (g) of the “foreign property” definition in subsection 206(1) and subsection 206(1.1) is time-consuming and expensive. Finally, we understand that the foreign property component of typical CMBS offerings in Canada is minimal.

Given these factors, we are prepared to recommend relief. In particular, we will recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Income Tax Act be amended, effective for months ending after October 2003, to exclude from the definition "foreign property" certificates representing undivided co-ownership interests in a pool of mortgage loans secured by real property situated in Canada, subject to the following conditions:

- at the time of issuance of the certificates, not more than 20% of the total amount of the mortgage loans in the pool would otherwise constitute foreign property;
- at the time of issuance of the certificates, not more than 20% of the total amount of the mortgage loans in the pool is attributable to mortgage loans issued by a single person or related group;
- the certificates are issued as part of an offering of at least $25 million;
- the amount of each mortgage loan in the pool, at the time [of] its issuance, (together with the amount of any other debt of equal or superior rank) does not exceed the fair market value, at that time, of the real property subject to the mortgage loan; and
- no mortgage loan is added to the pool after issuance of the certificates unless it is non-foreign property.

As you are aware, we are also considering possibility of providing a more general exclusion for any mortgage loan in respect of real property situated in Canada. If a decision is made to provide a general exclusion, it would be communicated by way of public announcement. [Subpara. (g)(iii) provides this more general exclusion — ed.]

I trust this addresses your concerns and thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernevein

Technical Notes: Subsection 206(1) includes a definition of a partner's "specified proportion" of a partnership for a fiscal period. To enable the definition to be used for other purposes as well, it is moved to subsection 248(1); and is repealed in subsection 206(1), effective after December 20, 2002.

(3.1) Acquisition of qualifying security — For the purpose of applying subparagraph (2)(a)(iii) at or after a particular time, where a qualifying security in relation to another security is acquired at the particular time by the taxpayer referred to in subsection (3.2) in respect of the security, and the security is foreign property at that time,

(a) the qualifying security is deemed to have been last acquired by the taxpayer at the time the other security was last acquired by the taxpayer;

(b) where the other security was not foreign property immediately before the particular time, the qualifying security is deemed to have become foreign property at the particular time; and

(c) where the other security was foreign property immediately before the particular time, the qualifying security is deemed to have become foreign property at the time the other security became foreign property.

(3.2) Qualifying security — For the purpose of subsection (3.1), a qualifying security in relation to another security means

(i) in exchange for another security acquired before that time by the taxpayer, and

(ii) in the course of

(A) a corporate merger or reorganization of capital,

(B) a transaction or series of transactions in which control of the corporation that issued the other security is acquired by a person or group of persons, or

(C) a transaction or series of transactions in which all or substantially all of the issued and outstanding shares (other than shares held immediately before the transaction or the beginning of the series by a particular person or related group) of the corporation that issued the other security are acquired by the particular person or related group; or

(b) a security acquired by a taxpayer from a corporation pursuant to a distribution with respect to another security that is an eligible distribution described in subsection 86.1(2).

(4) Non-arm's length transactions — For the purposes of this Part, where at any time a taxpayer acquires property, otherwise than pursuant to a transfer of property to which paragraph (f) or (g) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1) applies, from a person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length for no consideration or for consideration less than the fair market value of the property at that time, the taxpayer is deemed to acquire the property at that fair market value, and for those purposes, a particular trust is deemed not to deal at arm's length with another trust if a person who is beneficially interested in the particular trust is at that time also beneficially interested in the other trust.

206.1 Tax in respect of acquisition of shares — Where at any time a taxpayer to which this Part applies makes an agreement (otherwise than as a consequence of the acquisition or writing by it of an option listed on a prescribed stock exchange) to acquire a share of the capital stock of a corporation (otherwise than from the corporation) at a price that may differ from the fair market value of the share at the time the share may be acquired, the taxpayer shall, in respect of each month during which the taxpayer is a party to the agreement, pay a tax under this Part equal to the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the amount of a dividend paid on the share at a time in the month at which the taxpayer is a party to the agreement

exceeds

(b) the amount, if any, of the dividend that is received by the taxpayer.

207. (1) Return and payment of tax — Within 90 days after the end of each year after 1971, a taxpayer to whom this Part applies shall

(c) pay to the Receiver General the amount of tax, if any, payable by the taxpayer under this Part in respect of each month in the year.

(2) Liability of trustee — Where the trustee of a taxpayer that is liable to pay tax under this Part does not remit to the Receiver General the amount of the tax within the time specified in subsection (1), the trustee is personally liable to pay on behalf of the taxpayer the full amount of the tax and is entitled to recover from the taxpayer any amount paid by the trustee as tax under this section.

(3) Provisions applicable to Part — Subsections 150(2) and (3), sections 152 and 158, subsections 161(1) and (11), sections 162 to 167 and Division J of Part I are applicable to this Part with such modifications as the circumstances require.

PART XI.01 — TAXES IN RESPECT OF TFSAs [TAX-FREE SAVINGS ACCOUNTS]

207.01 (1) Definitions — The definitions in subsection 146.2(1) and the following definitions apply in this Part.

“advantage”, in relation to a TFSA, means

(a) any benefit, loan or indebtedness that is conditional in any way on the existence of the TFSA, other than

(i) a benefit derived from the provision of administrative or investment services in respect of the TFSA,

(ii) a loan or an indebtedness (including the use of the TFSA as security for a loan or an indebtedness) the terms and conditions of which are terms and conditions that persons dealing at arm's length with each other would have entered into,

(iii) a distribution under the TFSA, and

(iv) the payment or allocation of any amount to the TFSA by the issuer; and

(b) a benefit that is an increase in the total fair market value of the property held in connection with the TFSA if it is reasonable to consider, having regard to all the circumstances, that the increase is attributable, directly or indirectly, to

(i) a transaction or event or a series of transactions or events that

(A) would not have occurred in an open market in which parties deal with each other at arm's length and act prudently, knowledgeably and willingly, and

(B) had as one of its main purposes to enable a person or a partnership to benefit from the exemption from tax under Part I of any amount in respect of the TFSA, or

(ii) a payment received as, on account or in lieu of, or in satisfaction of, a payment

(A) for services provided by a person who is, or who does not deal at arm's length with, the holder of the TFSA, or

(B) of interest, of a dividend, of rent, of a royalty or of any other return on investment, or of proceeds of disposition, in respect of property (other than property held in connection with the TFSA) held by a person who is, or who does not deal at arm's length with, the holder of the TFSA; and

Proposed Addition — 207.01(1)“advantage”(b)(iii),
(iv)

(iii) a swap transaction, or

(iv) specified non-qualified investment income that has not been distributed under the TFSA within 90 days of receipt by the holder of the TFSA of a notice issued by the Minister under subsection 207.06(4); and

Application: The April 30, 2010 draft legislation (TFSAs), subsec. 3(1), will add subparas. (b)(iii) and (iv) to the definition “advantage” in subsec. 207.01(1), applicable after October 16, 2009.

Technical Notes: Subsection 207.01(1) provides definitions that apply for the purposes of Part XI.01 of the Act. Pursuant to the October 16, 2009 Department of Finance news release regarding amendments to the TFSA rules, a number of changes are being proposed to existing defined terms and several new defined terms are being introduced.

Section 207.05 imposes a special tax if an advantage in relation to a TFSA is extended to any person who is, or who does not deal at arm's length with, the holder of the TFSA. An advantage is defined to include, in paragraph (a), any benefit, loan or indebtedness that is in any way dependent on the existence of the TFSA, with certain exceptions. Under paragraph (b), an advantage also includes a benefit that is an increase in the fair market value of property held in connection with a TFSA where it is reasonable to conclude that the increased value is attributable to certain events or circumstances. This provision is intended to prevent transactions designed to artificially shift taxable income away from the holder and into the shelter of the TFSA or to circumvent the TFSA contribution limits.

Consequential on technical changes to the TFSA rules proposed in the October 16, 2009 Department of Finance News Release, paragraph (b) is amended to extend its application to several new types of transactions, and new paragraph (c) is being added.

Paragraph (b) is amended so that an increase in the fair market value of property held in connection with a TFSA that is reasonably attributable to a “swap transaction” or to undistributed “specified non-qualified investment income” is specifically included in the definition “advantage”.

Dept. of Finance news release 2009-099, Oct. 16, 2009: Government of Canada Proposes Technical Changes Concerning Tax-Free Savings Accounts

The Honourable Jim Flaherty, Minister of Finance, today proposed amendments to the Income Tax Act to strengthen the rules applicable to Tax-Free Savings Accounts (TFSAs).

The TFSA was introduced in Budget 2008. Since January 1, 2009, Canadian residents who are 18 years of age or older are eligible to contribute up to $5,000 annually to a TFSA. The TFSA is a flexible, registered, general purpose account that allows Canadians to maximize their savings by earning tax-free investment income. Contributions to a TFSA are not tax-deductible, but investment income earned in a TFSA, as well as TFSA withdrawals, are tax-free.

The proposed amendments respond to recent concerns that have arisen regarding the use of TFSAs in tax-planning schemes.

The proposed amendments would [as per details in Backgrounder below — ed.]:

- Make any income attributable to deliberate overcontributions and prohibited investments subject to existing anti-avoidance rules in the Income Tax Act.
- Make any income attributable to non-qualified investments taxable at regular income tax rates.
- Ensure that withdrawals of deliberate overcontributions, prohibited investments, non-qualified investments or amounts attributable to swap transactions, or of related investment income, from a TFSA do not create additional TFSA contribution room.
- Effectively prohibit asset transfer transactions between TFSAs and other accounts.

“These proposals will ensure that the TFSA remains viable and strong for Canadians today and in the future and the use of inappropriate transactions to draw excessive benefits are avoided,” said Minister Flaherty.

As with the existing TFSA legislation, the Minister of National Revenue will maintain, in appropriate circumstances, the discretion to waive or cancel all or part of any tax that would otherwise be payable because of the application of today's proposals.

Given the clear intent of the TFSA concept, Minister Flaherty has asked the Honourable Jean-Pierre Blackburn, Minister of National Revenue, to ensure that the Canada Revenue Agency closely examines any unusual TFSA transactions that have occurred to date, and to apply the existing TFSA rules to challenge aggressive tax planning where appropriate.

The proposed amendments are to apply to transactions that occur after today. The Government will introduce legislation at an early opportunity.

Backgrounder

The Tax-Free Savings Account (TFSA) was introduced in Budget 2008. Since January 1, 2009, Canadian residents who are 18 years of age or older are eligible to contribute up to $5,000 annually to a TFSA. The TFSA is a flexible, registered, general purpose account that allows Canadians to maximize their savings by earning tax-free investment income. Contributions to a TFSA are not tax-deductible, but investment income earned in a TFSA, as well as TFSA withdrawals, are tax-free [146.2(6)—ed.]. Any amounts withdrawn from an individual's TFSA in a year will be added to the individual's contribution room for the following year [207.01(1)“unused TFSA contribution room”(b)B—ed.].

The proposals announced today contemplate a number of amendments to the tax framework applicable to TFSAs. These amendments seek to address concerns regarding the use of TFSAs in tax-planning schemes.

Asset Transfer Transactions

“Asset transfer transactions” (sometimes known as “swap transactions”), in this context, refer to transfers of property (other than cash) for cash or other property between accounts (for example, a Registered Retirement Savings Plan (RRSP) and another registered account) that are generally not treated as a withdrawal and re-contribution, but instead as a straightforward purchase and sale. Subject to the application of existing anti-avoidance rules in the Income Tax Act, these transfers, when performed on a frequent basis with a view to exploiting small changes in asset value, could potentially be used to shift value from, for example, an RRSP to a TFSA without paying tax, in the absence of any real intention to dispose of the asset.

The proposed amendments would effectively prohibit asset transfer transactions between registered or non-registered accounts and TFSAs. The prohibition would apply to transfers effected between accounts of the same taxpayer or that of the taxpayer and an individual with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length. [This would appear to cover stock option transfers if the stock options are already in an “account” but not otherwise — ed.]

TFSA amounts that may reasonably be attributed to asset transfer transactions will be subject to the advantage rules in Part XI.01 of the Income Tax Act. The advantage rules are anti-avoidance rules that are applicable to transactions or events that would not have occurred in an open market in which parties deal with each other at arm's length and act prudently, knowledgeably and willingly [207.01(1)"advantage"(b)(i) — ed.]. Where these rules apply, TFSA amounts reasonably attributable to asset transfer transactions will be taxable at 100% [207.05(2) — ed.].

In circumstances where an asset transfer transaction were to occur inadvertently, after today, between a taxpayer's TFSA (or the TFSA of an individual with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length) and another account, and the taxpayer promptly rectifies the situation by restoring each account to its position before the asset transfer transaction occurred, the Minister of National Revenue will have discretion to waive or cancel all or part of the tax payable, and the authority to adjust the taxpayer's TFSA contribution room accordingly. In such a case, the proposed amendment would provide for any investment income attributable to the asset transfer transaction to be taxed as regular income.

Deliberate Overcontributions

The TFSA rules allow a holder to contribute, for 2009, a maximum of $5,000 [207.01(1)"TFSA dollar limit"(a) — ed.]. Contributions and associated earnings may accrue tax-free in the TFSA and may be withdrawn at any time without any adverse tax consequences. Contributions in excess of the contribution limit [207.01(1)"excess TFSA amount" — ed.] are subject to a tax of 1% per month on the highest amount of excess contributions for the month [207.02 — ed.]. This tax is generally sufficient to neutralize the tax benefit of overcontributions. The Government of Canada has become aware that in certain situations, and subject to the existing anti-avoidance rules in the Income Tax Act, some TFSA holders are attempting to generate a rate of return on deliberate overcontributions over a short period of time sufficient to outweigh the cost of the 1% tax. On its introduction, it was not anticipated that the TFSA would be subject to this type of deliberate overcontribution.

Under the proposed amendments, any income reasonably attributable to deliberate overcontributions will be made subject to the existing advantage rules (as described above) [presumably by being included in 207.01(1)"advantage" — ed.] and taxed accordingly. Pursuant to the advantage rules, the tax payable on the income will be 100% [207.05(2) — ed.].

The Minister of National Revenue will maintain the discretion to waive or cancel all or part of the tax payable and the authority to adjust the taxpayer's TFSA contribution room accordingly in appropriate circumstances.

Prohibited Investments and Non-Qualified Investments

A similar concern exists in relation to investment income related to prohibited investments and non-qualified investments held in TFSAs generally. The qualified investment regime [207.01(1)"qualified investment" — ed.] sets out the basic investment framework for TFSAs (which is similar to the rules for RRSPs) and includes, for example, debt obligations issued by public corporations as well as publicly listed securities. The prohibited investment rules in respect of TFSAs [207.01(1)"prohibited investment" — ed.] are intended to guard against, for example, self-dealing opportunities for the holder. Prohibited investments include, for example, shares of the capital stock of a corporation in which the holder has a significant (10% or greater) interest and investments in entities with which the holder does not deal at arm's length. Non-qualified investments include, for example, land and general partnership units.

Under the current rules, where a TFSA holds a non-qualified investment or a prohibited investment, the holder of the TFSA is subject to a tax equivalent to 50% of the fair market value of the property [207.04(2) — ed.]. This tax is refundable to the holder if the investment is promptly disposed of from the account (by the end of the year following the year in which the tax arose, or such later time as the Minister of National Revenue considers reasonable), except in circumstances where the holder knew or ought to have known that the investment was non-qualified or prohibited [207.04(4) — ed.]. All or part of the tax may also be waived or cancelled at the discretion of the Minister of National Revenue where that Minister considers it just and equitable to do so having regard to the circumstances [207.06(2) — ed.]. Prohibited investments also trigger an additional income tax for the TFSA holder (equivalent to 150% of Part I tax in order to provide a proxy for the combined federal-provincial income tax rate) applicable to investment income earned on the prohibited investments [207.04(6), (7) — ed.]. With respect to non-qualified investments, the trust governed by the TFSA is liable for income tax at regular federal/provincial rates on any investment income earned on non-qualified investments held inside the TFSA [146.2(6) — ed.]. The Income Tax Act does not provide for a similar Ministerial discretion to waive or cancel these additional taxes.

While the current TFSA regime applicable to prohibited investments and non-qualified investments provides for serious tax consequences for holding such investments, the investment income associated with the investments may remain tax-sheltered in the TFSA [146.2(6) — ed.], resulting in an unintended permanent increase in TFSA savings and contribution room.

Under the proposed amendments, the existing prohibited investment tax framework will be modified so that any income reasonably attributable to prohibited investments will be considered an "advantage" [207.01(1)"advantage" — ed.] and taxed accordingly, i.e. at 100% [207.05(2) — ed.]. The existing taxes on prohibited investment income [207.04(1), (2), (6), (7) — ed.] will be repealed.

Further, any income reasonably attributable to non-qualified investments will also be taxable at regular federal/provincial income tax rates. That is, income earned on income that was earned on non-qualified investments will also be taxable. Under the existing rules, only the investment income on non-qualified investments is taxable as regular income and there is no obligation to remove these amounts. The proposed amendments ensure that the TFSA does not allow for the tax-sheltering of this ancillary income derived from non-qualified investments.

Withdrawals

The proposed amendments will also include rules to ensure that the withdrawal of amounts in respect of deliberate overcontributions, prohibited investments, non-qualified investments, asset transfer transactions and income related to those amounts do not constitute distributions for TFSA purposes [146.2(1)"distribution" — ed.] and thus do not create additional TFSA contribution room [207.01(1)"unused TFSA contribution room"(b)B — ed.].

Effective Date

It is proposed that these measures apply to transactions undertaken after today's date [Oct. 16, 2009 — ed.]. Withdrawals of amounts related to transactions occurring on or before today's date will be governed by the existing rules.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: Previously Announced Measures

Budget 2010 confirms the Government's intention to proceed with the following previously-announced tax measures, as modified to take into account consultations and deliberations since their release:

- Modifications to the rules governing Tax-Free Savings Accounts, announced on October 16, 2009;

(c) a prescribed benefit.

Proposed Amendment — 207.01(1)"advantage"(c), (d)

(c) a benefit that is income (including a capital gain) that is reasonably attributable, directly or indirectly, to

(i) a deliberate over-contribution, or

(ii) a prohibited investment in respect of the TFSA or any other TFSA of the holder; and

Application: The April 30, 2010 draft legislation (TFSAs), subsec. 3(2), will renumber para. (c) of the definition "advantage" in subsec. 207.01(1) as (d) and add new para. (c), applicable after October 16, 2009 except that subpara. (c)(ii), as amended, does not apply in respect of income (including a capital gain) earned before October 17, 2009.

Technical Notes: New paragraph (c) of the definition "advantage" adds to the definition income (including a capital gain) that is reasonably attributable, directly or indirectly, to a "deliberate over-contribution" or a "prohibited investment" in respect of the TFSA or any other TFSA of the holder.

For more detail, readers may refer to the commentary on the new defined terms "deliberate over-contribution", "swap transaction" and "specified non-qualified investment income" that are being added to subsection 207.01(1). "Prohibited investment" is already defined in subsection 207.01(1); related rules are found in section 207.04.

Existing paragraph (c) of the definition "advantage" is renumbered as paragraph (d). At this time, it is not anticipated that any amendments will be made to the regulations to prescribe a benefit for the purpose of the definition "advantage".

Dept. of Finance news release 2009-099, Oct. 16, 2009 and Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: See under 207.01(1)"advantage"(b)(iii), (iv) above.

Regulations: No prescribed benefits yet for para. (d).

Related Provisions: 207.01(1)"specified distribution"(a)(i) — Distribution attributable to advantage is specified distribution; 207.04(6), (7) — Additional tax payable on prohibited investment before Oct. 16/09; 207.05 — Tax payable where advantage extended; 207.06(4) — CRA may notify TFSA holder that distribution required within 90 days.

History: Subparas. (a)(iii) and (iv) added to the definition "advantage" in subsec. 207.01(1) by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 68(2), applicable to 2009 et seq.

Para. (b) amended and para. (c) added to the definition "advantage" in subsec. 207.01(1) by the said c. 2, subsec. 68(3), applicable to 2009 et seq. Para. (b) formerly read:

"allowable refund" of a person for a calendar year means the total of all amounts each of which is a refund, for the year, to which the person is entitled under subsection 207.04(4).

Related Provisions: 207.07(2) — Refund payable by Minister; 207.05 — Tax payable where advantage extended.

Proposed Addition — 207.01(1) “deliberate over-contribution”

“deliberate over-contribution” of an individual means a contribution made under a TFSA by the individual that results in, or increases, an excess TFSA amount, unless it is reasonable to conclude that the individual neither knew nor ought to have known that the contribution could result in liability for a penalty, tax or similar consequence under this Act.

Related Provisions: 207.01(1) “advantage” (c)(i) — Benefit attributable to deliberate over-contribution is “advantage”.

Application: The April 30, 2010 draft legislation (TFSAs), subsec. 3(7), will add the definition “deliberate over-contribution” to subsec. 207.01(1), applicable to contributions made after October 16, 2009.

Technical Notes: Under this new definition, a “deliberate over-contribution” means any contribution made under a TFSA by the individual that results in, or increases, an “excess TFSA amount” unless it is reasonable to conclude that the individual neither knew nor ought to have known that the contribution could result in liability for a penalty, tax or similar consequence under this Act. Under the amended definition “advantage”, income that is reasonably attributable, directly or indirectly, to a “deliberate over-contribution” constitutes an advantage subject to the special tax on advantages under section 207.05. The new definition “deliberate over-contribution” is introduced in subsection 207.01(1).

Dept. of Finance news release 2009-099, Oct. 16, 2009 and Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: See under 207.01(1) “advantage” (b)(iii), (iv).

“excess TFSA amount” of an individual at a particular time in a calendar year means the amount, if any, determined by the formula

A is the total of all amounts each of which is a contribution made under a TFSA by the individual in the calendar year and at or before the particular time, other than a contribution that is

- (a) a qualifying transfer, or
- (b) an exempt contribution;

B is the individual’s unused TFSA contribution room at the end of the preceding calendar year;

C is the total of all amounts each of which was a distribution made in the preceding calendar year under a TFSA of which the individual was the holder at the time of the distribution, other than a distribution that is

- (a) a qualifying transfer, or
- (b) a prescribed distribution;

Proposed Amendment — 207.01(1) “excess TFSA amount” C(b)

Application: The April 30, 2010 draft legislation (TFSAs), subsec. 3(3), will amend para. (b) of the description of C in the definition “excess TFSA amount” in subsec. 207.01(1) to substitute “specified” for “prescribed”, applicable after October 16, 2009.

Technical Notes: The expression “excess TFSA amount” is relevant primarily for the special tax imposed under section 207.02 on excess TFSA contributions. It is also relevant for the purposes of paragraph 74.5(12)(c), subparagraph (d)(iii) of the definition “exempt contribution” in subsection 207.01(1), and subsection 207.01(3), which all depend on whether an individual has an excess TFSA amount at a particular time. For the purpose of applying these provisions, it is important to note that the inclusion of the words “if any” in the preamble of the existing definition indicates that an individual is not considered to have an “excess TFSA amount” where the amount determined by the formula in the definition is nil (either in fact or because of the application of section 257).

The amount of the tax under section 207.02 is determined on the basis of an individual’s highest “excess TFSA amount” in a particular month. “Excess TFSA amount” is determined by a formula. Amounts included in variable C of the formula result in a reduction of an individual’s “excess TFSA amount”. Variable C reflects distributions from the individual’s TFSA in the preceding year, subject to certain exclusions. Variable C is amended to replace the reference to the exclusion of a “prescribed distribution” with a reference to the new defined term “specified distribution”. As a result of this amendment, a distribution from a TFSA in the preceding year that is a “specified distribution” is not included in variable C and so cannot reduce an individual’s “excess TFSA amount”. For more detail, readers may refer to the commentary on the new defined term “specified distribution” that is being added to subsection 207.01(1).

Dept. of Finance news release 2009-099, Oct. 16, 2009 and Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: See under 207.01(1) “advantage” (b)(iii), (iv).

D is

- (a) the TFSA dollar limit for the calendar year if, at any time in the calendar year, the individual is resident in Canada, and
- (b) nil, in any other case; and

E is the total of all amounts each of which is the qualifying portion of a distribution made in the calendar year and at or before the particular time under a TFSA of which the individual was the holder at the time of the distribution and, for this purpose, the qualifying portion of a distribution is

- (a) nil, if the distribution is a qualifying transfer or a prescribed distribution, and

Proposed Amendment — 207.01(1) “excess TFSA amount” E(a)

Application: The April 30, 2010 draft legislation (TFSAs), subsec. 3(4), will amend para. (a) of the description of E in the definition “excess TFSA amount” in subsec. 207.01(1) to substitute “specified” for “prescribed”, applicable after October 16, 2009.

Technical Notes: Amounts included in Variable E of the formula result in a reduction of an individual’s “excess TFSA amount” for the qualifying portion of distributions from the individual’s TFSA in the year. The qualifying portion is described in paragraphs (a) and (b) of Variable E. Paragraph (a) is amended to specify that no amount of a “specified distribution” may be included in the qualifying portion of a distribution in the year under Variable E. A “specified distribution” in the year therefore cannot reduce an individual’s “excess TFSA amount”. For more detail, readers may refer to the commentary on the new defined term “specified distribution” that is being added to subsection 207.01(1).

Dept. of Finance news release 2009-099, Oct. 16, 2009 and Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: See under 207.01(1) “advantage” (b)(iii), (iv).

(b) in any other case, the lesser of

- (i) the amount of the distribution, and
- (ii) the amount that would be the individual’s excess TFSA amount at the time of the distribution if the amount of the distribution were nil.

Related Provisions: 207.01(1) — Definitions of “deliberate over-contribution”, “qualifying transfer” and “unused TFSA contribution room”; 207.02 — Tax on excess TFSA amount; 207.06(4) — CRA may notify TFSA holder that distribution of certain amounts required within 90 days.

History: The description of E in the definition “excess TFSA amount” in subsec. 207.01(1) amended by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 68(4), applicable to 2009 et seq. The description formerly read:

E is the total of all amounts each of which is a distribution made in the calendar year and at or before the particular time under a TFSA of which the individual was the holder at the time of the distribution, other than a distribution that is

- (a) a qualifying transfer, or
- (b) a prescribed distribution.

“exempt contribution” means a contribution made in a calendar year under a TFSA by the survivor of an individual if

- (a) the contribution is made during the period (in this definition referred to as the “rollover period”) that begins when the individual dies and that ends at the end of the first calendar year that begins after the individual dies (or at any later time that is acceptable to the Minister);
- (b) a payment (in this definition referred to as the “survivor payment”) was made to the survivor during the rollover period, as a consequence of the individual’s death, directly or indirectly out of or under an arrangement that ceased, because of the individual’s death, to be a TFSA;
- (c) the survivor designates, in prescribed form filed in prescribed manner within 30 days after the day on which the contribution is made, the contribution in relation to the survivor payment; and
- (d) the amount of the contribution does not exceed the least of
 - (i) the amount, if any, by which
 - (A) the amount of the survivor payment

exceeds

(B) the total of all other contributions designated by the survivor in relation to the survivor payment,

(ii) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total proceeds of disposition that would, if section 146.2 were read without reference to subsection 146.2(9), be determined in respect of the arrangement under paragraph 146.2(8)(a), (10)(a) or (11)(a), as the case may be,

exceeds

(B) the total of all other exempt contributions in respect of the arrangement made by the survivor at or before the time of the contribution, and

(iii) if the individual had, immediately before the individual's death, an excess TFSA amount or if payments described in paragraph (b) are made to more than one survivor of the individual, nil or the greater amount, if any, allowed by the Minister in respect of the contribution.

Related Provisions: 146.2(9) — Effect of death on TFSA; 207.01(3) — Survivor as successor holder.

History: The definition "exempt contribution" added to subsec. 207.01(1) by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 68(7), applicable to 2009 et seq.

"non-qualified investment" for a trust governed by a TFSA means property that is not a qualified investment for the trust.

Related Provisions: 146.2(6) — Tax on TFSA's income from non-qualified investment (NQI); 207.01(1) "prohibited investment", "qualified investment" — Definitions; 207.01(5) — Obligation of TFSA issuer; 207.04(1) — Tax on acquisition of NQI; 207.04(3) — Where NQI is also prohibited investment; 207.04(5) — Deemed disposition and reacquisition where property ceases to be NQI.

Regulations: 223(3) (notification to holder of non-qualified investments).

"prohibited investment", at any time, for a trust governed by a TFSA means property (other than prescribed property) that is at that time

(a) a debt of the holder of the TFSA;

(b) a share of the capital stock of, an interest in, or a debt of

(i) a corporation, partnership or trust in which the holder has a significant interest, or

(ii) a person or partnership that does not deal at arm's length with the holder or with a person or partnership described in subparagraph (i);

(c) an interest (or, for civil law, a right) in, or a right to acquire, a share, interest or debt described in paragraph (a) or (b); or

Related Provisions: 207.01(1) "advantage" (c)(ii) — Benefit attributable to prohibited investment is "advantage"; 207.01(1) "non-qualified investment"; 207.01(4) — Significant interest; 207.04(1), (6) — Tax on acquisition of prohibited investment (PI); 207.04(3) — Where PI is also non-qualified investment; 207.04(5) — Deemed disposition and reacquisition where property ceases to be PI.

History: The opening words of the definition "prohibited investment" in subsec. 207.01(1) amended by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 68(5), to substitute "property" for "property in relation to the trust", applicable to 2009 et seq.

Para. (d) of the definition amended by the said c. 2, subsec. 68(6), to substitute "prescribed" for "restricted", applicable to 2009 et seq.

Regulations: 5000 (prescribed property that is not prohibited, for opening words); 5001 (prescribed property for para. (d)).

"qualified investment" for a trust governed by a TFSA means

(a) an investment that would be described by any of paragraphs (a) to (d), (f) and (g) of the definition "qualified investment" in section 204 if the reference in that definition to "a trust governed by a deferred profit sharing plan or revoked plan" were read as a reference to "a trust governed by a TFSA" and if that definition were read without reference to the words "with the exception of excluded property in relation to the trust";

(b) a contract for an annuity issued by a licensed annuities provider if

(i) the trust is the only person who, disregarding any subsequent transfer of the contract by the trust, is or may become entitled to any annuity payments under the contract, and

(ii) the holder of the contract has a right to surrender the contract at any time for an amount that would, if reasonable sales and administration charges were ignored, approximate the value of funds that could otherwise be applied to fund future periodic payments under the contract; and

(c) a prescribed investment.

Related Provisions: 87(10) — New share issued on amalgamation of public corporation deemed listed; 132.2(1)(k) [to be repealed], 132.2(3)(h) [draft] — Where share ceases to be qualified investment due to mutual fund reorganization; 146.2(4) — Tax on TFSA's income from non-qualified investment; 207.01(5) — Obligation of TFSA issuer; 207.04 — Tax on acquisition of non-qualified investment.

Regulations: 221(2) (information return reporting that securities are qualified investments); 4900 (prescribed investments — and note 4900(14) specifically for TSFAs).

"qualifying transfer" means the transfer of an amount from a TFSA of which a particular individual is the holder if

(a) the amount is transferred directly to another TFSA, the holder of which is the particular individual; or

(b) the amount is transferred directly to another TFSA, the holder of which is a spouse or common-law partner or former spouse or common-law partner of the particular individual, and the following conditions are satisfied:

(i) the individuals are living separate and apart at the time of the transfer, and

(ii) the transfer is made under a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal, or under a written separation agreement, relating to a division of property between the individuals in settlement of rights arising out of, or on the breakdown of, their marriage or common-law partnership.

Related Provisions: 146.2(2)(e) — Transfer to another TFSA permitted; 207.01(1) "excess TFSA amount" A(a), C(a), E(a), 207.01(1) "unused TFSA contribution room" B(i), D(i) — Qualifying transfers ignored in determining contribution limit; 248(1) "disposition" (f)(vi) — Transfer from TFSA to TFSA is not a disposition; 252(3) — Extended meaning of "spouse".

"restricted property" — [Repealed]

History: The definition "restricted property" in subsec. 207.01(1) repealed by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 68(1), applicable to 2009 et seq. It formerly read:

"restricted property" has the meaning assigned by regulation.

Proposed Addition — 207.01(1) "specified distribution", "specified non-qualified investment income", "swap transaction"

"specified distribution" means

(a) a distribution made under a TFSA to the extent that it is, or is reasonably attributable to, an amount that is

(i) an advantage in respect of the TFSA or any other TFSA of the holder,

(ii) specified non-qualified investment income,

(iii) an amount in respect of which tax was payable under Part I by a trust governed by the TFSA or any other TFSA of the holder, or

(iv) an amount described in subparagraph 207.06(1)(b)(ii); or

(b) a prescribed distribution.

Technical Notes: Unlike regular distributions, under the amended definition "unused TFSA contribution room", "specified distributions" do not create or increase "unused TFSA contribution room". Similarly, unlike regular distributions, under the amended definition "excess TFSA amount", "specified distributions" do not reduce or eliminate an "excess TFSA amount". If specified distributions were not treated in this manner, amounts that gave rise to specified distributions would inappropriately increase a taxpayer's unused TFSA contribution room or inappropriately reduce the taxpayer's excess TFSA amounts.

The new definition "specified distribution" generally means a distribution from a TFSA that is reasonably attributable to certain TFSA amounts that are subject to taxes. In particular, a distribution of an amount attributable to any of

- an "advantage",
- "specified non-qualified investment income",
- income that is taxable in a TFSA trust under Part I of the Act (generally income earned from non-qualified investments or from a business carried on by the TFSA), or
- income earned on excess contributions or non-resident contributions.

The definition "specified distribution" also includes a "prescribed distribution". At this time, no distributions are prescribed by regulation.

Related Provisions: 207.01(1)"excess TFSA amount" C(b), E(a) — Specified distribution does not reduce excess TFSA amount; 207.01(1)"unused TFSA contribution room" (b) B(ii) — Specified distribution does not increase contribution room; 207.061 — Amount under "specified distribution" (a)(ii) included in TFSA holder's income.

Regulations: No prescribed distributions yet for para. (b).

"specified non-qualified investment income", in respect of a TFSA, means income (including a capital gain) that is reasonably attributable, directly or indirectly, to an amount in respect of which tax was payable under Part I by a trust governed by a TFSA or any other TFSA of the holder.

Technical Notes: Under the existing TFSA rules, income earned by a TFSA trust on non-qualified investments is subject to tax under Part I of the Act because of subsection 146.2(6). An additional tax based on the fair market value of the investment is also payable under subsection 207.04(2). However, there was no requirement that such income, or income earned on such income, be removed from a TFSA.

The new definition "specified non-qualified investment income" in respect of a TFSA generally means income that is reasonably attributable, directly or indirectly, to an amount that is taxable under Part I for a TFSA trust. For this purpose, income includes capital gains. Amounts that are taxable under Part I for a TFSA trust are generally income earned from non-qualified investments or from a business carried on by the TFSA. Therefore, the new definition "specified non-qualified investment income" refers to second and subsequent generation income earned on non-qualified investment income or on income from a business carried on by a TFSA.

"Specified non-qualified investment income" may be subject to a Ministerial requirement to remove it from a TFSA pursuant to new subsection 207.06(4). If it is not removed within 90 days of receipt of the requirement to remove, it will be considered an "advantage" in respect of the TFSA under the amended definition "advantage" and subject to the tax on advantages under section 207.05.

Related Provisions: 146.2(6) — When tax payable under Part I by TFSA; 207.01(1)"advantage" (b)(vi) — Benefit attributable to SNQII is "advantage" if not distributed after notice under 207.06(4); 207.01(1)"specified distribution" (a)(ii) — Distribution attributable to SNQII is specified distribution; 207.06(4) — CRA may notify TFSA holder that distribution of SNQII required within 90 days.

"swap transaction", in respect of a trust governed by a TFSA, means a transfer of property (other than a transfer that is a distribution or a contribution) occurring between the trust and the holder of the TFSA or a person with whom the holder does not deal at arm's length.

Technical Notes: Under the amended definition "advantage", an increase in fair market value of property held in connection with a TFSA that is reasonably attributable to a "swap transaction" is an "advantage" and subject to the tax on advantages under section 207.05.

The new definition "swap transaction", in relation to a TFSA trust, generally means any transfer of property occurring between the trust and the holder of the TFSA or a person with whom the holder does not deal at arm's length, other than a transfer that is a distribution from, or a contribution to, a TFSA trust.

Related Provisions: 207.01(1)"advantage" (b)(iii) — Benefit attributable to swap transaction is "advantage".

Application: The April 30, 2010 draft legislation (TFSA's), subsec. 3(7), will add the definitions "specified distribution", "specified non-qualified investment income" and "swap transaction" to subsec. 207.01(1).

(a) "specified distribution" applicable to distributions that occur after October 16, 2009, other than the portion of a distribution that is, or is reasonably attributable to, an advantage that was extended, or income earned, before October 17, 2009;

(b) "specified non-qualified investment income" applicable to 2010 et seq.; and

(c) "swap transaction" applicable to transfers of property that occur after October 16, 2009.

Dept. of Finance news release 2009-099, Oct. 16, 2009 and Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: See under 207.01(1)"advantage" (b)(iii), (iv).

"TFSA dollar limit" for a calendar year means,

(a) for 2009, $5,000; and

(b) for each year after 2009, the amount (rounded to the nearest multiple of $500, or if that amount is equidistant from two such consecutive multiples, to the higher multiple) that is equal to $5,000 adjusted for each year after 2009 in the manner set out in section 117.1.

Related Provisions: 207.01(1)"excess TFSA amount" D(a) — Effect of contributions that exceed dollar limit.

"unused TFSA contribution room" of an individual at the end of a calendar year means,

(a) if the year is before 2009, nil; and

Proposed Addition — 207.01(1)"unused TFSA contribution room" (a.1)

(a.1) in circumstances where the Minister has, in accordance with section 207.06, waived or cancelled all or part of the liability imposed on the individual, the amount determined by the Minister; and

Application: The April 30, 2010 draft legislation (TFSA's), subsec. 3(5), will add para. (a.1) to the definition "unused TFSA contribution room" in subsec. 207.01(1), applicable after October 16, 2009.

Technical Notes: An individual's "unused TFSA contribution room" is used to determine how much an individual may contribute to a TFSA. Under the existing definition, an individual's "unused TFSA contribution room" (at the end of a particular calendar year after 2008) is the amount, which can be positive or negative, determined by the formula

where

A is the individual's "unused TFSA contribution room" at the end of the year preceding the particular year;

B is the total amount of distributions made in that preceding year under TFSA's of the individual, but excluding qualifying transfers and prescribed distributions;

C is the TFSA dollar limit for the particular year if, at any time in the particular year, the individual is at least 18 years of age and resident in Canada. If the individual is under 18 years old, or is non-resident, throughout the year, the C amount is nil; and

D is the total of all TFSA contributions made by the individual in the particular year, but excluding contributions made by way of a qualifying transfer or an exempt contribution.

The definition "unused TFSA contribution room" is amended in two respects. First, new paragraph (a.1) provides that, where the Minister of National Revenue has waived or cancelled all or part of an individual's liability under sections 207.02, 207.03, 207.04 or 207.05 (respectively, taxes on excess TFSA amounts, non-resident contributions, prohibited or non-qualified investments, and advantages) an individual's "unused TFSA contribution room" will be the amount determined by the Minister of National Revenue. In these circumstances, the formula will not be used to calculate "unused TFSA contribution room". This will allow the particular circumstances that gave rise to the special tax, the steps taken by the individual to address the situation, and the conditions surrounding the waiver to be properly taken into consideration in re-setting the individual's "unused TFSA contribution room".

Dept. of Finance news release 2009-099, Oct. 16, 2009 and Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: See under 207.01(1)"advantage" (b)(iii), (iv).

(b) in any other case, the positive or negative amount determined by the formula

where

A is the individual's unused TFSA contribution room at the end of the preceding calendar year,

B is the total of all amounts each of which was a distribution made in the preceding calendar year under a TFSA of which the individual was the holder at the time of the distribution, other than a distribution that is

(i) a qualifying transfer, or

(ii) a prescribed distribution,

Proposed Amendment — 207.01(1)“unused TFSA contribution room”(b)B(ii)

Application: The April 30, 2010 draft legislation (TFSAAs), subsec. 3(6), will amend subpara. (ii) of the description of B in para. (b) of the definition “unused TFSA contribution room” in subsec. 207.01(1) to substitute “specified” for “prescribed”, applicable after October 16, 2009.

Technical Notes: Second, the reference to a “prescribed distribution” in subparagraph (ii) of the description of variable B in the definition is replaced by a reference to a “specified distribution” consequential on the introduction of that new definition. For more detail, readers may refer to the commentary on the new defined term “specified distribution” that is being added to subsection 207.01(1).

Dept. of Finance news release 2009-099, Oct. 16, 2009 and Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: See under 207.01(1)“advantage”(b)(iii), (iv).

C is

- (i) the TFSA dollar limit for the calendar year, if at any time in the calendar year the individual is 18 years of age or older and resident in Canada, and
- (ii) nil, in any other case, and

D is the total of all amounts each of which is a contribution made under a TFSA by the individual in the calendar year, other than a contribution that is

- (i) a qualifying transfer, or
- (ii) an exempt contribution.

Proposed Administrative Relief — TFSA penalties

CRA/Finance news release, June 25, 2010: Joint Ministerial Statement Concerning Tax-Free Savings Accounts

The Honourable Keith Ashfield, Minister of National Revenue, and the Honourable Jim Flaherty, Minister of Finance, issued the following statement today:

The Government of Canada would like to provide an update on the recent administrative concerns expressed by some Canadians regarding the Tax Free Savings Account (TFSA).

2009 was the first year of the program and the response to the TFSA has been overwhelmingly positive. Approximately 4.7 million Canadians have taken out a TFSA since the program was initiated.

Our government recognizes that there was some genuine confusion about the rules for the TFSA in the first year. We understand that it may take time for some Canadians to learn about the program and for some financial institutions to properly inform their clients about this product.

The Government of Canada confirms that for the 2009 filing year, the first year of the program, we have taken the decision to be as flexible as possible in cases where a genuine misunderstanding of the TFSA contribution rules occurred. Our intention is to review each situation on a case-by-case basis and, where appropriate, waive taxes on excess contributions for this year.

For instance, individuals who used their TFSA as a regular banking account in 2009, making deposits and withdrawals on a frequent basis, or who have transferred funds between TFSAs at different institutions, but whose net contributions never exceeded the 2009 limit of $5000, may not be required to pay the tax on excess contributions for this year.

Of the nearly 4.7 million Canadians who have a TFSA, less than 2% (70,000) have recently received a letter from the Canada Revenue Agency asking to provide further information about their accounts before June 30, 2010. We have decided to extend this deadline from June 30 to August 3, 2010, to allow ample time for Canadians to provide the necessary information about their accounts.

If you received a TFSA return letter:

- You are encouraged to respond to the CRA letter by providing additional information or explanations that you may have in respect of your over-contributions.
- If no additional information is provided or you do not contact the CRA, a notice of assessment will be issued. Only at that time should you use the request for taxpayer relief form or a formal notice of objection.

If you have questions about your TFSA, you are encouraged to contact the CRA at 1-800-959-8281 or visit our Web site at: www.cra-arc.gc.ca.

- (a) the first time after the particular time at which the amount of the contribution is equalled or exceeded by the total of all amounts each of which is a distribution

Proposed Repeal — 207.04(6), (7)

Application: The April 30, 2010 draft legislation (TFSAs), s. 4, will repeal subssecs. 207.04(6) and (7), applicable after October 16, 2009.

Technical Notes: Existing subsections 207.04(6) and (7) impose a special tax in relation to "prohibited investments". Subsections 207.04(6) and (7) are repealed, consequential on the amendments to the definition "advantage" which result in income earned on prohibited investments being subject to the tax on advantages under section 207.05.

Dept. of Finance news release 2009-099, Oct. 16, 2009 and Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: See under 207.01(1) "advantage" (b)(iii), (iv).

History: The opening words of subsec. 207.04(7) amended to substitute "is 150% of the amount" for "is the amount", and para. 207.04(7)(a) amended to substitute "146.2(6)" for "146.2(4)", by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 70(2), applicable to 2009 et seq.

207.05 (1) Tax payable where advantage extended — A tax is payable under this Part for a calendar year in connection with a TFSA if, in the year, an advantage in relation to the TFSA is extended to a person who is, or who does not deal at arm's length with, the holder of the TFSA.

Proposed Amendment — 207.05(1)

(1) Tax payable in respect of an advantage — A tax is payable under this Part for a calendar year if, in the year, an advantage in relation to a TFSA is extended to, or is received or receivable by, a holder of the TFSA, a trust governed by the TFSA, or any other person who does not deal at arm's length with the holder of the TFSA.

Application: The April 30, 2010 draft legislation (TFSAs), s. 5, will amend subsec. 207.05(1) to read as above, applicable after October 16, 2009.

Technical Notes: Existing subsection 207.05(1) imposes a tax for a calendar year if, in the year, an advantage (defined in subsection 207.01(1)) in relation to a TFSA is extended to any person who is, or who does not deal at arm's length with, the holder of the TFSA. Subsection 207.05(1) is amended to expand the description of the manner in which an advantage may be acquired, and the list of possible recipients. Amended subsection 207.05(1) imposes a tax if an advantage is "extended to, or received or receivable by" any of a TFSA holder, the TFSA itself, or any other person who does not deal at arm's length with the TFSA holder. These amendments are consequential on the October 16, 2009 Department of Finance announcement of proposed changes to the TFSA rules, which have broadened the "advantage" concept.

Dept. of Finance news release 2009-099, Oct. 16, 2009 and Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: See under 207.01(1) "advantage" (b)(iii), (iv).

Related Provisions: 207.05(2) — Amount of tax; 207.05(3) — Who liable for tax; 207.06(2) — Minister may waive tax; 207.07 — Return and payment of tax.

(2) Amount of tax payable — The amount of tax payable in respect of an advantage described in subsection (1) is

- (a) in the case of a benefit, the fair market value of the benefit; and
- (b) in the case of a loan or an indebtedness, the amount of the loan or indebtedness.

Related Provisions: 207.062 — Tax reduced by amount payable under 207.02 or 207.03 for same contribution.

(3) Liability for tax — The holder of a TFSA in connection with which a tax is imposed under subsection (1) is liable to pay the tax except that, if the advantage is extended by the issuer of the TFSA or by a person with whom the issuer is not dealing at arm's length, the issuer, and not the holder, is liable to pay the tax.

Related Provisions: 207.06(3) — Limitation on waiver of liability under 207.05(3).

History: S. 207.05 added by 2008, c. 28, s. 31, applicable to 2009 et seq.

Definitions [s. 207.05]: "advantage" — 207.01(1); "amount" — 248(1); "arm's length" — 251(1); "calendar year" — Interpretation Act 37(1)(a); "holder", "issuer" — 146.2(1); "person" — 248(1); "TFSA" — 146.2(5), 248(1).

207.06 (1) Waiver of tax payable — If an individual would otherwise be liable to pay a tax under this Part because of section 207.02 or 207.03, the Minister may waive or cancel all or part of the liability if

- (a) the individual establishes to the satisfaction of the Minister that the liability arose as a consequence of a reasonable error; and
- (b) the individual acts without delay to cause one or more distributions to be made, under one or more TFSAs, the total amount of which is not less than the amount in respect of which the individual would otherwise be liable to pay the tax.

Proposed Amendment — 207.06(1)(b)

(b) one or more distributions are made without delay under a TFSA of which the individual is the holder, the total amount of which is not less than the total of

- (i) the amount in respect of which the individual would otherwise be liable to pay the tax, and
- (ii) income (including a capital gain) that is reasonably attributable, directly or indirectly, to the amount described in subparagraph (i).

Application: The April 30, 2010 draft legislation (TFSAs), subsec. 6(1), will amend para. 207.06(1)(b) to read as above, applicable after October 16, 2009.

Technical Notes: Subsection 207.06(1) provides the Minister of National Revenue with the authority to waive taxes payable under section 207.02 (tax on excess TFSA amount) or 207.03 (tax on non-resident TFSA contributions) under certain conditions. In this regard, paragraph (b) contains a condition requiring the removal from a TFSA of the amount that gave rise to the tax under section 207.02 or 207.03. Paragraph (b) is amended, consequential on the October 16, 2009 Department of Finance announcement of proposed TFSA changes, to also require the removal of any income earned on the excess TFSA contribution, or the non-resident TFSA contribution, as the case may be. Paragraph (b) is also amended to clarify that, as long as the required distributions are made without delay, it is not material whether or not they were made through the action of the individual TFSA holder. For example, an over-contribution could be discovered by a financial institution, with steps taken to address it at that time.

Dept. of Finance news release 2009-099, Oct. 16, 2009 and Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: See under 207.01(1) "advantage" (b)(iii), (iv).

Related Provisions: 207.01(1) "specified distribution" (a)(iv) — Amount in 207.06(1)(b)(ii) is a specified distribution; 207.01(1) "unused TFSA contribution room" (a.1) — CRA determines unused contribution room after waiver; 207.061 — Amount under 207.06(1)(b)(ii) included in TFSA holder's income.

(2) Waiver of tax payable — If a person would otherwise be liable to pay a tax under this Part because of subsection 207.04(1) or section 207.05, the Minister may waive or cancel all or part of the liability where the Minister considers it just and equitable to do so having regard to all the circumstances, including

- (a) whether the tax arose as a consequence of reasonable error; and
- (b) the extent to which the transaction that gave rise to the tax also gave rise to another tax under this Part.

Related Provisions: 207.01(1) "unused TFSA contribution room" (a.1) — CRA determines unused contribution room after waiver.

History: The opening words of subsec. 207.06(2) amended to substitute "subsection 207.04(1) or section 207.05" for "section 207.04 or 207.05" by 2009, c. 2, s. 71, applicable to 2009 et seq.

Proposed Addition — 207.06(3), (4)

(3) Waiver of tax payable — advantage — The Minister shall not waive or cancel a liability imposed under subsection 207.05(3) on an individual unless one or more distributions are made without delay under a TFSA of which the individual is the holder, the total amount of which is not less than the amount of the liability waived or cancelled.

Technical Notes: New subsection 207.06(3) imposes conditions that must be satisfied if the Minister of National Revenue intends to waive or cancel a liability for tax under subsection 207.05(3). Subsection 207.05(3) imposes liability for taxes on advantages. Under new subsection 207.06(3), the Minister shall not waive or cancel such a liability unless one or more distributions are made without delay from the relevant TFSA or FSAs, the total amount of which is equal to or greater than the amount of the liability being waived or cancelled.

Related Provisions: 207.061 — Amount under 207.06(3) included in TFSA holder's income.

(4) Other powers of Minister — The Minister may notify the holder of a TFSA that the holder must cause a distribution to be made under the TFSA within 90 days of receipt of the notice, the amount of which is not less than the amount of the specified non-qualified investment income.

Technical Notes: New subsection 207.06(4) allows the Minister of National Revenue to issue a notice requiring a TFSA holder to remove "specified non-qualified investment income" (as defined in subsection 207.01(1)) from his or her TFSA within 90 days. Failure to comply with this requirement will result in the amount of the "specified non-qualified investment income" being considered an "advantage" and subject to the special tax on advantages under section 207.05. For more information, please refer to the commentary on those definitions.

Application: The April 30, 2010 draft legislation (TFASAs), subsec. 6(2), will add subsecs. 207.06(3) and (4), applicable after October 16, 2009.

Dept. of Finance news release 2009-099, Oct. 16, 2009 and Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: See under 207.01(1) "advantage" (b)(iii), (iv).

Related Provisions: 207.01(1) "advantage" (b)(iv) — Benefit constitutes "advantage" if certain amounts not distributed after notice.

Definitions [s. 207.06]: "amount", "individual", "Minister", "person" — 248(1); "TFSA" — 146.2(5), 248(1).

Proposed Addition — 207.061, 207.062

207.061 Income inclusion — A holder of a TFSA shall include in computing the holder's income for a taxation year under Part I the total of all amounts each of which is the portion of a distribution made in the year that is described in

- (a) subparagraph 207.06(1)(b)(ii);
- (b) subsection 207.06(3); or
- (c) subparagraph (a)(ii) of the definition "specified distribution".

Technical Notes: New section 207.061 requires a holder of a TFSA to include in computing the holder's income certain TFSA distributions of amounts related to transactions that are subject to tax under Part XI.01. These amounts are amounts described in

- (a) subparagraph 207.06(1)(b)(ii) (income earned on excess TFSA contributions or non-resident TFSA contributions);
- (b) subsection 207.06(3) (distributions required in relation to the waiver or cancellation of a tax on an advantage); or
- (c) subparagraph (a)(ii) of the definition "specified distribution" (generally, first or subsequent generation income in respect of non-qualified investments for a TFSA).

Related Provisions: 12(1)(2.5) — Inclusion in holder's income from property under Part I.

Definitions [s. 207.061]: "amount" — 248(1); "distribution", "holder" — 146.2(1); "taxation year" — 249; "TFSA" — 146.2(5), 248(1).

207.062 Special limit on tax payable — If an individual is liable to pay an amount of tax under section 207.05 and under sections 207.02 or 207.03 in respect of the same contribution for the same calendar year, the tax payable under section 207.05 for the year shall be reduced by the amount of the tax payable under section 207.02 or 207.03, as the case may be, for the year.

PART XII.2 — TAX ON DESIGNATED INCOME OF CERTAIN TRUSTS

210. Designated beneficiary — In this Part, a "designated beneficiary" under a trust at any time means a beneficiary under the trust that was, at that time,

(a) a non-resident person;

(b) a non-resident-owned investment corporation;

(c) a person exempt from tax under Part I by reason of subsection 149(1), where that person acquired an interest in the trust after October 1, 1987 directly or indirectly from a beneficiary under the trust except

(i) where the interest was owned continuously since October 1, 1987 or the date on which the interest was created, whichever is later, by persons exempt from tax under Part I by reason of subsection 149(1), or

(ii) where the person was a trust governed by

(A) a registered retirement savings plan, or

(B) a registered retirement income fund, and acquired the interest, directly or indirectly, from an individual or the spouse or common-law partner or former spouse or common-law partner of the individual who was, immediately after the interest was acquired, a beneficiary under the trust governed by the fund or plan;

(d) a trust resident in Canada (other than a testamentary trust, a mutual fund trust or a trust exempt, because of subsection 149(1), from tax under Part I on all or part of its taxable income), if

- (i) a person described in paragraph (a), (b) or (c),
- (ii) a partnership described in paragraph (e), or
- (iii) a trust (other than a trust resident in Canada that is a testamentary trust) is, at that time, a beneficiary thereunder; or

(e) a partnership, if a person described in paragraph (a), (b) or (d), a partnership or a person exempt from tax under Part I by reason of subsection 149(1) is, at that time, a member thereof.

Proposed Amendment — 210

210. (1) Definitions — The following definitions apply in this Part.

“designated beneficiary”, under a particular trust at any time, means a beneficiary, under the particular trust, who is at that time

- (a) a non-resident person;
- (b) a non-resident-owned investment corporation;
- (c) a person who is, because of subsection 149(1), exempt from tax under Part I on all or part of their taxable income and who acquired an interest as a beneficiary under the particular trust after October 1, 1987 directly or indirectly from a beneficiary under the particular trust except if

(i) the interest was, at all times after the later of October 1, 1987 and the day on which the interest was created, held by persons who were exempt from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income because of subsection 149(1), or

(ii) the person is a trust, governed by a registered retirement savings plan or a registered retirement income fund, who acquired the interest, directly or indirectly, from an individual or the spouse or common-law partner, or former spouse or common-law partner, of the individual who was, immediately after the interest was acquired, a beneficiary under the trust governed by the fund or plan;

(d) another trust (referred to in this paragraph as the “other trust”) that is not a testamentary trust, a mutual fund trust or a trust that is exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all or part of its taxable income, if any beneficiary under the other trust is at that time

- (i) a non-resident person,
- (ii) a non-resident-owned investment corporation,
- (iii) a trust that is not
 - (A) a testamentary trust,
 - (B) a mutual fund trust,
 - (C) a trust that is exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all or part of its taxable income, or
 - (D) a trust
 - (I) whose interest, at that time, in the other trust was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, either by it or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income, and
 - (II) none of the beneficiaries under which is, at that time, a designated beneficiary under it, or
- (iv) a person or partnership that
 - (A) is a designated beneficiary under the other trust because of paragraph (c) or (e), or
 - (B) would be a designated beneficiary under the particular trust because of paragraph (c) or (e) if, instead of being a beneficiary under the other trust, the person or partnership were at that time a beneficiary, under the particular trust, whose interest as a beneficiary under the particular trust were

(I) identical to its interest (referred to in this clause as the “particular interest”) as a beneficiary under the other trust,

(II) acquired from each person or partnership from whom it acquired the particular interest, and

(III) held, at all times after the later of October 1, 1987 and the day on which the particular interest was created, by the same persons or partnerships that held the particular interest at those times; or

(e) a particular partnership any of the members of which is at that time

- (i) another partnership, except if
 - (A) each such other partnership is a Canadian partnership,
 - (B) the interest of each such other partnership in the particular partnership is held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by the other partnership or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income,
 - (C) the interest of each member, of each such other partnership, that is a person exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all or part of its taxable income was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by that member or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income, and
 - (D) the interest of the particular partnership in the particular trust was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by the particular partnership or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income,
- (ii) a non-resident person,
- (iii) a non-resident-owned investment corporation,
- (iv) another trust that is, under paragraph (d), a designated beneficiary of the particular trust or that would, under paragraph (d), be a designated beneficiary of the particular trust if the other trust were at that time a beneficiary under the particular trust whose interest as a beneficiary under the particular trust were
 - (A) acquired from each person or partnership from whom the particular partnership acquired its interest as a beneficiary under the particular trust, and
 - (B) held, at all times after the later of October 1, 1987 and the day on which the particular partnership's interest as a beneficiary under the particular trust was created, by the same persons or partnerships that held that interest of the particular partnership at those times, or
- (v) a person exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all or part of its taxable income except if the interest of the particular partnership in the particular trust was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by the particular partnership or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income.

Technical Notes: Section 210 is amended so that a number of definitions that apply for the purposes of Part XII.2 are now found in new subsection 210(1). In addition, new subsection 210(2) replaces section 210.1, which is being repealed.

New subsection 210(1) contains the definitions “designated beneficiary” (previously found in section) and “designated income” (previously found in subsection 210.2(2)). These definitions apply in Part XII.2.

Under paragraphs (a) and (b) of the definition “designated beneficiary”, a designated beneficiary includes, respectively, a non-resident person and a non-resident-owned investment corporation. Under paragraph (c) of the definition, a person exempt from tax under Part I is treated as a designated beneficiary because of owning an interest in a trust (acquired from a beneficiary under the trust) unless, generally speaking, no taxable entity previously owned that interest. Under paragraph (d) of the definition, a trust is a designated beneficiary of another trust if a beneficiary of the trust includes, generally, either a person or partnership described in any of paragraphs (a), (b), (c) or (e) of the definition or another trust (other than a testamentary trust resident in Canada). Under paragraph (e) of the definition, a partnership is a designated beneficiary of a trust if a member of the partnership is a person described in paragraph (a), (b) or (d) of the definition, another partnership or a person exempt from tax under Part I by reason of subsection 149(1) of the Act.

The opening words of the definition "designated beneficiary" are amended so that the references in the definition to a "trust" under which there may be a designated beneficiary are references to a "particular trust".

Paragraph (c) of the definition "designated beneficiary" is amended to clarify that a designated beneficiary of a particular trust includes, except as provided in subparagraphs (c)(i) and (ii) of the definition, a person who is, because of subsection 149(1), exempt from tax under Part I on all or part of their taxable income and who acquired an interest in the particular trust after October 1, 1987 directly or indirectly from a beneficiary under the particular trust.

Paragraph (d) of the definition "designated beneficiary" is amended so that a designated beneficiary of a particular trust includes another trust (in this commentary referred to as the "other trust") having as a beneficiary any one of the following persons or partnerships:

- under subparagraphs (d)(i) and (ii) of the definition, a non-resident person (including a trust) or a non-resident-owned investment corporation;
- under subparagraphs (d)(iii) of the definition, any trust, other than
 - a testamentary trust (however, note that if the testamentary trust were non-resident, the other trust would be treated as a designated beneficiary of the particular trust because of subparagraph (d)(ii),
 - a mutual fund trust,
 - a trust that is exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all or part of its taxable income (however, note that under subparagraph (d)(iv), described below, such a trust may cause the other trust to be a designated beneficiary of the particular trust), and
 - a trust none of the beneficiaries under which is, at that time, a designated beneficiary under it and whose interest, at that time, in the other trust was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, either by it or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income;
- under subparagraph (d)(iv) of the definition, a person (including a trust) or partnership that
 - is a designated beneficiary under the other trust because of paragraph (c) of the definition (i.e., a person who is, because of subsection 149(1), exempt from tax under Part I on all or part of their taxable income and who acquired an interest in the particular trust after October 1, 1987 directly or indirectly from a beneficiary under the particular trust) or because of paragraph (e) of the definition, or
 - would, based on the assumptions set out in clause (d)(iv)(B), be a designated beneficiary under the particular trust because of paragraph (c) or (e) of the definition.

Note that a person or partnership that is a beneficiary of the other trust need only be described in any of one of subparagraphs (d)(i) to (iv) in order for the other trust to be a designated beneficiary of the particular trust. Note also that references in paragraph (d) of the definition to the expression "resident in Canada" are removed as these are unnecessary given that paragraph (a) of the definition provides that a non-resident person is a designated beneficiary.

Paragraph (d) of the definition is also amended to provide that the other trust will not be treated, under that paragraph, as a designated beneficiary of the particular trust if it is a testamentary trust, a mutual fund trust, or a trust that is exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all or part of its taxable income. However, these excluded trusts may be treated as designated beneficiaries of the particular trust under paragraphs (a) or (c) of that definition (e.g., a non-resident testamentary trust).

Amended paragraph (e) of the definition provides, in new subparagraph (e)(i), that a designated beneficiary of a particular trust includes a particular partnership any of the members of which is another partnership. However, no such other partnership will cause the particular partnership to be a designated beneficiary under the particular partnership if

- all such other partnerships are Canadian partnerships (as defined in subsection 102(1) of the Act),
- the interest of each such other partnership in the particular partnership is held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by the other partnership or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income,
- the interest of each member, of each such other partnership, that is a person exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all or part of its taxable income was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by that member or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income, and

- the particular partnership's beneficial interest in the particular trust is held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by the particular partnership or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income.

Under subparagraphs (e)(ii) to (iv), a particular partnership will be a designated beneficiary under a particular trust if any one of the partnership's members is a non-resident person, a non-resident-owned investment corporation, or a specified person. For this purpose, a specified person means a trust that is a designated beneficiary of the particular trust because of paragraph (d) of the definition or a trust that would be such a designated beneficiary on the following assumptions: the other trust were at that time a beneficiary under the particular trust whose interest as a beneficiary under the particular trust were

- acquired from each person or partnership from whom the particular partnership acquired its interest as a beneficiary under the particular trust, and
- held at all times after the later of October 1, 1987 and the day on which the particular partnership's interest as a beneficiary under the particular trust was created, by the same persons or partnerships that held at those times that interest of the particular partnership.

New subparagraph (e)(v) of the definition provides that a particular partnership will be a designated beneficiary of a particular trust if any of the members of the particular partnership is a person exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all or part of its taxable income, unless the interest of the particular partnership in the particular trust was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by the particular partnership or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income.

Note that, for the purposes of the definition "designated beneficiary", a new rule in section 132.2 applies in respect of certain trust units acquired by a beneficiary under a "qualifying exchange" (as defined in subsection 132.2(1)). For more detail, see the commentary on section 132.2.

"designated income", of a trust for a taxation year, means the amount that would be the income of the trust for the year determined under section 3 if

- (a) this Act were read without reference to subsections 104(6), (12) and (30);
- (b) the trust had no income other than taxable capital gains from dispositions described in paragraph (c) and incomes from
 - (i) real or immovable properties in Canada (other than Canadian resource properties),
 - (ii) timber resource properties,
 - (iii) Canadian resource properties (other than properties acquired by the trust before 1972), and
 - (iv) businesses carried on in Canada;
- (c) the only taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses referred to in paragraph 3(b) were from
 - (i) dispositions of taxable Canadian property, and
 - (ii) dispositions of particular property (other than property described in any of subparagraphs 128.1(4)(b)(i) to (iii)), or property for which the particular property is substituted, that was transferred at any particular time to a particular trust in circumstances in which subsection 73(1) or 107.4(3) applied, if

(A) it is reasonable to conclude that the property was so transferred in anticipation that a person beneficially interested at the particular time in the particular trust would subsequently cease to reside in Canada, and a person beneficially interested at the particular time in the particular trust did subsequently cease to reside in Canada, or

(B) when the property was so transferred, the terms of the particular trust satisfied the conditions in subparagraph 73(1.01)(c)(i) or (iii), and it is reasonable to conclude that the transfer was made in connection with the cessation of residence, on or before the transfer, of a person who was, at the time of the transfer, beneficially interested in the particular trust and a spouse or common-law partner, as the case may be, of the transferor of the property to the particular trust; and

(d) the only losses referred to in paragraph 3(d) were losses from sources described in any of subparagraphs (b)(i) to (iv).

Technical Notes: The tax under Part XII.2 is calculated by reference to a trust's "designated income" (as determined under subsection 210.2(2)).

Subsection 210.2(2) is being replaced (for more detail, see the commentary below) and the definition "designated income" is now found in subsection 210(1) of the Act.

Paragraphs (a), (b) and (d) of the new definition "designated income" in subsection 210(1) are largely unchanged from the equivalent provisions found in repealed subsection 210.2(2).

Paragraph (c) of the new definition replaces paragraph 210.2(2)(b). Under subparagraph (c)(i), designated income is calculated by reference to taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses from dispositions of the trust's taxable Canadian property. Subparagraph (c)(ii) provides that a trust's designated income is also calculated by reference to taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses from a disposition by the trust of particular property (other than property described in any of subparagraphs 128.1(4)(b)(i) to (iii) of the Act).

In this context, particular property (or property for which the particular property is a substitute) must be property (referred to in this commentary as the "transferred property") that was transferred to a particular trust in circumstances in which subsection 73(1) or 107.4(3) applied. This condition will be met whether the particular trust is the trust in respect of which the designated income is being determined, or any other trust to which the transferred property was transferred in circumstances in which subsection 73(1) or 107.4(3) applied and that subsequently transferred, directly or indirectly, the property to the trust in respect of which the designated income is being determined.

In addition, clauses (c)(ii)(A) and (B) of the definition require

- that it be reasonable to conclude that the transferred property was, at a particular time, transferred to the particular trust in anticipation of the emigration of a person beneficially interested at the particular time in the particular trust and that a person (whether the anticipated person or another) beneficially interested at that time in the particular trust subsequently ceases to reside in Canada, or
- at the particular time that the transferred property was transferred to the particular trust, that the terms of the particular trust satisfy the conditions in subparagraph 73(1.01)(c)(i) or (iii) and that it be reasonable to conclude that the transfer was made in connection with the cessation of residence, on or before that time, of a person who was, at that time, beneficially interested in the particular trust and a spouse or common-law partner, as the case may be, of the transferor of the transferred property to the particular trust.

These amendments generally apply for the 1996 and subsequent taxation years. Subparagraph (c)(ii) of the definition as described above applies, in effect, to dispositions of property by a trust, that occur after December 20, 2002.

Related Provisions: 248(5) — Substituted property.

(2) Tax not payable — No tax is payable under this Part for a taxation year by a trust that was throughout the year

- (a) a testamentary trust;
- (b) a mutual fund trust;
- (c) exempt from tax under Part I because of subsection 149(1);
- (d) a trust to which paragraph (a), (a.1) or (c) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1) applies; or
- (e) non-resident.

Technical Notes: Section 210.1 provides a list of types of trusts to which Part XII.2 does not apply.

Section 210.1 is being repealed. The list of types of trusts to which Part XII.2 does not apply is now found in new subsection 210(2). New subsection 210(2), consequential on the amendments to the definition "designated beneficiary" (described in the commentary above), also clarifies that it applies only to determine to which trusts the special Part XII.2 tax does not apply. Subsection 210(2) does not apply, for example, to determine whether a trust referred to in that subsection may have a designated beneficiary.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), s. 175, will amend s. 210 to read as above, applicable to 1996 et seq. except that para. (c) of the definition "designated income" in subsec. 210(1), as amended, is to be read

- (a) in respect of dispositions that occur after October 1, 1996 and before December 21, 2002, as follows:

(c) the only taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses referred to in paragraph 3(b) were from dispositions of taxable Canadian property; and;

and

- (b) in respect of dispositions that occur in a 1996 taxation year and before October 2, 1996, as follows:

(c) the only taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses referred to in paragraph 3(b) were from dispositions of property that would have been taxable Canadian property if, at no time in the year, the trust had been resident in Canada; and.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 11, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of April 11, 2003, concerning the proposed definition "designated beneficiary" in Part XII.2 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"), contained in the legislative proposals relating to income tax released by the Finance Minister on December 20, 2002. I would also like to acknowledge our meeting of May 13, 2003 and your subsequent discussions with Mr. Grant Nash of this Division.

As you know, Part XII.2 of the Act seeks to avoid the minimization of tax on specified Canadian-source income earned by non-residents through a Canadian-resident trust. Part XII.2 is also intended to discourage arrangements between taxable and tax-exempt beneficiaries designed to allow taxable income earned by a trust to be flowed through to tax-exempt beneficiaries after the acquisition of the trust unit by the tax-exempt beneficiary from the taxable beneficiary. Part XII.2, therefore, plays an important role in protecting the Canadian tax base and ensuring that taxpayers that use trust intermediaries to hold property do not obtain income advantages that are not available to taxpayers that hold such property directly.

Part XII.2 tax is levied at the trust level, but generally is payable only where a trust has a "designated beneficiary". Under the proposed definition "designated beneficiary" contained in the legislative proposals, a designated beneficiary under a particular trust would include a particular partnership if any member of the particular partnership were another partnership. In your letter, you are seeking a modification to that definition so that the particular partnership would not be treated as a designated beneficiary of the trust if it were a Canadian partnership the membership interests in which trade on a prescribed stock exchange.

We have considered the arrangement that you have identified and a number of other arrangements involving partnerships that invest directly, or indirectly through other partnerships, in trusts. In light of these deliberations, we are prepared to recommend modifications to the definition "designated beneficiary", but we are of the view that in dealing with partnership arrangements under Part XII.2 it is appropriate that partnerships be required to ascertain the characteristics of their members in order for a partnership to avoid characterization as a designated beneficiary under a trust. Accordingly, the modifications that we would support in this context would be narrower than those that you proposed.

In particular, a particular partnership that is a beneficiary of a trust will continue to be treated as a designated beneficiary under the trust if any of its members is another partnership. However, we will recommend that any such other partnership, that is a member of the particular partnership, will not cause the particular partnership to be a designated beneficiary under the trust if:

- that other partnership is a Canadian partnership (as defined by subsection 248(1) of the Act),
- that other partnership is a limited partnership whose interest in the particular partnership is held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by it or by persons ("eligible persons") who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from Part I tax on all of their taxable income,
- the interest of each member, of the other partnership, that is a person exempt because of subsection 149(1) from Part I tax on all or part of its taxable income was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by that member or by eligible persons, and
- the beneficial interest of the particular partnership in the trust was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by the particular partnership or by eligible persons.

Based on our discussions with you, we are also prepared to recommend that these modifications be effective for the 2001 and subsequent taxation years.

Thank you for writing to us on this matter.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Emewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 13, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in reply to your letters to Mr. Len Farber of March 5 and March 9, 2001 and your letter of April 10, 2001 to Mr. Grant Nash of this Division, concerning the rules for designated beneficiaries in section 210 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

The definition "designated beneficiary" in section 210 applies for the purposes of Part XII.2 of the Act. One of the objectives of Part XII.2 tax is to prevent the minimization of tax on specified Canadian-source income that would otherwise arise where a Canadian trust's income is distributed to a non-resident and is subject only to Part XIII tax. Part XII.2 tax is also meant to discourage transactions between taxable and tax-exempt beneficiaries designed to allow taxable income earned by a trust to be flowed-through to tax-exempt beneficiaries after the acquisition of a trust unit by the tax-exempt beneficiary from the taxable beneficiaries.

We understand that you have seen a sanitized version of two earlier letters issued by us [below — ed.] in which we agreed to recommend changes to the definition "designated beneficiary" in section 210 of the Act. Under the structure described in the earlier letters ("double-tier structure"), registered pension plans and other investors would invest in units issued by a unit trust ("top fund"). The top fund would in turn invest in units issued by other trusts ("bottom funds"). In the earlier letter, we agreed to recommend changes so that the top fund would not be considered a designated beneficiary of the bottom fund solely because the beneficiaries of the top fund include a person exempt from tax under Part I of the Act. However, under the recommended changes, a top fund would be considered a designated beneficiary of the bottom fund if the top fund acquired its interest in the bottom fund directly or indirectly from another beneficiary of the bottom fund, unless the interest was owned, at all times after the creation of the bottom fund, by the top fund or a person exempt from tax under Part I of the Act because of subsection 149(1).

You have asked that we clarify whether it was intended that the proposed changes would accommodate structures of more than two levels of trust ("multiple-tier structures"). In particular, you have described a structure in which the units of the top fund are held by a third unit trust (i.e. pooled fund arrangement) the units of which are in turn held by other trusts none of which is a designated beneficiary of the third trust. You have also indicated that similar pooled fund arrangements may be used involving multiple levels of unit trusts.

In light of the policy objectives of Part XII.2, we are prepared to recommend a further change to the definition "designated beneficiary". In particular, we will recommend that a top fund be treated as a designated beneficiary of a bottom fund, subject to the exceptions described below, where the top fund acquires its interest directly from the bottom fund or directly or indirectly from another beneficiary of the bottom fund. However, the top fund would not be a designated beneficiary of the bottom fund at a particular time where it meets two conditions. The first condition would be that its interest in the bottom fund be owned at all times after the date on which the bottom fund was created by the top fund or a person exempt from tax under Part I because of subsection 149(1). The second condition would be that none of the beneficiaries of the top fund be a designated beneficiary of the top fund. We will further recommend that these amendments be effective for the 1996 and subsequent taxation years.

Thank you for writing to us on this matter.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 9, 1999:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of October 20, 1999 concerning the definition "designated beneficiary" in section 210 of the Income Tax Act. I apologize for the delay in responding to you.

I am attaching a copy of our earlier letter to you of September 3, 1996 in which we agree to recommend changes to the definition "designated beneficiary" so that Part XII.2 tax is not exigible in the circumstances of certain kinds of "tiering" arrangements involving trusts (such as, for example, those arrangements described in your letters of October 20, 1999 and June 10, 1996). It continues to be our intention to recommend inclusion of this amendment in a future technical bill.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 25, 1998:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in reply to your letter of May 13, 1998 concerning the rules for designated beneficiaries in section 210 of the Income Tax Act. I understand that you have had access to a sanitized version of a letter from this Division on the same subject dated September 3, 1996.

Your letter contemplates a structure involving a number of different trusts resident in Canada and partnerships. Under this structure, a trust governed by a registered pension plan and other investors resident in Canada will have interests in a trust (the "middle trust"). The middle trust will invest in units issued by a unit trust (the "bottom trust"). In addition, a registered charity and other taxpayers resident in Canada will invest in a partnership which, in turn, will invest in units issued by the bottom trust. We also assume from the comments in your letter that neither the middle trust nor the partnership will acquire units of the bottom trust from other unitholders of the trust, but will instead acquire their units directly from the bottom trust.

One of the objectives of Part XII.2 tax is to prevent the minimization of tax on specified Canadian-source income that would otherwise arise where a Canadian trust's income is distributed to a non-resident and is subject only to Part XIII tax. Part XII.2 tax is also meant to discourage transactions between taxable and tax-exempt beneficiaries designed to allow "lumpy" taxable income earned by a trust to be flowed-through to tax-exempt beneficiaries after the acquisition of a trust unit by the tax-exempt beneficiary from the taxable beneficiaries.

Given the existing structure and objectives of Part XII.2, we agree it would be anomalous for either the middle trust or partnership in the circumstances described above to be treated as "designated beneficiaries" under the bottom trust. I am prepared to recommend amendments to eliminate this anomaly. I expect these amendments will be introduced in a future technical bill and be effective from no later than the beginning of this year.

Thank you for writing to us on this matter.

Yours sincerely,

Daniel MacIntosh, Director, Tax Legislation Division

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 3, 1996:

Dear [xxx]

This is in reply to your letter of June 10, 1996 to Simon Thompson regarding a suggested change to the definition of "designated beneficiary" in section 210 of the Income Tax Act.

Your letter contemplates a structure involving a number of different trusts resident in Canada. Under this structure, registered pension plans and other investors resident in Canada will invest in trust units issued by one unit trust (the "top fund"). The top fund will invest in units issued by other unit trusts (the "bottom funds"). You have asked that section 210 of the Act be amended so the top fund will not be a "designated beneficiary" of the bottom funds as a consequence of the top fund having beneficiaries (i.e., registered pension plans) which are exempt from tax under Part I of the Act.

We agree that one of the objectives of Part XII.2 tax is to prevent the minimization of tax on specified Canadian-source income that would otherwise arise where a Canadian trust's income is distributed to a non-resident and is subject only to Part XIII tax. However, Part XII.2 tax is also meant to discourage transactions between taxable and tax-exempt beneficiaries designed to allow "lumpy" taxable income earned by a trust to be flowed-through to tax-exempt beneficiaries after the acquisition of a trust unit by the tax-exempt beneficiary from the taxable beneficiaries.

In view of the second objective of Part XII.2 tax, described above, it would be difficult to recommend the amendment referred to above by itself. However, I understand that you have discussed this matter with one of my staff and are amenable to an additional amendment in this context. The additional amendment would, in effect, provide that the top fund would be a "designated beneficiary" under a bottom fund if it acquired an interest in the bottom fund directly or indirectly from a beneficiary under the bottom fund (except where the interest was owned, at each time after the date on which the bottom fund was created, by the top fund or a person exempt from tax under Part I of the Act because of subsection 149(1) of the Act). The combination of the two amendments would meet the both of the policy objectives. I am prepared to recommend that these amendments be introduced in a future technical bill and be effective from a date that will accommodate the planned structure described in your letter.

Thank you for writing to us on this matter.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber, Director, Tax Legislation Division

- (a) the designated income of the trust for the year,
- (b) the amount that, but for subsections 104(6) and (30), would be the income of the trust for the year, and

(1.1) Amateur athlete trusts — Notwithstanding section 210.1, where an amount described in subsection 143.1(2) in respect of an amateur athlete trust would, if Part I were applicable, be required to be included in computing the income for a taxation year of a designated beneficiary under the trust, the trust shall pay a tax under this Part in respect of the year equal to 36% of 100/64 of that amount.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 176(1), will repeal subsec. 210.2(1.1), applicable to 1996 et seq.

Technical Notes: See under 210.2(2) below.

History: Subsec. 210.2(1.1) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), s. 122, applicable to 1992 et seq.

(2) Designated income — For the purposes of subsection (1), the designated income of a trust for a taxation year means the amount that, but for subsections 104(6), (12) and (30), would be the income of the trust for the year determined under section 3 if

- (a) it had no income other than taxable capital gains from dispositions described in paragraph (b) and incomes from
 - (i) real properties in Canada (other than Canadian resource properties),
 - (ii) timber resource properties,
 - (iii) Canadian resource properties (other than properties acquired by the trust before 1972), and
 - (iv) businesses carried on in Canada;

(b) the only taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses referred to in paragraph 3(b) were from dispositions of taxable Canadian property; and

(c) the only losses referred to in paragraph 3(d) were losses from sources described in subparagraphs (a)(i) to (iv).

Proposed Amendment — 210.2(2)

(2) Amateur athlete trusts — Notwithstanding subsection 210(2), a trust shall pay a tax under this Part in respect of a particular taxation year of the trust equal to 56.25% of the amount that is required by subsection 143.1(2) to be included in computing the income under Part I for a taxation year of a beneficiary under the trust, if

- (a) the beneficiary is at any time in the particular taxation year a designated beneficiary under the trust; and
- (b) the particular taxation year ends in that taxation year of the beneficiary.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 176(1), will amend subsec. 210.2(2) to read as above, applicable to 1996 et seq. ("Designated income" is moved to 210(1); this provision was 210.2(1.1).)

Technical Notes: Subsection 210.2(1.1) extends the tax under Part XII.2 to amateur athlete trusts, which are provided for in section 143.1, in circumstances where amounts are distributed by such trusts to non-resident beneficiaries.

Subsection 210.2(1.1) is amended by renumbering it as subsection 210.2(2). In addition, the reference in that subsection to section 210.1 is, given that section's renumbering as subsection 210(2), replaced with a reference to subsection 210(2). The amended subsection also replaces the existing reference to the phrase "36% of 100/64" with the numerical equivalent of "56.25%". Finally, the provision is amended to clarify that Part XII.2 tax applies to a trust for a particular taxation year of the trust on the amount that is required by subsection 143.1(2) to be included in computing the income under Part I for a taxation year of a beneficiary under the trust, only if

- the beneficiary is at any time in the particular taxation year a designated beneficiary under the trust; and
- the particular taxation year ends in that taxation year of the beneficiary.

Related Provisions: 104(7.01)(b)(i) — No deduction under 104(6) for designated income of trust.

History: Para. 210.2(2)(b) amended by 2001, c. 17, s. 172, applicable after October 1, 1996. It formerly read:

- (b) the only taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses referred to in paragraph 3(b) were from dispositions of property that would have been taxable Canadian property if, at no time in the year, the trust had been resident in Canada; and

(3) Tax deemed paid by beneficiary — Where an amount (in this subsection and subsection 210.3(2) referred to as the "income amount") in respect of the income of a trust for a taxation year is, by reason of subsection 104(13) or 105(2), included in computing

(a) the income under Part I of a person who was not at any time in the year a designated beneficiary under the trust, or

(b) the income of a non-resident person (other than a person who, at any time in the year, would be a designated beneficiary under the trust if section 210 were read without reference to paragraph 210(a)) that is subject to tax under Part I by reason of subsection 2(3) and is not exempt from tax under Part I by reason of a provision contained in a tax convention or agreement with another country that has the force of law in Canada,

Proposed Amendment — 210.2(3)(b)

(b) the income of a non-resident person (other than a person who, at any time in the year, would be a designated beneficiary under the trust if section 210 were read without reference to paragraph (a) of the definition “designated beneficiary” in that section) that is subject to tax under Part I by reason of subsection 2(3) and is not exempt from tax under Part I by reason of a provision contained in a tax treaty,

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 176(3), will amend para. 210.2(3)(b) to read as above, applicable to 1996 et seq., except that in applying para. 210.2(3)(b) for the 1996 and 1997 taxation years, “treaty” is to be read as “convention or agreement with another country that has the force of law in Canada”.

Technical Notes: Note as well that paragraph 210.2(3)(b) is amended to ensure that subsection 210.2(3) does not apply to a non-resident person that would be a designated beneficiary under the trust if the definition “designated beneficiary” in subsection 210(1) were read without reference to its paragraph (a).

- (a) where the original acquisition of the share occurred before 1996, 20% of the net cost of the share on that acquisition; and
- (b) in any other case, the amount that would be determined under subsection 127.4(6) in respect of the share if this Act were read without reference to paragraphs 127.4(6)(b) and (d).

History: S. 211.7 renumbered as subsec. 211.7(1) and subsec. 211.7(2) added by 2000, c. 19, s. 61, applicable after February 16, 1999.

S. 211.7 added by 1997, c. 25, s. 62, applicable to redemptions, acquisitions, cancellations and dispositions that occur after November 15, 1995, except that s. 211.7 does not apply

(a) to any redemption that occurs before 1998 of a share of the capital stock of a corporation that was registered under subsec. 204.81(1), where an amount determined under regulations made for the purpose of cl. 204.81(1)(c)(v)(F) is directed to be remitted to the Receiver General in order to permit the redemption; and

(b) to any disposition that occurs before 1998, where an amount is required to be remitted to the government of a province as a consequence of the disposition and a portion of the amount is in respect of the recovery of a tax credit that is provided under subsection 127.4(2) in respect of the share.

Definitions [s. 211.7]: “amount” — 248(1); “corporation” — 248(1), Interpretation Act 35(1); “net cost”; “original acquisition” — 127.4(1), 211.7(1); “share” — 248(1).

211.8 (1) Disposition of approved share — Where an approved share of the capital stock of a registered labour-sponsored venture capital corporation or a revoked corporation is, before the first discontinuation of its venture capital business, redeemed, acquired or cancelled by the corporation less than eight years after the day on which the share was issued (other than in circumstances described in subclause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(A)(I) or (III) or clause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(B) or (D)) or any other share that was issued by any other labour-sponsored venture capital corporation is disposed of, the person who was the shareholder immediately before the redemption, acquisition, cancellation or disposition shall pay a tax under this Part equal to the lesser of

- (a) the amount determined by the formula

where

(i) where the share was issued by a registered labour-sponsored venture capital corporation or a revoked corporation, the labour-sponsored funds tax credit in respect of the share, and

(ii) where the share was issued by any other labour-sponsored venture capital corporation and was at any time an approved share, the amount, if any, required to be remitted to the government of a province as a consequence of the redemption, acquisition, cancellation or disposition (otherwise than as a consequence of an increase in the corporation’s liability for a penalty under a law of the province), and

B is

(i) nil, where the share was issued by a registered labour-sponsored venture capital corporation or a revoked corporation, the original acquisition of the share was before March 6, 1996 and the redemption, acquisition, cancellation or disposition is

(A) more than 2 years after the day on which it was issued, where the redemption, acquisition, cancellation or disposition is permitted under the articles of the corporation because an individual attains 65 years of age, retires from the workforce or ceases to be resident in Canada, or

(B) more than 5 years after the day on which it was issued,

Proposed Amendment — 211.8(1)(a)B(i)(B), (C)

(B) more than five years after its issuance, or

(C) if the day that is five years after its issuance is in February or March of a calendar year, in February or on March 1st of that calendar year but not more than 31 days before that day,

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 178(1), will amend cl. 211.8(1)(a)B(i)(B) to read as above, and add cl. (i)(C), applicable to redemptions, acquisitions, cancellations and dispositions that occur after November 15, 1995.

Technical Notes: Subsection 211.8(1) provides that the special tax under Part XII.5 generally applies where shares in a federally-registered LSVCC that qualify for the federal LSVCC tax credit are redeemed prior to the expiry of a minimum period. In the case of shares the "original acquisition" (as defined in subsection 127.4(1)) of which occurred before March 6, 1996, there is no recovery of the tax credit for a share redeemed more than five years after the day on which the share was issued. For shares the original acquisition of which occurs after March 5, 1996, the recovery generally applies where a share is redeemed less than eight years after the day on which it was issued.

Subsection 211.8(1) is amended so that there is no Part XII.5 tax in respect of the redemption by a federally-registered LSVCC of a share the original acquisition of which was after March 5, 1996, if the redemption occurs on a day that is in February or on March 1st of a calendar year and that day is no more than 31 days before the day that is eight years after the day on which the share was issued. For a share the original acquisition of which occurred before March 6, 1996, the circumstances in which there is no recovery of the tax credit are extended to include the redemption of the share on a day that is in February or on March 1st of a calendar year if that day is no more than 31 days before the day that is five years after the day on which the share was issued.

This amendment applies to redemptions, acquisitions, cancellations and dispositions that occur after November 15, 1995.

This amendment is part of a set of amendments, announced by the Minister of Finance (News Release 2000-009, dated February 7, 2000) concerning the redemption requirements for federally-registered LSVCCs. The set of amendments is intended to accommodate taxpayers wishing to acquire new LSVCC shares in the first 60 days of a year using the proceeds from the redemption of LSVCC shares. Other related changes include amendments to section 204.81. For additional information, see the commentary on those provisions.

Example 1

On February 2nd, 1998 a federally-registered LSVCC redeemed 200 Class A shares owned by Charles. The original acquisition by Charles of the shares was on March 1, 1993, the same day on which the shares were issued. The issuing LSVCC was incorporated on December 1, 1992. The LSVCC's Articles comply with the applicable registration requirements.

Results:

1. Under new clause (i)(C) of the description of B in paragraph 211.8(1)(a), there will be no recovery of the tax credit on the redemption of the 200 shares because the original acquisition of the shares was before March 6, 1996 and the redemption occurred on a day in February not more than 31 days before the day that is five years after the day on which the shares were issued.
2. Because of new subsection 204.81(1.2), subsection 204.81(6) would not apply to allow the Minister of National Revenue to revoke the LSVCC's registration solely because of the redemption.

Example 2

On February 15, 2005 a federally-registered LSVCC redeemed 200 Class A shares owned by Marguerite. The circumstances of the redemption are not described in any of the provisions, described in clauses 204.81(1)(c)(v)(A) to (D) of the Act, of the LSVCC's articles. The original acquisition by Marguerite of the first 100 shares was on March 1, 1997, although the shares were issued on March 12th, 1997. The original acquisition by Marguerite of the second 100 shares was on February 29, 2000, the same day on which the shares were issued. The LSVCC was incorporated on May 1, 1996.

Results:

1. Under new subparagraph (i.1) of the description of B in paragraph 211.8(1)(a), there will be no recovery of the tax credit on the redemption of the first 100 shares because the redemption occurred in February on a day not more than 31 days before the day that is eight years after the day on which the shares were issued. Subparagraph (i) of the description of variable B in paragraph 211.8(1)(a) does not apply because the original acquisition of the shares was not before March 6, 1996.

2. Under new subparagraph (i.1) of the description of B in paragraph 211.8(1)(a), there will be a recovery of the tax credit on the redemption of the second 100 shares because the redemption occurred less than eight years after the day on which the share was issued and more than 31 days before the day that is eight years after the day on which the shares were issued.

3. Because of new subsection 204.81(1.2), subsection 204.81(6) would not apply to allow the Minister of National Revenue to revoke the LSVCC's registration solely because of the redemption of the first 100 shares. However, the early redemption by the corporation of the second 100 shares, in violation of the provisions of its articles described in clause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(E), authorizes the Minister of National Revenue to revoke the LSVCC's registration under subsection 204.81(6).

Dept. of Finance news release 2000-009, Feb. 7, 2000: Finance Minister Announces Minor Change to the Redemption Requirements for Federal LSVCCs

Finance Minister Paul Martin today announced that he would propose a minor change affecting federally-registered labour-sponsored venture capital corporations (LSVCCs). The proposed change provides an exemption from the rules governing the recovery of the federal LSVCC tax credit.

Shares in federally-registered LSVCCs that qualify for the federal LSVCC tax credit must be held for a minimum period. Where a share is redeemed prior to the expiry of the minimum period, the federal LSVCC tax credit for the share is generally recovered. In the case of shares issued before March 6, 1996, there is no recovery of the tax credit for a share redeemed more than five years after the day on which the share was issued. For shares issued after March 5, 1996, the recovery applies where a share is redeemed less than eight years after the day on which it was issued.

The proposed change will, for the purpose of the recovery provisions, treat a share redeemed in February or on March 1st as having been redeemed 30 days later. For example, existing LSVCC shares issued on March 1, 1995 and redeemed on February 29, 2000 would be exempt from a recovery of the federal LSVCC tax credit that was associated with the original acquisition of the shares.

This measure is intended to accommodate taxpayers wishing to acquire new LSVCC shares in the first 60 days of a year with the proceeds from the redemption of LSVCC shares. In these circumstances, a taxpayer would generally be entitled to claim a tax credit for the preceding year in respect of an acquisition of the new shares and would not be subject to a tax penalty with respect to the redemption of the existing shares. In addition, any necessary changes will be made to ensure that an LSVCC's registration cannot be revoked as a result of having redeemed LSVCC shares in these circumstances. It is proposed that this change apply from the inception of the rules governing the recovery of the LSVCC tax credit.

Proposed Addition — 211.8(1)(a)B(i.1)

(i.1) nil, where the share was issued by a registered labour-sponsored venture capital corporation or a revoked corporation, the original acquisition of the share was after March 5, 1996 and the redemption, acquisition or cancellation is in February or on March 1st of a calendar year but is not more than 31 days before the day that is eight years after the day on which the share was issued,

History: Para. 212(1)(b) amended by 2007, c. 35, subsec. 59(2), applicable after 2007 and as though Bill C-10 (see proposed amendments below) had received Royal Assent before 2007, c. 35. The para. formerly read:

(b) interest — interest except

(i) [NRO] — interest payable by a non-resident-owned investment corporation,

(ii) [government-guaranteed debt] — interest payable on

(A) bonds of or guaranteed by the Government of Canada issued on or before December 20, 1960,

(B) bonds of or guaranteed by the Government of Canada issued after December 20, 1960, and before April 16, 1966, the interest on which is payable to the government or central bank of a country other than Canada or to any international organization or agency prescribed by regulation, or

(C) bonds, debentures, notes, mortgages, hypothecary claims or similar obligations

(II) of the government of a province or an agent thereof,

(III) of a municipality in Canada or a municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada,

(IV) of a corporation, commission or association to which any of paragraphs 149(1)(d) to (d.6) applies, or

(V) of an educational institution or a hospital if repayment of the principal amount thereof and payment of the interest thereon is to be made, or is guaranteed, assured or otherwise specifically provided for or secured by the government of a province, issued after April 15, 1966,

(iii) [foreign currency debt] — interest payable in a currency other than Canadian currency to a person with whom the payer is dealing at arm's length, on

(A) any obligation where the evidence of indebtedness was issued on or before December 20, 1960,

(B) any obligation where the evidence of indebtedness was issued after December 20, 1960, if the obligation was entered into under an agreement in writing made on or before that day, under which the obligee undertook to advance, on or before a specified day, a specified amount at a specified rate of interest or a rate of interest to be determined as provided in the agreement, to the extent that the interest payable on the obligation is payable

(I) in respect of a period ending not later than the earliest day on which, under the terms of the obligation determined as of the time it was entered into, the obligee would be entitled to demand payment of the principal amount of the obligation or the amount outstanding as or on account of the principal amount thereof, as the case may be, if the terms of the obligation determined as of that time provided for that payment on or after a specified day, or

(II) in respect of a period ending not later than one year after the time the obligation was entered into, in any other case,

(C) any bond, debenture or similar obligation issued after December 20, 1960, for the issue of which arrangements were made on or before that day with a dealer in securities, if the existence of the arrangements for the issue of the bond, debenture or similar obligation can be established by evidence in writing given or made on or before that day,

(D) an amount not repayable in Canadian currency deposited with an institution that was at the time the amount was deposited or at the time the interest was paid or credited a prescribed financial institution,

(E) any obligation entered into in the course of carrying on a business in a country other than Canada, to the extent that the interest payable on the obligation is deductible in computing the income of the payer under Part I from a business carried on by the payer in such a country, or that, but for subsection 18(2) or section 21, would have been so deductible, or

(F) any obligation entered into by the payer after December 20, 1960, on assuming an obligation referred to in clause (A) in consideration or partial consideration for the purchase by the payer of property of the vendor that constituted security for that obligation, if the payer on entering into the obligation undertook to pay the same amount of money on or before the same date and at the same rate of interest as the vendor of the property had undertaken in respect of the obligation under which the vendor was the obligor,

(for the purpose of this subparagraph, interest expressed to be computed by reference to Canadian currency shall be deemed to be payable in Canadian currency),

(iv) [exemption certificate] — interest payable on any bond, debenture or similar obligation to a person with whom the payer is dealing at arm's length and to whom a certificate of exemption that is in force on the day the amount is paid or credited was issued under subsection (14),

Proposed Amendment — Former 212(1)(b)(iv)

(iv) interest payable to a person with whom the payer is dealing at arm's length and to whom a certificate of exemption that is in force on the day the amount is paid or credited was issued under subsection (14),

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 179(1), will amend former subpara. 212(1)(b)(iv) to read as above, applicable to 1998 et seq., but only until 212(1)(b) was replaced effective Jan. 1, 2008 (per Bill C-28, S.C. 2007, c. 35, s. 97(1)).

Technical Notes: Paragraph 212(1)(b) both applies tax under Part XIII of the Act to interest paid or credited by a person resident in Canada to a non-resident person and includes a number of exemptions from the tax. One of these, in subparagraph 212(1)(b)(iv), is for interest payable to an arm's length person who holds a valid "certificate of exemption". These certificates, issued by the Minister of National Revenue under the authority provided by subsection 212(14), are generally available to foreign pension entities, charities and certain other tax-exempt entities.

In its current form, subparagraph 212(1)(b)(iv) applies only to interest on a "bond, debenture or similar obligation." Since this restriction may unduly limit the scope of the provision, it is broadened to encompass all forms of indebtedness. It should be noted, however, that no change is made to the requirement that the Canadian-resident payer of the interest and the non-resident recipient deal at arm's length.

(v) [life insurance business outside Canada] — interest payable to a person with whom the payer is dealing at arm's length on any obligation entered into in the course of carrying on a life insurance business in a country other than Canada,

(vi) [Repealed under former Act]

(vii) [5-year corporate debt] — interest payable by a corporation resident in Canada to a person with whom that corporation is dealing at arm's length on any obligation where the evidence of indebtedness was issued by that corporation after June 23, 1975 if under the terms of the obligation or any agreement relating thereto the corporation may not under any circumstances be obliged to pay more than 25% of

(A) where the obligation is one of a number of obligations that comprise a single debt issue of obligations that are identical in respect of all rights (in equity or otherwise, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently) attaching thereto, except as regards the principal amount thereof, the total of the principal amount of those obligations, or

(B) in any other case, the principal amount of the obligation, within 5 years from the date of issue of that single debt issue or that obligation, as the case may be, except

(C) in the event of a failure or default under the said terms or agreement,

(D) if the terms of the obligation or any agreement relating thereto become unlawful or are changed by virtue of legislation or by a court, statutory board or commission,

(E) if the person exercises a right under the terms of the obligation or any agreement relating thereto to convert the obligation into, or exchange the obligation for, a prescribed security,

(F) in the event of the person's death, or

(G) in the event that a change to this Act or to a tax treaty has the effect of relieving the non-resident person from liability for tax under this Part in respect of the interest;

Proposed Amendment — Former 212(1)(b)(vii) — No novation when authorized foreign bank assumes debts of subsidiary Letter from Dept. of Finance, December 18, 2001: See under 142.7(8)(d).

(viii) [mortgage on real property outside Canada] — interest payable on a mortgage, hypothecary claim or similar obligation secured by, or on an agreement for sale or similar obligation with respect to, real property situated outside Canada or an interest in any such real property except to the extent that the interest payable on the obligation is deductible in computing the income of the payer under Part I from a business carried on by the payer in Canada or from property other than real property situated outside Canada,

Proposed Amendment Deleted — Former 212(1)(b)(viii)

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 3 — bilingualism), subsec. 268(1), would have amended subpara. 212(1)(b)(viii) by substituting "such real property, or to immovables situated outside Canada or a real right in any such immovable," for "such real property" and "real or immovable property" for "real property", to come into force on Royal Assent.

This amendment repealed by S.C. 2007, c. 35 (Bill C-28, Royal Assent December 14, 2007), subsec. 97(2).

Technical Notes: See under 12(4).

(ix) [deposit in foreign branch of Canadian bank] — interest payable in Canadian currency on account of an amount in Canadian currency deposited in a country other than Canada with a branch or office of a payer who

(A) is, or is eligible to become, a member of the Canadian Payments Association, or

(B) is a credit union that is a shareholder or member of a body corporate or organization that is a central for the purposes of the Canadian Payments Association Act, to a person with whom the payer is dealing at arm's length,

(x) [prescribed international organization] — interest payable to a prescribed international organization or agency,

(xi) [International Banking Centre deposit] — interest payable on an amount deposited with a prescribed financial institution for the period during which the amount was an eligible deposit (within the meaning assigned by subsection 33.1(1) of the institution, and

(xii) [securities lending arrangement] — interest payable under a securities lending arrangement by a lender under the arrangement that is a financial institution prescribed for the purpose of clause (iii)(D), or a registered securities dealer resident in Canada, on money provided to the lender either as collateral or as consideration for the particular security lent or transferred under the arrangement where

Proposed Amendment — Former 212(1)(b)(xii) opening words

(xii) interest payable by a lender under a securities lending arrangement, if the lender and the borrower deal with each other at arm's length and the lender is a financial institution prescribed for the purpose of clause (iii)(D), or a registered securities dealer resident in Canada, on money provided to the lender either as collateral or as consideration for the particular security lent or transferred under the arrangement where

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 179(2), will amend the opening words of subpara. 212(1)(b)(xii) to read as above, applicable to arrangements made after 2002, but only until 212(1)(b) was replaced effective Jan. 1, 2008 (per Bill C-28, S.C. 2007, c. 35, s. 97(1)).

Technical Notes: Subparagraph 212(1)(b)(xii) provides an exemption for interest payable under certain securities lending arrangements by registered or licensed securities dealers resident in Canada. Given the current definition of "securities lending arrangement" in subsection 260(1), this exemption is only available to dealers who are dealing at arm's length with the other parties to the arrangements.

Consequential to the amendments to the definition of "securities lending arrangement" in subsection 260(1), which now includes certain arrangements between non-arm's length parties, the amendment to subparagraph 212(1)(b)(xii) confirms that the exemption is limited to arm's length arrangements.

(A) the particular security is an obligation referred to in subparagraph (ii) or an obligation of the government of any country, province, state, municipality or other political subdivision,

(B) the amount of money so provided at any time during the term of the arrangement does not exceed 110% of the fair market value at that time of the particular security, and

(C) the arrangement was neither intended, nor made as a part of a series of securities lending arrangements, loans or other transactions that was intended, to be in effect for more than 270 days,

Proposed Addition — Former 212(1)(b)(xiii)

(xiii) [securities lending arrangement] — an amount paid or credited under a securities lending arrangement that is deemed by subparagraph 260(8)(c)(i) to be a payment made by a borrower to a lender of interest if

(A) the securities lending arrangement was entered into by the borrower in the course of carrying on a business outside Canada, and

(B) the security that is transferred or lent to the borrower under the securities lending arrangement is described in paragraph (b) or (c) of the definition "qualified security" in subsection 260(1) and issued by a non-resident issuer;

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 179(3), will add subpara. 212(1)(b)(xiii), applicable to securities lending arrangements entered into after May 1995 (except that in its application to arrangements made before 2002, the reference to "subparagraph 260(8)(c)(i)" in the subpara. is to be read as "subparagraph 260(8)(a)(i)"); but only until 212(1)(b) was replaced effective Jan. 1, 2008 (per Bill C-28, S.C. 2007, c. 35, s. 97(1)).

Technical Notes: Securities lending arrangements often include an obligation for one party to compensate the other for certain income amounts. In the absence of special rules, these compensation payments may be subject to tax under Part XIII if they are paid by a person resident in Canada to a non-resident person.

New subparagraph 212(1)(b)(xiii) exempts from tax under Part XIII certain interest compensation payments made to a non-resident by a borrower resident in Canada under a securities lending arrangement. For this exemption to apply,

- the payments must be made by the borrower in the course of carrying on its business outside of Canada; and
- the borrowed securities must be issued by a non-resident issuer.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, February 18, 2002: See under 212(2.1).

and for the purpose of this paragraph, where interest is payable on an obligation, other than a prescribed obligation, and all or any portion of the interest is contingent or dependent on the use of or production from property in Canada or is computed by reference to revenue, profit, cash flow, commodity price or any other similar criterion or by reference to dividends paid or payable to shareholders of any class of shares of the capital stock of a corporation, the interest shall be deemed not to be interest described in subparagraphs (ii) to (vii) and (ix);

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 13, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

This letter responds to submissions received in respect of a financing transaction in which [xxx] proposes to enter into a lease leaseback arrangement with U.S. investors in respect of its [xxx].

In order to facilitate this financing structure you have asked that the exemption from non-resident withholding tax presently available for rent payments made in respect of [aircraft] and attached equipment be extended to [xxx]. You have submitted that such an exemption would be consistent with the current exemption for [aircraft] and is required to facilitate [xxx] participation in a financing structure that delivers U.S. tax benefits for investors outside of Canada.

Based on your assurance that the proposed lease financing transaction referred to in your submission meets all of the requirements of the U.S. Internal Revenue Code, I am prepared to recommend Parliament approve an amendment to the Income Tax Act to provide for an expansion of the list of equipment, presently eligible for exemption from non-resident withholding tax under section 212(1)(d) of the Income Tax Act, to include [xxx] utilized pursuant to the [xxx]. If Parliament approves this recommendation, it would have effect for the 2003 and subsequent taxation years.

Yours very truly,

John Manley, Minister of Finance

Proposed Addition — 212(1)(w)

(w) a payment out of a trust that is, or was, at any time, an employee life and health trust, except to the extent that it is a payment of a designated employee benefit (as defined by subsection 144.1(1)).

Technical Notes: Subsection 212(1) imposes an income tax at the rate of 25% on certain payments to non-residents. In many cases, the 25% rate is reduced by tax treaty. (a) the amount is deemed by subparagraph 260(8)(c)(i) to be a dividend;

(b) the securities lending arrangement was entered into by the borrower in the course of carrying on a business outside Canada; and

(c) the security that is transferred or lent to the borrower under the securities lending arrangement is a share of a class of the capital stock of a non-resident corporation.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 179(9), will add subsec. 212(2.1), applicable to securities lending arrangements entered into after May 1995, except that in its application to arrangements made before 2002, the reference to "subparagraph 260(8)(c)(i)" in para. 212(2.1)(a) is to be read as "subparagraph 260(8)(a)(i)".

Technical Notes: New subsection 212(2.1) is added to exempt from Part XIII tax certain dividend compensation payments made to a non-resident by a Canadian securities borrower under a securities lending arrangement if

- the payments were deemed to be dividends by subparagraph 260(8)(c)(i);
- the payments were made by the borrower in the course of carrying on its business outside of Canada; and
- the borrowed securities were issued by a non-resident issuer.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Feb. 18, 2002:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in reply to your email message of December 3, 2001 to Joseph Lam of this Division regarding the application of paragraph 260(8)(a) and Part XIII of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

In your email, you describe a situation where a Canadian resident financial institution, in the course of carrying on its business outside Canada through foreign branches and, indirectly, through foreign subsidiaries, borrows or acquires shares issued by a non-Canadian issuer in a transaction with an arm's length non-resident and the Canadian financial institution makes a "dividend compensation payment" to the non-resident. You represent that the transaction satisfies the definition of "securities lending arrangement" in section 260 of the Act, and, as it is fully collateralized, the payment is deemed to be a dividend for the purposes of Part XIII by virtue of paragraph 260(8)(a).

We recognize that under certain circumstances there should be, in policy terms, no Canadian non-resident withholding tax on dividend compensation payments made by a foreign branch of a Canadian financial institution, in the course of carrying on its business outside Canada, to a non-resident. Consequently, we are prepared to recommend amendments to the Act to exempt from Canadian non-resident withholding tax payments that are deemed to be dividends by virtue of paragraph 260(8)(a), where the payments are made pursuant to a securities lending arrangement entered into in the course of carrying on a business outside Canada, the securities lent or sold are securities of a foreign issuer, and the securities lender is at arm's length with the Canadian securities borrower. In addition, we are prepared to recommend that the amendments apply to securities lending arrangements entered into after May 1995.

While we cannot provide assurance that the Minister will accept our recommendations, we intend to include measures along the line described above in the next package of income tax technical amendments.

We trust that the above satisfies your requirements.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(3) Interest — definitions — The following definitions apply for the purpose of paragraph (1)(b).

"fully exempt interest" means

(a) interest that is paid or payable on a bond, debenture, note, mortgage, hypothecary claim or similar debt obligation

(i) of, or guaranteed (otherwise than by being insured by the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation) by, the Government of Canada,

(ii) of the government of a province,

(iii) of an agent of a province,

(iv) of a municipality in Canada or a municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada,

(v) of a corporation, commission or association to which any of paragraphs 149(1)(d) to (d.6) applies, or

(vi) of an educational institution or a hospital if repayment of the principal amount of the obligation and payment of the interest is to be made, or is guaranteed, assured or otherwise specifically provided for or secured by the government of a province;

(b) interest that is paid or payable on a mortgage, hypothecary claim or similar debt obligation secured by, or on an agreement for sale or similar obligation with respect to, real property situated outside Canada or an interest in any such real property, or to immovables situated outside Canada or a real right in any such immovable, except to the extent that the interest payable on the obligation is deductible in computing the income of the payer under Part I from a business carried on by the payer in Canada or from property other than real or immovable property situated outside Canada;

- (c) interest that is paid or payable to a prescribed international organization or agency; or
- (d) an amount paid or payable or credited under a securities lending arrangement that is deemed by subparagraph 260(8)(a)(i) to be a payment made by a borrower to a lender of interest, if

Proposed Amendment — 212(3)“fully exempt interest”(d) opening words

Application: S.C. 2007, c. 35 (Bill C-28, Royal Assent December 14, 2007), subsec. 97(3), will amend the opening words of para. (d) of the definition “fully exempt interest” in subsec. 212(3) to substitute “260(8)(c)(i)” for “260(8)(a)(i)” once former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 1 — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 194(8) (see Proposed Amendments to 260(7), (8)—(8.2)) enters into force, in force on December 14, 2007.

- (i) the securities lending arrangement was entered into by the borrower in the course of carrying on a business outside Canada, and
- (ii) the security that is transferred or lent to the borrower under the securities lending arrangement is described in paragraph (b) or (c) of the definition “qualified security” in subsection 260(1) and issued by a non-resident issuer.

“participating debt interest” means interest (other than interest described in any of paragraphs (b) to (d) of the definition “fully exempt interest”) that is paid or payable on an obligation, other than a prescribed obligation, all or any portion of which interest is contingent or dependent on the use of or production from property in Canada or is computed by reference to revenue, profit, cash flow, commodity price or any other similar criterion or by reference to dividends paid or payable to shareholders of any class of shares of the capital stock of a corporation.

Related Provisions: 204“qualified investment”(b) — Debt obligations qualify for deferred income plans; 214(7) — Deemed payment of interest on sale of obligation.

History: Subsec. 212(3) amended by 2007, c. 35, subsec. 59(3), applicable after 2007 and as though Bill C-10 (see proposed amendment below) had received Royal Assent before said c. 35. The subsec. formerly read:

- (3) Replacement obligations — For the purpose of subparagraph (1)(b)(vii), an obligation (in this subsection referred to as the “replacement obligation”) issued by a corporation resident in Canada wholly or in substantial part and either directly or indirectly in exchange or substitution for an obligation or a part of an obligation (in this subsection referred to as the “former obligation”) shall, where

- (a) the replacement obligation was issued

(i) as part of a proposal to, or an arrangement with, its creditors that was approved by a court under the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act,

(ii) at a time when all or substantially all of its assets were under the control of a receiver, receiver-manager, sequestrator or trustee in bankruptcy, or

(iii) at a time when, because of financial difficulty, the issuing corporation or another corporation resident in Canada with which it does not deal at arm's length was in default, or could reasonably be expected to default, on the former obligation,

- (b) the proceeds from the issue of the replacement obligation can reasonably be regarded as having been used by the issuing corporation or another corporation with which it does not deal at arm's length in the financing of its active business carried on in Canada immediately before the time when the replacement obligation was issued, and

Proposed Repeal — Former 212(3)(b)

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 179(10), will repeal former para. 212(3)(b), applicable to replacement obligations issued after 2000, but only until 212(3) was replaced effective Jan. 1, 2008 (per Bill C-28, S.C. 2007, c. 35, s. 97(1)).

Technical Notes: Among the exceptions to the imposition of tax under Part XIII of the Act on interest is one found in subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) for interest paid by a corporation resident in Canada on its medium- and long-term arm's length debt. Subsection 212(3), which applies for the purpose of subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii), allows a corporation in certain circumstances of financial difficulty to treat a debt obligation that replaces another as having been issued when that other obligation was issued. The circumstances in which this is possible are set out in paragraphs 212(3)(a) to (c). Paragraph 212(3)(b) requires that, for the subsection to apply, it must be possible to regard the proceeds of the replacement borrowing as being used in financing an active business that was carried on in Canada, by the issuing company or one with which it does not deal at arm's length, immediately before the replacement obligation was issued.

There is no clear basis in tax policy for this requirement. The condition in paragraph 212(3)(b) is repealed for replacement debt obligations that are issued after 2000.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 11, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in response to your fax of June 6, 2001, regarding paragraph 212(3)(b) of the Income Tax Act (the “Act”). [xxx]

Paragraph 212(1)(b) of the Act imposes withholding tax on interest paid or credited by a person resident of Canada to a non-resident, subject to a number of exceptions. Among these exceptions is the “long-term debt” rule in subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii): in very broad terms, interest on corporate debt with a term of 5 years or longer is exempt from tax.

In 1994, the Act was amended to facilitate refinancing in certain cases of financial difficulty. The principle behind the amendment was that in such cases, replacing a long-term debt obligation that benefited from subparagraph (vii) ought not to cause withholding tax to apply. The new rule is found in subsection 212(3) of the Act. Paragraph 212(3)(b) requires that, for the subsection to apply, it must be possible to regard the proceeds of the replacement borrowing as being used by the issuing corporation (or a corporation with which it does not deal at arm's length) in financing an active business carried on in Canada immediately before the replacement obligation was issued.

As I understand it, [xxx] happens not to carry out most of its operations in Canada. Instead, the company is present, through its subsidiaries, in a number of foreign countries. This may make it difficult for [xxx] to meet the paragraph 212(3)(b) requirement. You have therefore suggested that the requirement be modified or eliminated.

Having reviewed the matter in response to your suggestion, I agree that there is no clear basis in tax policy for the requirement, and it is my view that subsection 212(3) would serve its function equally well if the requirement were removed. We are therefore prepared to recommend that the Act be amended to delete paragraph 212(3)(b), with application to replacement obligations issued after June 10, 2001.

I can, as you know, offer no assurance that the Minister of Finance or Parliament itself will accept this recommendation. However, I have no reason to believe that this modest change will prove controversial, and I expect that we will be able to include it in a package of draft technical amendments to be released later this year.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Emeweine

Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(4) Interpretation of “management or administration fee or charge” — For the purpose of paragraph (1)(a), “management or administration fee or charge” does not include any amount paid or credited or deemed by Part I to have been paid or credited to a non-resident person as, on account or in lieu of payment of, or in satisfaction of,

- (a) a service performed by the non-resident person if, at the time the non-resident person performed the service

(i) the service was performed in the ordinary course of a business carried on by the non-resident person that included the performance of such a service for a fee, and

(ii) the non-resident person and the payer were dealing with each other at arm's length, or

- (b) a specific expense incurred by the non-resident person for the performance of a service that was for the benefit of the payer, to the extent that the amount so paid or credited was reasonable in the circumstances.

Canada*, [1991] 2 C.T.C. 221 (FCA) (Fees paid by Canadian corporation to Bermuda subsidiary taxable, not at arm's length since both corporations controlled by same “mind”); *Windsor Plastic Products Ltd. v. (5) Motion picture films — Every non-resident person shall pay an income tax of 25% on every amount that a person resident in Canada pays or credits, or is deemed by Part I to pay or credit, to the non-resident person as, on account or in lieu of payment of, or in satisfaction of, payment for a right in or to the use of

(a) a motion picture film, or

(b) a film, video tape or other means of reproduction for use in connection with television (other than solely in connection with and as part of a news program produced in Canada), that has been or is to be used or reproduced in Canada.

Proposed Amendment — 212(5) closing words that has been, or is to be, used or reproduced in Canada to the extent that the amount relates to that use or reproduction.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 179(12), will amend the closing words of subsec. 212(5) to read as above, applicable to 2000 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 212(5) applies tax under Part XIII to, in general terms, any amount that a person resident in Canada pays to a non-resident person for a right in or to the use of a motion picture film or video product that has been or is to be used or reproduced in Canada (otherwise than for a news program). As presently worded, the subsection can be read as applying even if the payment in question is not for that Canadian use or reproduction, but relates instead to employment of the film or video in some other country. Accordingly, subsection 212(5) is amended to impose tax only to the extent that the amount of the payment relates to the use or reproduction of the product in Canada. This amendment applies to the 2000 and subsequent taxation years.

(5.1) Acting services — Notwithstanding any regulation made under paragraph 214(13)(c), every person who is either a non-resident individual who is an actor or that is a corporation related to such an individual shall pay an income tax of 23% on every amount paid or credited, or provided as a benefit, to or on behalf of the person for the provision in Canada of the acting services of the actor in a film or video production.

(5.2) Relief from double taxation — Where a corporation is liable to tax under subsection (5.1) in respect of an amount for acting services of an actor (in this subsection referred to as the "corporation payment") and the corporation pays, credits or provides as a benefit to the actor an amount for those acting services (in this subsection referred to as the "actor payment"), no tax is payable under subsection (5.1) with respect to the actor payment except to the extent that it exceeds the corporation payment.

(5.3) Reduction of withholding — If the Minister is satisfied that the deduction or withholding otherwise required by section 215 from an amount described in subsection (5.1), would cause undue hardship, the Minister may determine a lesser amount to be deducted or withheld and that lesser amount is deemed to be the amount so required to be deducted or withheld.

(6) Interest on provincial bonds from wholly-owned subsidiaries — Where an amount described by subsection (1) relates to interest on bonds or other obligations of or guaranteed by Her Majesty in right of a province or interest on bonds or other obligations provision for the payment of which was made by a statute of a provincial legislature, the tax payable under subsection (1) is 5% of that amount.

(7) Where subsec. (6) does not apply — Subsection (6) does not apply to interest on any bond or other obligation described therein that was issued after December 20, 1960, except any such bond or other obligation for the issue of which arrangements were made on or before that day with a dealer in securities, if the existence of the arrangements for the issue of the bond or other obligation can be established by evidence in writing given or made on or before that day.

Related Provisions: 212(8) — Bonds issued in exchange for earlier bonds.

(8) Bonds issued after December 20, 1960 in exchange for earlier bonds — For the purposes of this Part, where any bond, except a bond to which clause (1)(b)(ii)(C) applies, was issued after December 20, 1960 in exchange for a bond issued on or before that day, it shall, if the terms on which the bond for which it was exchanged was issued conferred on the holder thereof the right to make the exchange, be deemed to have been issued on or before December 20, 1960.

(9) Exemptions — Where

(a) a dividend or interest is received by a trust from a non-resident-owned investment corporation,

(b) an amount (in this subsection referred to as the "royalty payment") is received by a trust as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, a royalty on or in respect of a copy-right in respect of the production or reproduction of any literary, dramatic, musical or artistic work, or

(c) interest is received by a mutual fund trust maintained primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons

Proposed Addition — 212(9)(d)

(d) a dividend or interest is received by a trust created under a reinsurance trust agreement, to which the Superintendent of Financial Institutions is a party, established in accordance with guidelines issued by the Superintendent relating to reinsurance arrangements with unregistered insurers.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 179(13), will add para. 212(9)(d), applicable to amounts paid or credited after 2000 to non-resident persons.

Technical Notes: Subsection 212(9) provides an exemption from withholding tax under Part XIII of the Act with respect to certain amounts of a trust's income that are paid or credited to a non-resident beneficiary under the trust and that would otherwise be subject to withholding tax under paragraph 212(1)(c). The exemption currently applies only in respect of amounts that are attributable to income of the trust in the form of: dividends or interest received by the trust from a non-resident-owned investment corporation; certain artistic royalties; and interest, where the trust is a mutual fund maintained primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons.

If no Part XIII tax would have been payable with respect to the dividends, interest or royalties if they had been paid directly to the beneficiary, no Part XIII tax is payable with respect to a distribution from trust income to non-resident beneficiaries that derives from the dividends, interest or royalties.

Subsection 212(9) is amended to add a fourth type of trust income to this list of exemptions. In certain circumstances, Canada's Superintendent of Financial Institutions may require a non-resident reinsurer that reinsures Canadian risks to place assets in a trust in Canada. Such a "reinsurance trust" may earn dividend or interest income, which is payable to the non-resident. In recognition of the regulatory requirement for these trusts, subsection 212(9) is amended to provide that, if the dividends or interest would not have borne Canadian tax if the non-resident had earned them directly, they may be distributed to the non-resident free of Part XIII tax.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 8, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of February 28, 2001 concerning the application of non-resident withholding tax under paragraph 212(1)(c) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") in the context of reinsurance trusts required to be used in certain circumstances under guidelines issued by the Office of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions (OSFI).

The issue arises when a life insurance company (the "primary insurer") regulated by OSFI cedes insurance risks to a non-resident reinsurer that is not supervised by OSFI. OSFI's Guideline A dealing with minimum capital requirements does not give credit for such "unregistered reinsurance" that would reduce the primary insurer's capital requirements unless, pursuant to Guideline B-3 on Unregistered Reinsurance, the reinsurer's potential liability under the reinsurance arrangement is secured in an approved manner. This security is effectively a substitute for minimum capital requirements for the reinsurer imposed by either OSFI or a provincial government.

The primary method of providing such security is for the reinsurer to enter into a reinsurance trust arrangement, supervised by OSFI, in which assets are placed in a Canadian trust, to be available to meet the reinsurer's liability to the primary insurer under the reinsurance arrangement. Since the principal amount of the assets of the trust normally must be sufficient to meet the potential reinsurance liability, the reinsurance trust agreement generally provides that any income realized on the assets in the trust — usually government securities — is immediately payable to the reinsurer.

Where the reinsurer is non-resident, even if interest on the underlying assets would normally be free of withholding tax if held directly — as in the case of government bonds — interest income payable to the reinsurer will normally be subject to tax under paragraph 212(1)(c) as a distribution of trust income. Subsection 212(11) deems amounts paid or credited to a person beneficially interested in a trust to be paid as trust income regardless of their source. By way of exception, subsection 212(9) provides that in certain specified cases, no tax is payable under paragraph 212(1)(c) if the underlying payment received by the trust would not have been subject to withholding tax if it had been paid directly to the non-resident. None of the specified cases, however, covers the present situation.

Given the regulatory role performed by reinsurance trusts, we will recommend that subsection 212(9) of the Act be extended to interest received by a trust created under a reinsurance trust agreement to which OSFI is a party established in accordance with OSFI's guidelines relating to reinsurance arrangements with unregistered reinsurers. We will recommend that this amendment be effective for amounts paid or credited to a non-resident person after 2000 as income of or from such a trust.

While I cannot give any assurance that the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation in this regard, I hope that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

If you have any further questions with respect to this issue, please contact Lawrence Purdy of the Tax Legislation Division at 996-0602.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Emweine, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

 - (iii) extracts minerals from a mineral resource in Canada

pays or credits an amount (other than an amount to which subsection (13) applies) to another non-resident person, the first-mentioned non-resident person shall be deemed, in respect of the portion of that amount that was deductible in computing that person's taxable income earned in Canada for any taxation year, to be a person resident in Canada.

(13.2) Application of Part XIII tax — non-resident operates in Canada — For the purposes of this Part, a particular non-resident person, who in a taxation year pays or credits to another non-resident person an amount other than an amount to which subsection (13) applies, is deemed to be a person resident in Canada in respect of the portion of the amount that is deductible in computing the particular non-resident person's taxable income earned in Canada for any taxation year from a source that is neither a treaty-protected business nor a treaty-protected property.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 179(15), will amend subsec. 212(13.2) to read as above, applicable to amounts paid or credited under obligations entered into after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 212(13.2) is one of several provisions that extend Part XIII tax to apply in particular circumstances — in this case, for the most part, the payment by a non-resident of royalties and similar amounts in respect of a Canadian income source. The principle that underlies subsection 212(13.2) is that if a non-resident has Canadian-source business or resource income, and can deduct in computing that income (strictly speaking, in computing "taxable income earned in Canada") a payment to another non-resident, that payment ought to be treated for purposes of Part XIII tax as though it had been made by a person resident in Canada. This is accomplished by treating the first non-resident — the one making the payment — as a person resident in Canada for those purposes. In its current form, subsection 212(13.2) applies only if the non-resident making the payment carries on business principally in Canada, manufactures or processes goods in Canada or carries out any of various resource activities here. On the other hand, the rule does not explicitly link that business or activity to the deductibility of the payment: it can be read as applying whether or not the payment is made in relation to the particular business or activity.

Accordingly, subsection 212(13.2) is amended to apply in respect of any portion of a payment (other than one to which the generally comparable rule in subsection 212(13) applies) made by one non-resident person to another that is deductible in computing the first non-resident's taxable income earned in Canada from any source. The only exceptions are payments that are deductible in respect of treaty-protected businesses or treaty-protected properties (as defined in subsection 248(1)).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 14, 2003:

KPMG LLP, Montréal, Québec

Dear Mr. [xxx]

I am writing in response to your letter of February 25, 2003, to Lawrence Purdy of this Division. In that letter, you identify a concern with the effective date that has been proposed, in the December 2002 draft technical amendments, for a change to subsection 212(13.2) of the Income Tax Act. The question you raise is an important one, and I appreciate your patience in awaiting this reply.

Subsection 212(13.2) treats certain non-resident persons as though they were resident in Canada, for purposes of the non-resident withholding tax applied by Part XIII of the Act. Specifically, the provision in its current form applies to a non-resident person who either carries on business principally in Canada, manufactures or processes goods here, or extracts Canadian mineral or oil and gas resources, and makes a payment to another non-resident that is deductible in computing the payer's taxable income earned in Canada. Where it applies, the subsection deems the payer to be resident in Canada in respect of the payment, with the result that Part XIII tax may be required to be withheld.

The draft technical amendments released on December 20, 2002 propose to extend this deeming rule to any non-resident who pays to another non-resident an amount that is deductible in computing the payer's taxable income earned in Canada from a source that is neither a treaty-protected business nor a treaty-protected property. As a practical matter, this would make subsection 212(13.2) potentially applicable to any non-resident who carries on business in Canada — provided, in the case of a resident of a country with which Canada has a tax treaty, that the business is carried on through a Canadian permanent establishment.

I gather from your letter that you do not question the policy basis for this amendment, but rather its entry into force. As proposed, the amendment would apply to amounts paid or credited after December 20, 2002. You suggest that this may impose an inappropriate burden on a non-resident who was already obliged to pay to another non-resident an amount — such as interest — that will now attract withholding tax. Had it known when it negotiated the debt that withholding tax could apply, the borrower (who may be required to spare the lender any Canadian tax effect) might have structured the borrowing to conform to the exception in subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii), or might have borrowed from a Canadian lender. The alternative of renegotiating the loan now could be costly and difficult for both parties.

I agree that applying this measure in respect of debt obligations that are already outstanding could unduly inconvenience some taxpayers, and that a less abrupt entry into force would not be objectionable in policy terms. We will therefore recommend that the version of the amendment that is submitted to Parliament apply the change to amounts paid under obligations entered into after December 20, 2002.

While I can, as you know, offer no assurance that the Minister of Finance of Parliament as a whole will accept our recommendation, I trust that our intentions in this regard respond to your concerns.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 30, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in response to your letter of August 27, 2003, to Lawrence Purdy of this Division. In that letter you refer to a comfort letter dated May 14, 2003 regarding the December 2002 proposed amendment to subsection 212(13.2) of the Income Tax Act. In our May 14 letter we stated that we would recommend that the version of the amendment that is submitted to Parliament apply the change to amounts paid under obligations entered into after December 20, 2002. The specific example we responded to concerned a debt obligation. You have asked us to confirm that the proposed grandfathering will apply to any obligation entered into on or before December 20, 2002, and not be restricted to debt obligations.

We confirm that we intend to recommend that the proposed grandfathering apply to any obligation entered into on or before December 20, 2002, and not be restricted to debt obligations. Therefore, as set out in your letter, royalties paid to a non-resident corporation pursuant to a trademark licence agreement entered into on or before December 20, 2002 are not intended to be subject to the proposed amendment.

While we can, as you know, offer no assurance that the Minister of Finance or Parliament as a whole will accept our recommendations, we trust that our intentions in this regard respond to your concerns.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(13.3) Application of Part XIII to authorized foreign bank — An authorized foreign bank is deemed to be resident in Canada for the purposes of

- (a) this Part, in respect of any amount paid or credited to or by the bank in respect of its Canadian banking business; and
- (b) the application in paragraph (13.1)(b) of the definition "Canadian partnership" in respect of a partnership interest held by the bank in the course of its Canadian banking business.

Proposed Amendment — 212(13.3) — Property held by authorized foreign bank

Letter from Dept. of Finance, July 13, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in response to your letter of May 3, 2001 to James Greene, formerly of this Division, regarding the Income Tax Act's recently-enacted rules for the taxation of foreign bank branches. Although your letter raises several different questions, including matters of administration as well as of policy and legislative design, I understand from subsequent contacts with your colleague [xxx] that the most pressing issue for you and your clients at this time relates to non-resident withholding tax. I propose, therefore, in this reply to address only that point, reserving your other questions for further consideration.

On the issue of the obligation to withhold amounts on account of tax, you identify three areas of concern. The first is with respect to the payment by a resident of Canada to an authorized foreign bank of an amount, such as interest, that would ordinarily be subject to tax under Part XIII of the Act. Under new subsection 212(13.3) of the Act, the bank is deemed to be resident in Canada for this purpose — and the payer need not withhold tax — provided the interest is "in respect of (the bank's) Canadian banking business." You point out that it is not clear how the Canadian-resident payer will know whether this test is met, given that the payer can be expected to have only limited information about the bank's operations. You ask whether provisions comparable to Regulations 800 to 804 (which apply to non-resident insurers) might be contemplated, under which the bank itself, rather than those making payments to it, would be responsible for any tax arising under Part XIII.

A second, related point concerns the withholding obligations that may arise, under Part I of the Act and Regulation 105, in respect of payments made by a resident of Canada to an authorized foreign bank for services provided by the bank. Although there is no rule deeming the bank to be resident in Canada, many of the considerations that led to such a rule in the context of Part XIII tax are relevant here as well; the bank's business is carried on in Canada, and a person making a payment to the bank cannot always be presumed to know the details of the bank's situation.

Third, you ask whether we anticipate recommending that the withholding and clearance obligations under section 116 of the Act, which generally apply where a non-resident disposes of taxable Canadian property, not apply in respect of property held in an authorized foreign bank's Canadian banking business.

On each of these three points the current requirements, as they apply to the Canadian business of an authorized foreign bank, do seem in policy terms excessive. It is therefore our general intention to propose that the requirements be moderated. Although the details of any relieving proposals remain to be determined, the broad direction of our thinking is as follows. First, with respect to Part XIII taxation, it should be possible to provide that the payor's reasonable belief, or a presumption based on the payee's address, will suffice to relieve the payor from possible liability. A similar test could be applied for purposes of an exemption from the withholding requirements of Regulation 105 [see now Reg. 105(2)(b) — ed.]. Finally, the definition "excluded property" in section 116 could be expanded to cover property held by an authorized foreign bank in the course of carrying on its Canadian banking business: such a change could be made either in the statutory definition itself [this has been done: see 116(6)(f) — ed.] or in Regulation 810.

While our views on these points are subject to further refinement, and I can offer no assurance that the Minister will accept our recommendations, we expect that measures along the general lines I have described will be included in the next package of draft technical amendments. This is currently scheduled for release later this year. The changes would apply after June 27, 1999, to coincide with other aspects of the taxation rules for authorized foreign banks.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — Former 212(19)(B)(i)

(i) 10 times the greatest amount determined, under the laws of the province or provinces in which the taxpayer is a registered securities dealer, to be the capital employed by the taxpayer at the end of the day, and

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007, requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 179(16), will amend subpara. (b)(i) of the description of B in former subsec. 212(19) to read as above, applicable to securities lending arrangements entered into after May 28, 1993, but only until 212(19) was replaced effective Jan. 1, 2008 (per Bill C-28, S.C. 2007, c. 35, s. 97(1)).

Technical Notes: Subsection 212(19) imposes a tax on Canadian-resident registered securities dealers that enter into certain securities lending arrangements described in subparagraph 212(1)(b)(xii). The tax is calculated, by formula, based in Part on the capital or the margin requirement of the relevant provincial laws governing the registration or license of securities dealers.

An earlier amendment to subsection 212(19) removed a reference to the provincial laws under which the taxpayer is registered or licensed. The subsection is further amended, as a consequence of that earlier change, to replace the words “those laws” in subparagraph (b)(i) of the description of B in the formula (which no longer have any clear antecedent), with a specific reference to the provincial legislation that govern the registration or license of securities dealers.

(ii) 20 times the greatest amount of capital required under those laws to be maintained by the taxpayer as a margin in respect of securities described in clause (1)(b)(xii)(A) at the end of the day, and

and shall remit that amount to the Receiver General on or before the 15th day of the month after the month in which the day occurs.

The portion of subsec. 212(19) before the formula amended by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 73(3), applicable to securities lending arrangements entered into after May 28, 1993. That portion formerly read:

(19) Tax on securities traders — Every taxpayer resident in Canada who is registered or licensed under the laws of one or more provinces to trade in securities shall pay a tax under this Part equal to the amount determined by the formula

Subsec. 212(19) added by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 97(6), applicable to securities lending arrangements entered into after May 28, 1993.

(20) Designated SLA — For the purpose of subsection (19), a designated securities lending arrangement is a securities lending arrangement

(a) under which

(i) the lender is a prescribed financial institution or a registered securities dealer resident in Canada,

(ii) the particular security lent or transferred is an obligation described in paragraph (a) of the definition “fully exempt interest” in subsection (3) or an obligation of the government of any country, province, state, municipality or other political subdivision,

(iii) the amount of money provided to the lender at any time during the term of the arrangement either as collateral or as consideration for the particular security does not exceed 110% of the fair market value at that time of the particular security; and

(b) that was neither intended, nor made as a part of a series of securities lending arrangements, loans or other transactions that was intended, to be in effect for more than 270 days.

Proposed Amendment — 216(1) opening words

216. (1) Alternatives re rents and timber royalties — If an amount has been paid during a taxation year to a non-resident person or to a partnership of which that person was a member as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, rent on real or immovable property in Canada or a timber royalty, that person may, within two years (or, if that person has filed an undertaking described in subsection (4) in respect of the year, within six months) after the end of the year, file a return of income under Part I for that year in prescribed form. On so filing and without affecting the liability of the non-resident person for tax otherwise payable under Part I, the non-resident person is, in lieu of paying tax under this Part on that amount, liable to pay tax under Part I for the year as though

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 181(1), will amend the opening words of subsec. 216(1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Section 216 allows a non-resident person to file a return of income under Part I in respect of rent on real property in Canada or timber royalties and to pay, instead of the non-resident withholding tax under Part XIII, tax under Part I on the basis of the non-resident’s income from the rent or royalties.

Subsection 216(1), which provides the basic rule permitting a non-resident to be taxed under Part I of the Act on this income, is amended to improve its structure and language. Most of the changes are stylistic; the amendment also updates the subsection's reference to the form of the non-resident's Part I tax return, to reflect the implementation of a special return for these non-residents.

(a) the non-resident person were a person resident in Canada and not exempt from tax under section 149;

(b) the non-resident person's income from the non-resident person's interest in real property in Canada, timber resource properties and timber limits in Canada and the non-resident person's share of the income of a partnership of which the non-resident person was a member from its interest in real property in Canada, timber resource properties and timber limits in Canada were the non-resident person's only income;

Proposed Amendment — 216(1)(b)

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 3 — bijuralism), subsec. 269(1), will amend para. 216(1)(b) by substituting "real property, or real right in immovables, in Canada and interest in, or for civil law right in" for "real property in Canada" in two places, to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: See under 12(4).

(c) the non-resident person were entitled to no deductions from income for the purpose of computing the non-resident person's taxable income; and

(d) the non-resident person were entitled to no deductions under sections 118 to 118.9 in computing the non-resident person's tax payable under Part I for the year.

Possible Future Amendment — Requirement for non-resident to post security

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 17, 1996:

Mr. Donald H. Watkins, Chair, Taxation Section, The Canadian Bar Association

Mr. Robert Spindler, C.A., Chair, Taxation Committee, Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants

Dear Messrs. Watkins and Spindler:

At our recent meeting we discussed the possibility of revising the Canadian income tax rules governing the taxation of rental income earned by non-resident owners of Canadian real estate. This letter outlines a proposal that would, if implemented, place the risk of a non-resident's non-compliance with the Canadian tax system on the non-resident rather than the non-resident's Canadian property agent.

In general, Part XIII of the Income Tax Act levies a withholding tax of 25% on rental payments made by Canadians to non-resident owners of Canadian real property. Where the non-resident collects the rent through a Canadian agent (who is typically a building or property manager), the agent is responsible for ensuring that 25% of the gross rental payments are remitted to Revenue Canada. An exception to this general rule exists where a non-resident elects, under section 216 of the Act, to file a Canadian income tax return in respect of the rental income and pay tax on the net property income.

To make the election the non-resident and the non-resident's Canadian agent are required to provide an undertaking to Revenue Canada to file an income tax return for the rental income within six months of the end of the relevant year. Where an election is made, the rule requiring the Canadian agent to remit 25% of the gross rental payments to Revenue Canada does not apply; instead, only 25% of the net amount of rent received by the agent need be remitted. However, if the non-resident fails to either file an income tax return or pay his tax liability within the time required under the election, the Canadian agent becomes liable for the amount that the agent would ordinarily have been required to withhold under Part XIII of the Act (i.e., 25% of the gross rental payments) less the amount of tax actually remitted. The non-resident's tax liability is placed on the Canadian agent in an attempt to protect the government from the loss of any tax revenue arising from the non-resident's failure to pay the required tax. This mechanism is necessary because, in practice, it would be very difficult to enforce a tax liability on non-resident property owners.

We are considering alternatives to the current system which may reduce the liability of Canadian agents while at the same time protecting Canada's tax base. To achieve these objectives, we are prepared to consider a system which would require non-resident property owners to post security with Revenue Canada in order to take advantage of the election to file an income tax return and avoid having tax withheld on the gross amount of the rental payments. Where the non-resident fails to pay the required amount of tax within the specified time, the government would be able to look to the security; accordingly, the Canadian agent's exposure to tax could be reduced. In this context, acceptable security could be similar to that which is required under section 116 of the Act.

Finance is not, however, committed to this proposal; it remains our view that the current system works reasonably well from the government's viewpoint, and implementation of the alternative proposal would be considered only if it were thought to provide a better system from the taxpayer's perspective. This alternative has been outlined to a number of real estate organizations and other interested parties from whom we hope to gather comments over the course of the coming months.

I would also note that at our recent meeting you raised the possibility of considering changes to the existing time limits for filing a Part I income tax return under subsection 216(4). We would be pleased to receive written comments on your suggestion for modifying those time limits or on the alternative system outlined above.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber, Director, Tax Legislation Division

Related Provisions: 96 — Partnerships and their members; 216(1) — Alternative rents and timber royalties.

History: Subsec. 216(4) amended by 1998, c. 19, s. 217, applicable to amounts paid or credited after November 1991. Subsec. 216(4) formerly read:

(4) Where a non-resident person or each non-resident person who is a member of a partnership has filed with the Minister an undertaking in prescribed form to file a return of income under Part I for a taxation year as permitted by this section but within 6 months from the end of the taxation year, a person who is otherwise required by subsection 215(3) to remit in the year an amount to the Receiver General in payment of tax on rent on real property or in payment of tax on a timber royalty may elect, by virtue of this section, not to remit under that subsection but if the [elector] does so elect

(a) the [elector] shall, when any amount is available out of the rent or royalty received for remittance to the non-resident person or the partnership, as the case may be, deduct therefrom 25% thereof and remit the amount deducted to the Receiver General on behalf of the non-resident person or the partnership on account of the tax under this Part, and

(b) the [elector] shall, if the non-resident person or each non-resident person who is a member of the partnership

(i) does not file a return for the taxation year in accordance with the undertaking filed by the non-resident person or member with the Minister, or

(ii) does not pay the tax the non-resident person or member is liable to pay for the taxation year under this section within the time limited for payment, pay to the Receiver General, on the expiration of the time for filing or payment, as the case may be, the full amount that the [elector] would otherwise have been required to remit in the year minus the amounts that the [elector] has remitted in the year under paragraph (a).

Forms: NR6: Undertaking to file an income tax return by a non-resident receiving rent from real property or receiving a timber royalty; T1159: Income tax return for electing under s. 216; T2 SCH 97: Additional information on non-resident corporations in Canada; T4144: Income tax guide for electing under section 216.

Proposed Addition — 216(4.1)

(4.1) Optional method of payment — If a trust is deemed by subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada for a taxation year for the purpose of computing the trust's income for the year, a person who is otherwise required by subsection 215(3) to remit in the year, in respect of the trust, an amount to the Receiver General in payment of tax on rent on real or immovable property or on a timber royalty may elect in prescribed form filed with the Minister under this subsection not to remit under subsection 215(3) in respect of amounts received after the election is made, and if that election is made, the elector shall,

(a) when any amount is available out of the rent or royalty received for remittance to the trust, deduct 25% of the amount available and remit the amount deducted to the Receiver General on behalf of the trust on account of the trust's tax under Part I; and

(b) if the trust does not file a return for the year as required by section 150, or does not pay the tax that the trust is liable to pay under Part I for the year within the time required by that Part, on the expiration of the time for filing or payment, as the case may be, pay to the Receiver General, on account of the trust's tax under Part I, the amount by which the full amount that the elector would otherwise have been required to remit in the year in respect of the rent or royalty exceeds the amounts that the elector has remitted in the year under paragraph (a) in respect of the rent or royalty.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part I — NRTs and FIEs), s. 39, will add subsec. 216(4.1), applicable to trust taxation years that begin after 2006, except that

(a) it also applies to a trust taxation year beginning before 2007 if s. 94 applies to that taxation year of the trust; and

(b) an election referred to in subsec. 216(4.1) is deemed to have been filed with the Minister of National Revenue on a timely basis if it is filed with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the trust's filing due date for the taxation year of the trust that includes the day on which former Bill C-10 is assented to.

Technical Notes: In general, Part XIII of the Act imposes a withholding tax of 25% on rental payments made by Canadians to non-resident owners of Canadian real property. An exception to this general rule exists where a non-resident chooses, under subsection 216(4), to file a Canadian income tax return in respect of the rental income and timber royalty income and pay tax on the net amount of such income. Where the conditions of subsection 216(4) are satisfied, the rule requiring a Canadian payer (or agent of the payee pursuant to s. 215(3)) to remit 25% of the gross payment to the Canada Revenue Agency does not apply; instead, only 25% of the net amount of income received by the non-resident's agent need be remitted.

Although an otherwise non-resident trust to which paragraph 94(3)(a) applies is deemed resident in Canada for the purposes of determining the trust's liability under Part XIII on amounts paid or credited to the trust, for the purpose of determining the liability of a Canadian payer on amounts paid or credited to the trust, the trust is effectively treated as resident in Canada [sic; should read non-resident — ed.] (see paragraph 94(4)(c) and section 215).

Subsection 216(4.1) is introduced to provide a measure of relief in these circumstances. Under that subsection, if a trust is deemed by subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada for a taxation year for the purpose of computing the trust's income for the year, a person who is otherwise required by subsection 215(3) to remit in the year, in respect of the trust, an amount to the Receiver General in payment of tax on rent on real property or on a timber royalty may elect in prescribed form filed with the Minister under this subsection not to remit under subsection 215(3) in respect of amounts received after the election is made. Under paragraphs 216(4.1)(a) and (b), if that election is made, the elector shall,

• when any amount is available out of the rent or royalty received for remittance to the trust, deduct 25% of the amount available and remit the amount deducted to the Receiver General on behalf of the trust on account of the trust's tax under Part I; and

• if the trust does not file a return for the year as required by section 150, or does not pay the tax that the trust is liable to pay under Part I for the year within the time required by that Part, on the expiration of the later of the time for filing or payment, as the case may be, pay to the Receiver General, on account of the trust's tax under Part I, the amount by which the full amount that the elector would otherwise have been required to remit in the year in respect of the rent or royalty exceeds the amounts that the elector has remitted in the year under paragraph 216(4.1)(a) in respect of the rent or royalty.

(5) Disposition by non-resident of interest in real property, timber resource property or timber limit — Where a person or a trust of which that person is a beneficiary has filed a return of income under Part I for a taxation year as permitted by this section or as required by section 150 and, in computing the amount of the person's income under Part I an amount has been deducted under paragraph 20(1)(a), or is deemed by subsection 107(2) to have been allowed under that paragraph, in respect of real property in Canada, a timber resource property or a timber limit in Canada, the person shall, within the time prescribed by section 150 for filing a return of income under Part I, file a return of income under Part I, in the form prescribed for a person resident in Canada, for any subsequent taxation year in which the person was a non-resident person and in which that real property, timber resource property or timber limit or any interest therein is disposed of, within the meaning of section 13, by the person or by a partnership of which the person is a member, and the person shall, without affecting the person's liability for tax otherwise payable under Part I, thereupon be liable, in lieu of paying tax under this Part on any amount paid, or deemed by this Part to have been paid to the person or to a partnership of which the person is a member in that subsequent taxation year in respect of any interest in real property, timber resource property or timber limit in Canada, to pay tax under Part I for that subsequent taxation year as though

Proposed Amendment — 216(5) opening words

(5) Disposition by non-resident — If a person or a trust under which a person is a beneficiary has filed a return of income under Part I for a taxation year as permitted by this section or as required by section 150 and, in computing the amount of the person's income under Part I an amount has been deducted under paragraph 20(1)(a), or is deemed by subsection 107(2) to have been allowed under that paragraph, in respect of property that is real property in Canada — or an interest therein — or an immovable in Canada — or a real right therein —, a timber resource property or a timber limit in Canada, the person shall file a return of income under Part I in prescribed form on or before the person's filing-due date for any subsequent taxation year in which the person is non-resident and in which the person, or a partnership of which the person is a member, disposes of that property or any interest, or for civil law any right, in it. On so filing and without affecting the person's liability for tax otherwise payable under Part I, the person is, in lieu of paying tax under this Part on any amount paid, or deemed by this Part to have been paid, in that subsequent taxation year in respect of any interest in, or for civil law any right in, that property to the person or to a partnership of which the person is a member, liable to pay tax under Part I for that subsequent taxation year as though

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 181(2), will amend the opening words of subsec. 216(5) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: In general terms, subsection 216(5) requires that a person who has previously made an election under subsection 216(1), and who has claimed capital cost allowance in computing income under the subsection, must file a return of income for the year in which the property that was the subject of the election is disposed of. Subsection 216(5) is modified in the same manner as subsection 216(1), again with the main change being an updated description of the relevant form.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Feb. 15, 2000: See under 118.1(5.4), (6).

(a) the person were a person resident in Canada and not exempt from tax under section 149;

(b) the person's income from the person's interest in real property, timber resource property or timber limits in Canada and the person's share of the income of a partnership of which the person was a member from its interest in real property, timber resource property or timber limits in Canada were the person's only income;

Proposed Amendment — 216(5)(b)

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 3 — bilingualism), subsec. 269(4), will amend para. 216(5)(b) by substituting "real property, or real right in immovables, in Canada or interest in, or for civil law right in" for "real property" in two places and "resource properties and" for "resource property or" in two places, to come into force on Royal Assent.

(c) the person were entitled to no deductions from income for the purpose of computing the person's taxable income; and

(d) the person were entitled to no deductions under sections 118 to 118.9 in computing the person's tax payable under Part I for the year.

(6) Saving provision — Subsection (5) does not apply to require a non-resident person

(a) to file a return of income under Part I for a taxation year unless, by filing that return, there would be included in computing the non-resident person's income under Part I for that year an amount by virtue of section 13; or

(b) to include in computing the non-resident person's income for a taxation year any amount to the extent that that amount has been included in computing the non-resident person's taxable income earned in Canada for that taxation year by virtue of any provision of this Act other than subsection (5).

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 181(3), will repeal subsec. 216(7), in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: Subsection 216(7) provides that the rules in section 61, dealing with income averaging annuity contracts, do not apply in computing a non-resident person's income for a taxation year in respect of which subsection 216(5) applies to the person. Since section 61 is no longer relevant to any current transaction, subsection 216(7) is repealed.

(8) Restriction on deduction — For greater certainty, in determining the amount of tax payable by a non-resident person under Part I for a taxation year by reason of subsection (1) or (5), no deduction in computing the non-resident person's income or tax payable under Part I for the year shall be made to the extent that such a deduction by non-resident persons is not permitted under Part I.

"assessable distribution", in respect of a Canadian property mutual fund investment, means the portion of any amount that is paid or credited (otherwise than as a SIFT trust wind-up event), by the mutual fund that issued the investment, to a non-resident investor who holds the investment, and that is not otherwise subject to tax under Part I or Part XIII.

Related Provisions: 53(2)(h)(i.1)(B)(III) — Assessable distribution not deducted from adjusted cost base of capital interest in trust.

History: The definition "assessable distribution" in subsec. 218.3(1) amended by 2009, c. 2, s. 74, applicable after July 14, 2008. It formerly read:

"assessable distribution", in respect of a Canadian property mutual fund investment, means the portion of any amount that is paid or credited, by the mutual fund that issued the investment, to a non-resident investor who holds the investment, and that is not otherwise subject to tax under Part I or Part XIII.

"Canadian property mutual fund investment" means a share of the capital stock of a mutual fund corporation, or a unit of a mutual fund trust, if

(a) the share or unit is listed on a designated stock exchange; and

(b) more than 50% of the fair market value of the share or unit is attributable to one or more properties each of which is real property in Canada, a Canadian resource property or a timber resource property.

History: Para. (a) of the definition "Canadian property mutual fund investment" in subsec. 218.3(1) amended to substitute "designated stock exchange" for "prescribed stock exchange" by 2007, c. 35, para. 68(2)(c), applicable after December 13, 2007.

"Canadian property mutual fund loss" — of a non-resident investor for a taxation year for which the non-resident investor has filed, on or before their filing-due date for the taxation year, a return of income under this Part in prescribed form, in respect of a Canadian property mutual fund investment — means the lesser of

(a) the non-resident investor's loss (for greater certainty as determined under section 40) for the taxation year from the disposition of the Canadian property mutual fund investment, and

(b) the total of all assessable distributions that were paid or credited on the Canadian property mutual fund investment after the non-resident investor last acquired the investment and at or before the time of the disposition.

"non-resident investor" means a non-resident person or a partnership other than a Canadian partnership.

"unused Canadian property mutual fund loss", of a non-resident investor for a taxation year, means the portion of the total of the non-resident investor's Canadian mutual fund property losses for preceding taxation years that has neither reduced under subsection (3) the amount of tax payable, nor increased under subsection (5) the amount of a refund of tax paid, under this Part for any preceding taxation year.

(2) Tax payable — If at any time a person (referred to in this section as the "payer") pays or credits, to a non-resident investor who holds a Canadian property mutual fund investment, an amount as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, an assessable distribution,

(a) the non-resident investor is deemed for the purposes of this Act, other than section 150, to have disposed at that time, for proceeds equal to the amount of the assessable distribution, of a property

(i) that is a taxable Canadian property the adjusted cost base of which to the non-resident investor immediately before that time is nil, and

(ii) that is in all other respects identical to the Canadian property mutual fund investment;

(b) the non-resident investor is liable to pay an income tax of 15% on the amount of any gain (for greater certainty as determined under section 40) from the disposition; and

(c) the payer shall, notwithstanding any agreement or law to the contrary,

(i) deduct or withhold 15% from the amount paid or credited,
(ii) immediately remit that amount to the Receiver General on behalf of the non-resident investor on account of the tax, and

(iii) submit with the remittance a statement in prescribed form.

(3) Use of losses — If a non-resident investor files, on or before their filing-due date for a taxation year, a return of income under this Part in prescribed form for the taxation year, the non-resident investor is liable, instead of paying tax under paragraph (2)(b) in respect of any amount paid or credited in the taxation year, to pay an income tax of 15% for the taxation year on the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of the non-resident investor's gains under subsection (2) for the taxation year

exceeds

(b) the total of the non-resident investor's Canadian property mutual fund losses for the year and the non-resident investor's unused Canadian property mutual fund loss for the taxation year.

Forms: T1262: Part XIII.2 tax return for non-resident's investments in Canadian mutual funds.

(5) Refund — The amount, if any, by which the total of all amounts paid on account of a non-resident investor's tax under subsection (3) for a taxation year exceeds the non-resident investor's liability for tax under this Part for the taxation year shall be refunded to the non-resident investor.

(6) Excess loss — carryback — If a non-resident investor files, on or before their filing-due date for a taxation year, a return of income under this Part in prescribed form for the taxation year, the Minister shall refund to the non-resident investor an amount equal to the lesser of

(a) the total amount of tax under this Part paid by the non-resident investor in each of the three preceding taxation years, to the extent that the Minister has not previously refunded that tax, and

(b) 15% of the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of the non-resident investor's Canadian property mutual fund losses for the taxation year and the non-resident investor's unused Canadian property mutual fund loss for the taxation year

exceeds

(ii) the total of all assessable distributions paid or credited to the non-resident investor in the taxation year.

Related Provisions: 218.3(7) — Ordering.

(7) Ordering — In applying subsection (6), amounts of tax are to be considered to be refunded in the order in which they were paid.

(8) Partnership filing-due date — For the purposes of this Part, the taxation year of a partnership is its fiscal period and the filing-due date for the taxation year is to be determined as if the partnership were a corporation.

(9) Partnership — member resident in Canada — If a non-resident investor is a partnership a member of which is resident in Canada, the portion of the tax paid by the partnership under this Part in respect of an assessable distribution paid or credited to the partnership in a particular taxation year of the partnership (or, if the partnership files a return of income for the particular taxation year in accordance with subsection (3), the portion of the tax paid by the partnership under that subsection for the taxation year) that can reasonably be considered to be the member's share is deemed

(a) to be an amount paid on account of that member's liability for tax under Part I for that member's taxation year in which the particular taxation year of the partnership ends; and

(b) except for the purposes of this subsection, to be neither a tax paid on account of the partnership's tax under this Part nor a tax paid by the partnership.

Proposed Addition — 220(2.2)

(2.2) Exception — Subsection (2.1) does not apply in respect of a prescribed form, receipt or document, or prescribed information, that is filed with the Minister on or after the day specified, in respect of the form, receipt, document or information, in subsection 37(11) or paragraph (m) of the definition "investment tax credit" in subsection 127(9).

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 182(1), will add subsec. 220(2.2), applicable in respect of a prescribed form, receipt and document, and prescribed information, filed with the Minister of National Revenue after November 16, 2005 other than a prescribed form, receipt or document, or prescribed information, in respect of which the Minister has received, before November 17, 2005, a request made in writing that the Minister waive the filing requirements in subsec. 37(11) and para. (m) of the definition "investment tax credit" in subsec. 127(9) that apply, but for any waiver, to the expenditures to which the prescribed form, receipt or document, or prescribed information, relates.

Technical Notes: Under subsection 220(2.1), if a provision of the Act or the Regulations requires a person to file a prescribed form, receipt or other document, or to provide prescribed information, the Minister may waive the requirement, but the document or information shall be provided at the Minister's request.

New subsection 220(2.2) provides that subsection 220(2.1) does not extend to a prescribed form, receipt, document or information, or prescribed information, that is filed on or after the day specified — in respect of the form, receipt, document or information — in subsection 37(11) or paragraph (m) of the definition "investment tax credit" in subsection 127(9). Those provisions provide, in general, that a taxpayer's claim for SR&ED treatment be made in a prescribed form that must be received by the Minister no later than 12 months after the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxation year in which the expenditures were made.

The effect of new subsection 220(2.2) is that a person cannot deduct a scientific research and experimental development (SR&ED) expenditure under section 37, or claim an investment tax credit in respect of an expenditure, if the person takes more than the additional 12 months allowed to make a claim with the Minister.

Background

Late Claims for Tax Incentives

To be eligible for the SR&ED tax incentives and investment tax credits, taxpayers are required under the tax law to identify eligible expenditures on a prescribed form that is to be filed with the Minister of National Revenue no later than 12 months after the filing-due date for the tax return in respect of the taxation year in which the expenditures were made. This rule was first announced in the 1994 budget, and was added to stem a significant increase at that time in late claims for SR&ED tax incentives. The rule also applies to claims related to other amounts eligible for investment tax credits. However, under the Income Tax Act, the Minister of National Revenue does have the discretion to waive this deadline.

The ability to waive the 12-month filing deadline has come under increasing pressure as taxpayers have sought to file additional claims. The proposed amendments clarify with certainty that there will be no exception to the 12-month filing deadline for applications for investment tax credits and SR&ED treatment.

(3) Extensions for returns — The Minister may at any time extend the time for making a return under this Act.

Related Provisions: 127.4(5.1) — Authorization for late LSVCC investments; 146(22) — Authorization for late RRSP contributions; 220(3.2) — Late filing of elections.

History: Subsec. 220(3) amended by 2006, c. 4, subsec. 164(1), applicable in respect of extensions granted after March 31, 2007. The subsec. formerly read:

(3) The Minister may at any time extend the time for making a return under this Act. However, the extension does not apply for the purpose of calculating a penalty that a person is liable to pay under section 162 if the person fails to make the return within the period of the extension.

Subsec. 220(3) amended by 2003, c. 15, s. 129, applicable in respect of extensions granted after February 18, 2003. The subsec. formerly read:

(3) The Minister may at any time extend the time for making a return under this Act.

Possible Future Addition — 227(5.2)–(5.4) — Bank interference with remittance cheques

The Dec. 12, 1995 Notice of Ways and Means Motion proposed to add 227(5.2)–(5.4) (and would have numbered what is now 227(5.2) as 227(5.5)), to come into force on Royal Assent. These provisions would generally have made a secured creditor with influence over what cheques or payments can clear (such as a bank) liable for refusing to clear (or otherwise interfering with) remittances of withholdings, unless all payments were being stopped. (Similar proposals for GST remittances were in proposed Excise Tax Act s. 323.1.) However, the banks and other financial institutions promised to comply voluntarily, and the proposals were put on hold to allow the CRA to monitor this compliance. They have now been “suspended indefinitely”, and a “re-announcement would be necessary” if they were to be reintroduced (Finance email to David Sherman, Aug. 6, 2009). (B) governed by an employees profit sharing plan; or

(c) a trust

- (i) where the interest of each beneficiary under the trust is described by reference to units, and
- (ii) that complies with prescribed conditions.

Proposed Repeal — 233.2(1) “specified beneficiary”

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part I — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 40(1), will repeal the definition “specified beneficiary” in subsec. 233.2(1), applicable on the same basis as the amendment of subsec. 233.2(2).

Technical Notes: Existing section 233.2 requires certain persons who have made transfers or loans to a “specified foreign trust”, or to a non-resident corporation that is a controlled foreign affiliate of such a trust, to file annual information returns with respect to the trust. A “specified foreign trust”, as defined in subsection 233.2, includes a trust with a “specified beneficiary” resident in Canada. As defined in subsection 233.2(1), a “specified beneficiary” is generally any beneficiary under the trust with the exception of persons listed in subparagraphs (a)(i) to (x) of the definition. For a return to be required to be filed as a consequence of a transfer or loan, it is necessary to have a “non-arm's length indicator”, as set out in subsection 233.2(2), apply in respect of the transfer or loan. One of the cases where a “non-arm's length indicator” applies in respect of a transfer to a trust is where the transferor is a “specified beneficiary” under the trust. Subsection 233.2(3) provides a lookthrough rule so that, where a partnership transfers property, it is considered to have been transferred by members of the partnership.

New section 94 sets out new rules governing the taxation of non-resident trusts. In order to be consistent with the new rules:

- the definitions “specified beneficiary” and “specified foreign trust” in section 233.2 are repealed,
- there is no longer a requirement for a “non-arm's length indicator”, so the existing rule in subsection 233.2(2) is repealed,
- except as described below, the definitions and rules of application in subsections 94(1), (2) and (10) to (13) apply because of amended subsection 233.2(2), and

- there is no longer a requirement for an explicit look-through rule for partnerships in section 233.2, given that the rule in paragraph 94(2)(o) applies because of amended subsection 233.2(2). Consequently, subsection 233.2(3) is repealed.

Related Provisions: 248(10) — Series of transactions; 248(25) — Extended meaning of “beneficially interested”.

“specified foreign trust” at any time means a trust (other than an exempt trust) that is non-resident at that time where either

- (a) there is a specified beneficiary under the trust who at that time

- (i) is resident in Canada,
- (ii) is a corporation or trust with which a person resident in Canada does not deal at arm's length, or
- (iii) is a controlled foreign affiliate of a person resident in Canada; or

- (b) at that time the terms or conditions of the trust or any arrangement in respect of the trust

- (i) permit persons (other than persons described in any of subparagraphs (a)(i) to (viii) of the definition “specified beneficiary”) who are not beneficially interested in the trust at that time to become, because of the exercise of any discretion by any person or partnership, beneficially interested in the trust after that time, or

- (ii) allow property to be distributed, directly or indirectly, to another trust that immediately after the receipt of the distribution can reasonably be expected to be a specified foreign trust.

Proposed Repeal — 233.2(1) “specified foreign trust”

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part I — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 40(1), will repeal the definition “specified foreign trust” in subsec. 233.2(1), applicable on the same basis as the amendment of subsec. 233.2(2).

Technical Notes: See under 233.2(1) “specified beneficiary”.

Related Provisions: 248(25) — Extended meaning of “beneficially interested”.

(2) Non-arm's length indicators — For the purpose of this section,

- (a) a non-arm's length indicator applies to a trust at a particular time with respect to a transfer of property made at an earlier time to the trust or a corporation where

- (i) immediately after the earlier time the transferor was

- (A) a specified beneficiary under the trust,
- (B) a person related to a specified beneficiary under the trust,
- (C) an uncle, aunt, nephew or niece of a specified beneficiary under the trust, or
- (D) a trust or corporation that had, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, previously acquired the transferred property from a person described in clause (A), (B) or (C),

- (ii) the fair market value at the earlier time of the transferred property was greater than the amount, if any, by which

- (A) the total fair market value at the earlier time of the consideration, if any, given to the transferor for the transfer of property at the earlier time

exceeds

- (B) the portion of the total described in clause (A) that is attributable to the fair market value of an interest as a beneficiary in the trust or a share or debt issued by the corporation,

- (iii) the consideration received by the transferor in respect of the transfer included indebtedness on which

- (A) interest was not charged in respect of a period that began before the particular time,

(B) interest was charged in respect of a period that began before the particular time at a rate that was less than the lesser of

(I) the prescribed rate that was in effect at the earlier time, and

(II) the rate that would, having regard to all the circumstances, have been agreed on at the earlier time between parties dealing with each other at arm's length,

(C) any interest that was payable at the end of any calendar year that ended at or before the particular time was unpaid on the day that is 180 days after the end of that calendar year, or

(D) the amount of interest that was payable at the end of any calendar year that ended at or before the particular time was paid on or before the day that is 180 days after the end of that calendar year and it is established, by subsequent events or otherwise, that the payment was made as part of a series of loans or other transactions and repayments,

(iv) the property transferred was a share of the capital stock of a corporation or an interest in another trust and a specified beneficiary under the trust is related to the corporation or the other trust or would be so related if paragraph 80(2)(j) applied for the purposes of this subparagraph, or

(v) the transfer was made as part of a series of transactions or events one of the purposes of which was to avoid the application of this paragraph; and

(b) a non-arm's length indicator applies to a trust at a particular time with respect to a loan made at an earlier time where

(i) interest was not charged on the loan in respect of a period that began before the particular time,

(ii) interest was charged on the loan in respect of a period that began before the particular time at a rate that was less than the lesser of

(A) the prescribed rate that was in effect at the earlier time, and

(B) the rate that would, having regard to all the circumstances, have been agreed on at the earlier time between parties dealing with each other at arm's length,

(iii) any interest on the loan that was payable at the end of any calendar year that ended at or before the particular time was unpaid on the day that is 180 days after the end of that calendar year,

(iv) the amount of interest on the loan that was payable at the end of any calendar year that ended at or before the particular time was paid on or before the day that is 180 days after the end of that calendar year and it is established, by subsequent events or otherwise, that the payment was made as part of a series of loans or other transactions and repayments, or

(v) the loan was made as part of a series of transactions or events one of the purposes of which was to avoid the application of this paragraph.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 1 — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 40(2), will amend subsec. 233.2(2) to read as above, applicable to returns in respect of trust taxation years that begin after 2006, and to returns in respect of trust taxation years that begin

(d) where the transferor is resident in Canada at the end of the trust's year, the transferor shall make an information return in respect of the trust's year in prescribed form and file it with the Minister on or before the transferor's filing-due date for the transferor's taxation year that includes the end of the trust's year, and

(e) where

(i) the transferor was, at the transfer time, a corporation that would have been a controlled foreign affiliate of a particular person if the particular person had been resident in Canada, and

(ii) the particular person is resident in Canada at the end of the trust's year, the particular person shall make an information return in respect of the trust's year in prescribed form and file it with the Minister on or before the filing-due date for the particular person's taxation year that includes the end of the trust's year.

Proposed Amendment — 233.2(4)

(4) Filing information on foreign trusts — A person shall file an information return in prescribed form, in respect of a taxation year of a particular trust (other than an exempt trust or a trust described in any of paragraphs (c) to (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1)), with the Minister on or before the person's filing due date for the person's taxation year in which the particular trust's taxation year ends if

- (a) the particular trust is non-resident at a specified time in that taxation year of the particular trust;
- (b) the person is a contributor, a connected contributor or a resident contributor to the particular trust; and
- (c) the person
 - (i) is resident in Canada at that specified time, and
 - (ii) is not, at that specified time,
 - (A) a mutual fund corporation,
 - (B) a non-resident-owned investment corporation,
 - (C) a person all of whose taxable income for the person's taxation year that includes that time is exempt from tax under Part I,
 - (D) a mutual fund trust,
 - (E) a trust described in any of paragraphs (a) to (e.1) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1),
 - (F) a registered investment,
 - (G) a trust in which all persons beneficially interested are persons described in clauses (A) to (F), or
 - (H) a person who is a contributor to the particular trust by reason only of being a contributor to a trust described in any of clauses (C) to (G).

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part I — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 40(3), will amend subsec. 233.2(4) to read as above, applicable on the same basis as the amendment of subsec. 233.2(2). However, for trust taxation years that end on or before July 18, 2005, paras. 233.2(4)(a) and (b) are to be read as follows:

- (a) the particular trust is non-resident at the end of that taxation year of the particular trust;
- (b) a contribution has been made by the person to the particular trust at any time in that taxation year of the particular trust or in a preceding taxation year of the particular trust; and

A return required to be filed by a person because of subsec. 233.2(4), as amended, is deemed to have been filed with the Minister of National Revenue on a timely basis if it is filed with the Minister on or before the person's filing due date for the person's taxation year that includes the day on which former Bill C-10 is assented to.

Technical Notes: Under amended subsection 233.2(4), reporting will generally be required for a taxation year of a person if the person is a "contributor", "connected contributor" or "resident contributor" to a trust that is non-resident at a "specified time" in the taxation year, of the trust, that ends in that taxation year of the taxpayer. Because of amended subsection 233.2(2), the expressions "contributor", "contribution", "connected contributor", "resident contributor" and "specified time" generally carry the same meaning as in new section 94 (including by reference to deeming rules such as, for example, 94(12) and (13)), with most of the same exceptions for "arm's length transfers" contained in the definition of that expression in subsection 94(1). However, the exception in that definition against transfers of "restricted property" (as defined in subsection 94(1)) is extended to apply to most transfers described in paragraph 94(2)(g) (unless the transfer involves, generally, an issuance of a unit or share from a mutual fund trust, a mutual fund corporation or a corporation other than a closely-held corporation, as the case may be), with the result that such transfers do not give rise to an exception to the obligations for reporting under subsection 233.2(4). It should be noted that amended subsection 233.2(2) also applies for the purpose of new paragraph 233.5(c.1).

New subparagraph 233.2(4)(c)(ii) sets out a list of persons for whom reporting obligations are not imposed. This list is consistent with the list of beneficiaries who are not treated as "specified beneficiaries" under the existing rules in section 233.2.

Amended subsection 233.2(4) also exempts contributors from filing information returns under section 233.2 with regard to trusts described in paragraphs (c) to (h) of the new definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1). For more information in this regard, see the commentary on that definition.

Related Provisions: 94(7)(b) [proposed] — Limitation on person's liability for trust's tax when return filed; 162(10), (10.1) — Penalty for failure to file; 163(2.4)(b) — Minimum $24,000 penalty for false statement or omission; 220(2.1) — Waiver of filing requirement; 220(3) — Extension of time to file return; 233.2(2) — Presence of non-arm's length indicators; 233.2(4.1) — Similar arrangements; 233.2(5) — Election to use other person's information return; 233.3(3) — Requirement to file return re foreign property; 233.5 — Due diligence exception; 233.6(2)(b) — No return required on distribution from trusts where return required under 233.2; 233.7 —

No requirement to file in first year of immigration; 248(25.1) — Transfer to non-resident bare trust.

Forms: T1141: Information return re transfers or loans to a non-resident trust.

Proposed Addition — 233.2(4.1) [to be changed]

(4.1) Similar arrangements — In this section and sections 162, 163 and 233.5, a person's obligations under subsection (4) (except to the extent that they are waived in writing by the Minister) are to be determined as if a transfer or loan were a contribution to which paragraph (4)(b) applied, an arrangement or entity were a non-resident trust throughout the calendar year that includes the time referred to in paragraph (a) and that calendar year were a taxation year of the arrangement or entity, if

- (a) the person at any time, directly or indirectly, transferred or loaned the property to be held
 - (i) under the arrangement and the arrangement is governed by laws that are not laws of Canada or a province, or
 - (ii) by the entity and the entity is a non-resident entity (as defined by subsection 94.1(1));
- (b) the transfer or loan is not an arm's length transfer;
- (c) the transfer or loan is not solely in exchange for property that would be described in paragraphs (a) to (i) of the definition "specified foreign property" in subsection 233.3(1) if that definition were read without reference to paragraphs (j) to (q);
- (d) the arrangement or entity is not a trust in respect of which the person would, if this Act were read without reference to this subsection, be required to file an information return for a taxation year that includes that time; and
- (e) the arrangement or entity is, for a taxation year or fiscal period of the arrangement or entity that includes that time, not
 - (i) an exempt foreign trust (as defined in subsection 94(1)),
 - (ii) a foreign affiliate in respect of which the person is a reporting entity (within the meaning assigned by subsection 233.4(1)), or
 - (iii) an exempt trust.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part I — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 40(3), will add subsec. 233.2(4.1), applicable on the same basis as the amendment of subsec. 233.2(2).

Technical Notes: New subsection 94(3) provides that, where a non-resident trust has a resident contributor or resident beneficiary at the end of the trust's taxation year, the trust is generally taxed on its income in Canada for the year as if the trust were resident in Canada. However, the deeming provisions in subsection 94(3) apply only to arrangements that are considered to be trusts for Canadian income tax purposes. In some cases, there may be doubt as to whether a given arrangement is a trust for Canadian income tax purposes.

New subsection 233.2(4.1), in combination with subsection 233.2(4), imposes a filing obligation on contributors to certain entities or arrangements in respect of which reporting is not otherwise required. One of the key objectives of subsection 233.2(4.1) is to ensure that claims that section 94 does not apply can be reviewed by the Canada Revenue Agency.

More specifically, new subsection 233.2(4.1) applies where property has, directly or indirectly, been transferred or loaned by a person to be held

- under an arrangement governed by laws that are not laws of Canada or a province, or
- by a non-resident entity (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)).

The person must, where certain additional conditions are satisfied, file the information return referred to in amended subsection 233.2(4).

New subsection 233.2(4.1) provides that, except as the Minister of National Revenue otherwise permits in writing, the person has obligations under amended subsection 233.2(4) if all of the following conditions are satisfied:

- the transfer or loan is not an arm's length transfer (within the meaning that would be assigned by the definition "arm's length transfer" in subsection 94(1) as amended by subsection 233.2(2));
- the transfer or loan is not solely in exchange for property that would be described in paragraphs (a) to (i) of the definition "specified foreign property" in subsection 233.3(1) if that definition were read without reference to paragraphs (j) to (q) of that definition;
- the entity or arrangement is not a trust in respect of which the person would, without reference to subsection 233.2(4.1) and the explicit exemptions for filing returns contained in subsection 233.2(4), be required to file an information return for a taxation year that includes that time; and

- the entity or arrangement is, for a taxation year or fiscal period that includes that time, not
 - (i) an exempt foreign trust (as defined in subsection 94(1)),
 - (ii) foreign affiliate in respect of which the person is a reporting entity (as defined in subsection 233.4(1)), or
 - (iii) an exempt trust (as defined in subsection 233.2(4)).

Where the above conditions are satisfied, the person's obligations under subsection 233.2(4) and related provisions are determined as if:

- the transfer were a contribution to which paragraph 233.2(4)(a) applied;
- the entity or arrangement were a trust not resident in Canada throughout the calendar year that includes the time of the transfer or loan; and
- the taxation year of the entity or arrangement were that calendar year.

(5) Joint filing — Where information returns in respect of a trust's taxation year would, but for this subsection, be required to be filed under subsection (4) by a particular person and another person, and the particular person identifies the other person in an election filed in writing with the Minister, for the purposes of applying this Act to the particular person

- (a) the information return filed by the other person shall be treated as if it had been filed by the particular person;
- (b) the information required to be provided with the return by the particular person shall be deemed to be the information required to be provided by the other person with the return;
- (c) the day on or before which the return is required to be filed by the particular person is deemed to be the later of the day on or before which

- (i) the return would, but for this subsection, have been required to have been filed by the particular person, and
- (ii) the return is required to have been filed by the other person; and

- (d) each act and omission of the other person in respect of the return is deemed to be an act or omission of the particular person.

- (c) unless paragraph (b) of the definition "specified foreign trust" in subsection (1) applies, a non-arm's length indicator applied to the trust at the end of the trust's year with respect to the transfer or loan,

S. 233.2 added by 1997, c. 25, s. 69, applicable to returns in respect of trusts' taxation years that begin after 1995, except that such a return in respect of a taxation year that ends in 1996, 1997 or 1998 is required to be filed on or before the later of

- (a) April 30, 1998, and

- (b) the day on or before which the return is otherwise required to be filed.

233.3 [Reporting foreign property] — (1) Definitions — The definitions in this subsection apply in this section.

"reporting entity" for a taxation year or fiscal period means a specified Canadian entity for the year or period where, at any time (other than a time when the entity is non-resident) in the year or period, the total of all amounts each of which is the cost amount to the entity of a specified foreign property of the entity exceeds $100,000.

Related Provisions: 233.6(2)(c) — No return required on distribution from certain trusts to reporting entity.

"specified Canadian entity" for a taxation year or fiscal period means

- (a) a taxpayer resident in Canada in the year that is not
 - (i) a mutual fund corporation,
 - (ii) a non-resident-owned investment corporation,
 - (iii) a person (other than a trust) all of whose taxable income for the year is exempt from tax under Part I,
 - (iv) a trust all of the taxable income of which for the year is exempt from tax under Part I,
 - (v) a mutual fund trust,
 - (vi) a trust described in any of paragraphs (a) to (e.1) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1),

 - (viii) a trust in which all persons beneficially interested are persons described in subparagraphs (i) to (vii); and

- (b) a partnership (other than a partnership all the members of which are taxpayers referred to in any of subparagraphs (a)(i) to (viii)) where the total of all amounts, each of which is a share of the partnership's income or loss for the period of a non-resident member, is less than 90% of the income or loss of the partnership for the period, and, where the income and loss of the partnership are nil for the period, the income of the partnership for the period is deemed to be $1,000,000 for the purpose of determining a member's share of the partnership's income for the purpose of this paragraph.

Related Provisions: 94(1)(c)(i) [to be repealed], 94(3)(a)(vi) [proposed] — Certain trusts deemed resident in Canada; 248(25) — Meaning of "beneficially interested".

"specified foreign property" of a person or partnership means any property of the person or the partnership that is

- (a) funds or intangible property which are situated, deposited or held outside Canada,
- (b) tangible property situated outside Canada,

Proposed Amendment — 233.3(1) "specified foreign property" (a), (b)

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 3 — bijuralism), subsec. 277(1), will amend paras. (a) and (b) of the definition "specified foreign property" in subsec. 233.3(1) by substituting "intangible property, or for civil law incorporeal property, situated" for "intangible property which are situated" in para. (a), and "tangible property, or for civil law corporeal property," for "tangible property" in para. (b), to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: See under 12(4).

- (c) a share of the capital stock of a non-resident corporation,
- (d) an interest in a non-resident trust or a trust that, but for section 94, would be a non-resident trust for the purpose of this section,

Proposed Amendment — 233.3(1) "specified foreign property" (d)

- (d) an interest in a non-resident trust,

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 1 — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 41(4), will amend para. (d) of the definition “specified foreign property” in subsec. 233.3(1) to read as above, applicable to returns in respect of trust taxation years that begin after 2006, and to returns in respect of trust taxation years that begin

(a) after 2000, if the return relates to a trust that makes a valid election under para. (a) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94;

(b) after 2001, if the return relates to a trust that makes a valid election under para. (a) or (b) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94;

(c) after 2002, if the return relates to a trust that makes a valid election under any of paras. (a) to (c) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94;

(d) after 2003, if the return relates to a trust that makes a valid election under any of paras. (a) to (d) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94;

(e) after 2004, if the return relates to a trust that makes a valid election under any of paras. (a) to (e) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94; and

(f) after 2005, if the return relates to a trust that makes a valid election under any of paras. (a) to (f) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94.

Technical Notes: Section 233.3 provides reporting requirements in respect of foreign property. In general terms, it provides that certain taxpayers resident in Canada and certain partnerships must file an information return with respect to their “specified foreign property” if the total cost amount of such property exceeds $100,000. For this purpose, “specified foreign property” (as defined in subsection 233.3(1)) includes an interest in a non-resident trust or a trust that would be non-resident were it not for section 94. It does not include an interest in a non-resident trust that was not acquired for consideration by the person or partnership or a related person or partnership.

Paragraph (d) of the definition “specified foreign property” is amended by eliminating the reference to section 94. Under new subparagraph 94(3)(a)(vi), a trust is deemed to be resident in Canada only for the purpose of determining its obligation to file a return under section 233.3. As a result, such a deemed resident trust will be treated as resident in Canada in determining whether it is a specified Canadian entity and a reporting entity for purposes of section 233.3. In respect of the obligations of a person or partnership that has an interest in the trust, new paragraph 94(3)(a) does not apply to deem the trust to be resident in Canada. As a result, an interest in a trust, otherwise deemed to be resident in Canada, will be considered a specified foreign property unless otherwise expressly excluded.

(e) an interest in a partnership that owns or holds specified foreign property,

(f) an interest in, or right with respect to, an entity that is non-resident,

(g) indebtedness owed by a non-resident person,

(h) an interest in or right, under a contract, in equity or otherwise, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently, to any property (other than any property owned by a corporation or trust that is not the person) that is specified foreign property, and

Proposed Amendment — 233.3(1) “specified foreign property” (h)

(h) an interest in, or for civil law a right in, or a right — under a contract in equity or otherwise either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently — to, any property (other than any property owned by a corporation or trust that is not the person) that is specified foreign property, and

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 3 — bijuralism), subsec. 277(2), will amend para. (h) of the definition “specified foreign property” in subsec. 233.3(1) to read as above, to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: See under 12(4).

(i) property that, under the terms or conditions thereof or any agreement relating thereto, is convertible into, is exchangeable for or confers a right to acquire, property that is specified foreign property,

but does not include

(j) property that is used or held exclusively in the course of carrying on an active business of the person or partnership (determined as if the person or partnership were a corporation resident in Canada),

(k) a share of the capital stock or indebtedness of a non-resident corporation that is a foreign affiliate of the person or partnership for the purpose of section 233.4,

(l) an interest in, or indebtedness of, a non-resident trust that is a foreign affiliate of the person or partnership for the purpose of section 233.4,

Proposed Repeal — 233.3(1) “specified foreign property” (l)

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 1 — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 41(6), will repeal para. (l) of the definition “specified foreign property” in subsec. 233.3(1), applicable on the same basis as the amendment to para. (d).

Technical Notes: Paragraph (l) of the definition is repealed to eliminate a reference to trusts that are treated as foreign affiliates. This reference is no longer necessary in light of new section 94, under which non-resident trusts are no longer treated as foreign affiliates.

(m) an interest in a non-resident trust that was not acquired for consideration by either the person or partnership or a person related to the person or partnership,

(n) an interest in a trust described in paragraph (a) or (b) of the definition “exempt trust” in subsection 233.2(1),

(o) an interest in a partnership that is a specified Canadian entity,

(o.1) a right with respect to, or indebtedness of, an authorized foreign bank that is issued by, and payable or otherwise enforceable at, a branch in Canada of the bank.

(p) personal-use property of the person or partnership, and

(q) an interest in or right to acquire a property that is described in any of paragraphs (j) to (p).

Proposed Amendment — 233.3(1) “specified foreign property” (q)

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 3 — bijuralism), subsec. 277(3), will amend para. (q) of the definition “specified foreign property” in subsec. 233.3(1) by substituting “an interest in, or for civil law a right in, or a right to acquire,” for “an interest in or right to acquire”, to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: See under 12(4).

Proposed Amendment — 233.3(1) “specified foreign property” — Offshore investment funds and certain non-resident trusts

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: It is also proposed that the existing reporting requirements with respect to “specified foreign property” be expanded so that more detailed information is available for audit use. These additional measures are needed to ensure that the Canada Revenue Agency has the information and time required to identify and reassess those taxpayers who have not properly reported their income from transactions involving offshore investment fund properties and non-resident trusts. [For the full text of this proposal see Proposed Amendment to s. 94 — ed.]

(2) Application to members of partnerships — For the purpose of this section, a person who is a member of a partnership that is a member of another partnership

(a) is deemed to be a member of the other partnership; and

(b) the person’s share of the income or loss of the other partnership is deemed to be equal to the amount of that income or loss to which the person is directly or indirectly entitled.

(3) Returns respecting foreign property — A reporting entity for a taxation year or fiscal period shall file with the Minister for the year or period a return in prescribed form on or before the day that is

(a) where the entity is a partnership, the day on or before which a return is required by section 229 of the Income Tax Regulations to be filed in respect of the fiscal period of the partnership or would be required to be so filed if that section applied to the partnership; and

Related Provisions: 94(1)(c)(i) [to be repealed], 94(3)(a)(vi) [proposed] — Application to trust deemed resident in Canada; 162(7), (10), (10.1) — Penalty for failure to file; 163(2.4)(c) — Minimum $24,000 penalty for false statement or omission; 220(2.1) — Waiver of filing requirement; 220(3) — Extension of time to file return; 233(2) — Demand for return by partnership; 233.2(4) — Requirement to file return re transfers to foreign trusts; 233.7 — No requirement to file in first year of immigration.

Forms: T1 General income tax return; T1135: Foreign income verification statement.

History [s. 233.3]: Para. (o.1) added to the definition “specified foreign property” in subsec. 233.3(1) by 2001, c. 17, s. 184, applicable after June 27, 1999.

S. 233.3 added by 1997, c. 25, s. 69, applicable (as amended by 1999, c. 22, s. 91, deemed to have come into force on April 25, 1997) to returns for taxation years and fiscal periods that begin after 1997, except that such a return for a taxation year or fiscal period that ends in 1998 is required to be filed on or before the later of

(a) April 30, 1999, and

(b) the day on or before which the return is otherwise required to be filed.

(ii) the return is required to be filed under section 233.4 by a person or partnership in respect of a corporation that is a controlled foreign affiliate, for the purpose of that section, of the person or partnership, it was reasonable to expect, at the time of each transaction, if any, entered into by the person or partnership after March 5, 1996 that gives rise to the requirement to file the return or that affects the information to be reported in the return, that sufficient information would be available to the person or partnership to comply with that section; and

Proposed Amendment — 233.5(c), (c.1), (c.2)

(c) if the return is required to be filed under section 233.2 in respect of a trust, at the time of each transaction, if any, entered into by the person or partnership after March 5, 1996 and before June 23, 2000 that gave rise to the requirement to file a return for a taxation year of the trust that began before 2007 or that affects the information to be reported in the return, it was reasonable to expect that sufficient information would be available to the person or partnership to comply with section 233.2 in respect of each taxation year of the trust that began before 2007;

(c.1) if the return is required to be filed under section 233.2, at the time of each contribution (determined with reference to subsection 233.2(2)) made by the person or partnership after June 22, 2000 that gives rise to the requirement to file the return or that affects the information to be reported in the return, it was reasonable to expect that sufficient information would be available to the person or partnership to comply with section 233.2;

(c.2) if the return is required to be filed under section 233.4 by a person or partnership in respect of a corporation that is a controlled foreign affiliate for the purpose of that section of the person or partnership, at the time of each transaction, if any, entered into by the person or partnership after March 5, 1996 that gives rise to the requirement to file the return or that affects the information to be reported in the return, it was reasonable to expect that sufficient information would be available to the person or partnership to comply with section 233.4; and

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part I — NRTs and FIEs), s. 43, will amend para. 233.5(c) to read as above, and add paras. (c.1) and (c.2), applicable to returns in respect of taxation years that begin after 2006, and to taxation years that begin

(a) in 2001, 2002, 2003, 2004, 2005 or 2006 if the trust makes a valid election under para. (a) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94;

(b) in 2002, 2003, 2004, 2005 or 2006 if the trust makes a valid election under para. (a) or (b) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94;

(c) in 2003, 2004, 2005 or 2006 if the trust makes a valid election under any of paras. (a) to (c) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94;

(d) in 2004, 2005 or 2006 if the trust makes a valid election under any of paras. (a) to (d) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94;

(e) in 2005 or 2006 if the trust makes a valid election under any of paras. (a) to (e) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94; and

(f) in 2006 if the trust makes a valid election under any of paras. (a) to (f) of the Application of the amendment to s. 94.

Technical Notes: Section 233.5 provides that, where specified conditions set out in paragraphs 233.5(a) to (d) are met, information required in a return filed under section 233.2 or 233.4 does not include information that is not available to the person or partnership required to file the return. In the case of a return required to be filed by a person or partnership under section 233.2, paragraph 233.5(c) provides that it must be reasonable for the person or partnership to expect, at the time of each transaction entered into by the person or partnership after March 5, 1996 that either gives rise to the requirement to file the return or that affects the information to be reported in the return, that sufficient information would be available to the person or partnership to comply with section 233.2.

Paragraph 233.5(c) is amended so that it applies only in connection with transactions entered into before June 23, 2000 that gave rise to the requirement to file a return for a taxation year of the trust that began before 2003. In connection with trust returns required to be filed for trust taxation years that began before 2003, it must be reasonable for the person or partnership to expect that sufficient information would have been available to the person or partnership to comply with section 233.2 if the proposed amendments to section 94 were not taken into account.

Paragraph 233.5(c) is also amended so that it does not apply to returns required to be filed under section 233.4. It is replaced in this respect by new paragraph 233.5(c.2), without any change in the specified conditions for such returns.

Paragraph 233.5(c.1) is introduced in connection with returns required to be filed under section 233.2 by a person or partnership for a taxation year of the trust that begins after 2006. Where "contributions" (determined with reference to subsection 233.2(2), referred to in the commentary above) are made after June 22, 2000, relief under section 233.5 is available only if it was reasonable for the person or partnership to expect, at the time of each such contribution that either gives rise to the requirement to file the return or that affects the information to be reported in the return, that sufficient information would be available to the person or partnership to comply with section 233.2.

(d) if the information subsequently becomes available to the person or partnership, it is filed with the Minister not more than 90 days after it becomes so available.

Related Provisions: 233.2(4.1) — Foreign arrangements similar to trusts.

History [s. 233.5]: S. 233.5 added by 1997, c. 25, s. 69, applicable to returns required to be filed on or before a day that is after April 29, 1998.

(a) where the entity is a partnership, the day on or before which a return is required by section 229 of the Income Tax Regulations to be filed in respect of the fiscal period of the partnership or would be required to be so filed if that section applied to the partnership; and

Proposed Amendment — Proceeds of crime and money laundering

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: Tax Evasion and The Proceeds of Crime and Money Laundering Regime

The Criminal Code was amended in December 2001 as part of an internationally coordinated effort by developed countries to counter criminal and terrorist activities. The proceeds of crime and money laundering regime in the Criminal Code provides the Crown, in respect of certain criminal and terrorist activities, with enhanced powers to search, to seize and to retain proceeds of crime and to apply minimum terms of imprisonment to convicted criminals and terrorists who do not forfeit their proceeds of crime. In such cases, Canada is also assisted in investigating these serious offences (referred to as "designated offences" in the Criminal Code) by foreign governments under mutual legal assistance treaties.

Provisions in the Criminal Code can be applied to prosecute tax evasion offenses that constitute fraud, in which case the proceeds of crime and money laundering regime may be applicable. Indictable tax offences prosecuted under the Income Tax Act, the Excise Tax Act, the Excise Act (except for subsections 233(1) and 240(1)) and the Budget Implementation Act, 2000, however, were excluded from falling within the ambit of the proceeds of crime and money laundering regime.

Budget 2010 proposes to rationalize the rules concerning the application of the proceeds of crime and money laundering regime, and provide further support for international efforts to counter criminal and terrorist activities, by repealing the exclusion for indictable tax offences under the Income Tax Act, the Excise Tax Act, the Excise Act, and the Budget Implementation Act, 2000 from the definition of "designated offence" under the Criminal Code, such that the Crown will be able to prosecute these tax offences using that regime, regardless of whether prosecuted under the Criminal Code fraud provisions or the tax statutes. Budget 2010 also proposes consequential amendments to the Proceeds of Crime (Money Laundering) and Terrorist Financing Act consistent with the proposal above with respect to the Criminal Code.

Related Provisions: 243 — Minimum fine; Interpretation Act 34(1) — Indictable and summary conviction offences; Interpretation Act 34(2) — Criminal Code provisions apply.

Proposed Amendment — 241(4) — Social Insurance Number disclosure

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 17, 1999:

Dear [xxx]

This is in reply to your letter of March 12, 1999 to Simon Thompson with respect to the transfer of Social Insurance Numbers and business numbers from [xxx] to a nominee.

We understand that [xxx] plans to put in place an arrangement under which legal ownership of shares will, in many cases, be with a nominee of the shareholders. The nominee will receive dividend payments on the shares for which it is the registered owner, and will then distribute each dividend to the beneficial owners of the shares. As a consequence, the nominee will have an independent tax-reporting obligation under subsection 201(2) of the Income Tax Regulations. Under the existing law and the proposed amendments to it that were released on December 15, 1998, we agree that it may not be technically possible for [xxx] to provide Social Insurance Numbers and business numbers of beneficial owners to the nominee.

Given the reasons for the creation of the nominee in these circumstances, and in the interests of ensuring timely and complete reporting with regard to Social Insurance Numbers and business numbers, we are prepared to recommend an amendment to the Income Tax Act. The amendment would, in the circumstance set out in your letter, allow the transfer of this information to the nominee for the purpose of allowing the nominee to comply with tax reporting requirements.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendments — Tax avoidance information reporting

Dept. of Finance news release 2010-043, May 7, 2010: Government of Canada Seeks Public Input on Proposals to Require Information Reporting of Tax Avoidance Transactions

The Honourable Jim Flaherty, Minister of Finance, today released for public consultation proposals concerning an information reporting regime for certain tax avoidance transactions, as proposed in Budget 2010.

“These proposals seek to ensure that our income tax system is fair to all Canadians,” said Minister Flaherty. “They will help the Canada Revenue Agency to identify instances of aggressive tax planning, which can undermine the integrity of our income tax system.”

Budget 2010 put forth for consultation a proposal under which a tax avoidance transaction that bears at least two of three hallmarks of aggressive tax planning would be required to be reported to the Canada Revenue Agency. The proposals released today for consultation provide details about:

- the persons who would be subject to the reporting rules;
- the transactions that would be required to be disclosed;
- the proposed form, content and timing of disclosure; and
- the proposed consequences for failure to disclose a reportable transaction.

A background and a description of the proposals accompany this release.

The Government will review comments received in the course of these public consultations. As announced in Budget 2010, it is proposed that these measures, as modified to take into account the consultations, would apply to avoidance transactions entered into after 2010, as well as avoidance transactions that are part of a series of transactions that commenced before 2011 and will have been completed after 2010. Interested parties are invited to provide comments on these proposals by July 7, 2010.

Comments may be submitted to the Tax Legislation Division at the Department of Finance at consultations245@fin.gc.ca. Once received by the Department of Finance, all submissions will be subject to the Access to Information Act and may be disclosed in accordance with its provisions. Should you express an intention that your submission be considered confidential, the Department will make all efforts to protect this information within the requirements of the law.

Background

In Budget 2010, the Government announced that it would consult on a proposal under which certain tax avoidance transactions would be required to be reported to the Canada Revenue Agency. Today's release provides details of the proposals for public consultation, and is seeking views of stakeholders.

These proposals seek to address concerns about the impact of aggressive tax avoidance transactions on the fairness of the income tax system. Canada is not the only jurisdiction that has acted to address the impact of aggressive tax planning. Notably, the United Kingdom, the United States and the province of Québec have introduced reporting regimes that identify aggressive tax planning by reference to “hallmarks” of such tax planning, to assist their respective tax administrations in identifying potentially abusive transactions and their participants. In general terms, the particular hallmarks reflect certain circumstances that commonly exist in the context of tax avoidance transactions. The presence of these hallmarks often indicates a greater likelihood that the underlying transactions are ones that could be challenged under the existing provisions of the tax law.

Budget 2010 therefore proposed consultations on a reporting regime for Canada. These proposals, as modified to take into account the public consultations, would apply to avoidance transactions entered into after 2010, as well as avoidance transactions that are part of a series of transactions commenced before 2011 and completed after 2010.

Description of the proposals

Terms used in this description are defined below. Generally, under these proposals:

- A transaction entered into by a taxpayer that is an avoidance transaction — as currently defined under the Income Tax Act — and which bears at least two of three hallmarks (described below) would be a “reportable transaction” in respect of which the taxpayer would be required to report prescribed information to the Canada Revenue Agency. Tax advisors and promoters may also be subject to the reporting requirements.
- Persons subject to the reporting requirements may be liable to a penalty for failure to disclose a reportable transaction.
- Upon discovery of a reportable transaction that has not been reported when required, the Canada Revenue Agency would be empowered to deny the tax benefit resulting from the transaction. If the taxpayer still wants to claim the tax benefit, the taxpayer would be required to file with the Canada Revenue Agency the information that should have been reported as well as to pay a late-filing penalty.

Reportable transaction

Under these proposals, a reportable transaction would be a transaction entered into by or for the benefit of a taxpayer that is classified within the existing definition of an “avoidance transaction” and that bears at least two of the following three hallmarks:

1. A promoter or tax advisor in respect of the transaction is entitled to fees that are to any extent
- attributable to the amount of the tax benefit from the transaction;

- contingent upon the obtaining of a tax benefit from the transaction; or
- attributable to the number of taxpayers who participate in the transaction or who have been provided access to advice given by the promoter or advisor regarding the tax consequences from the transaction.

2. A promoter or tax advisor in respect of the transaction requires "confidential protection" with respect to the transaction.

3. The taxpayer or the person who entered into the transaction for the benefit of the taxpayer obtains "contractual protection" in respect of the transaction (otherwise than as a result of a fee described in the first hallmark).

A reportable transaction would include all the transactions in a series of transactions if at least one of the transactions in that series is an avoidance transaction. Reporting would be required for the taxation year in which a tax benefit arises.

If a reportable transaction is also a tax shelter or a flow-through share arrangement, only the reporting requirement for tax shelters or flow-through shares would apply.

Persons subject to the reporting requirements

Under these proposals, an information return would be required to be filed with the Canada Revenue Agency by a person who seeks to obtain a tax benefit from a reportable transaction. This reporting requirement would also apply to any person who enters into such a transaction for the benefit of a taxpayer, such as where the result of a series of transactions undertaken by a corporation is that a tax benefit will accrue to a current or future shareholder of the corporation.

If one or more promoters or tax advisors are entitled to fees as described in the hallmarks with respect to that transaction, each such promoter or tax advisor would also have to file an information return with the Canada Revenue Agency.

If more than one person is required to file an information return in respect of a reportable transaction, the filing of a complete disclosure by one of the parties will satisfy the obligation of each party.

Form and content of information return

The information return with respect to a reportable transaction would be required to be filed in prescribed form on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxation year in which the tax benefit arose. Where the taxpayer who sought to obtain the tax benefit does not have a filing-due date, the prescribed form would be required to be filed before June 30 of the calendar year following the calendar year in which the tax benefit arose.

The Canada Revenue Agency will publish guidance in respect of the manner in which a transaction is to be reported and the information that will be required to be reported.

Disclosure of a reportable transaction would have no bearing on whether the benefit is allowed under the law; rather it would simply assist the Canada Revenue Agency in identifying the transaction and the taxpayer who seeks to obtain a tax benefit from the transaction. In this regard, disclosure of a reportable transaction would not be considered in any way as an admission that the General Anti-Avoidance Rule (GAAR) applies to the transaction, or that the transaction is an avoidance transaction for the purpose of the GAAR. Furthermore, the fact that reporting of a particular transaction may not be required under these proposed rules should not be taken to suggest that the GAAR does not apply to the transaction.

Consequences for failure to report

Suspension of the tax benefit

Any tax benefit sought to be obtained by a taxpayer from a reportable transaction would not be available until the transaction is reported and, if applicable, the penalty for failure to disclose the transaction is paid.

Penalty for failure to report

If an information return in respect of a reportable transaction is not filed as and when required, each person who is required to file would be liable to pay a penalty, notwithstanding any agreement between the parties as to who is to file the return. In such circumstances, the penalty payable by any taxpayer who sought to obtain a tax benefit from the reportable transaction would be the total of all amounts each of which is a fee in respect of the transaction, described in a hallmark, to which a promoter or tax advisor is or would be entitled to receive. All other persons who entered into the transaction for the benefit of the taxpayer would be jointly and severally liable with the taxpayer to pay that penalty. Each promoter or tax advisor in respect of the reportable transaction would be jointly and severally liable with the taxpayer, and with all the other persons that entered into the transaction for the benefit of the taxpayer, to pay the portion of the penalty that would be equal to all the fees to which that promoter or tax advisor is or would be entitled to receive and that are included in computing that penalty.

Due diligence

Any person required to file an information return in respect of a reportable transaction would not be liable for a penalty for a failure to file that return as and when required if the person has exercised the degree of care, diligence and skill to prevent the failure that a reasonably prudent person would have exercised in comparable circumstances.

Definitions

The following are general descriptions of definitions that would apply for the purpose of these proposals.

Avoidance Transaction

The existing definition of an "avoidance transaction" for the purposes of the General Anti-Avoidance Rule (GAAR) in the Income Tax Act would apply. Therefore, an avoidance transaction would mean any transaction

- that, but for the GAAR, would result, directly or indirectly, in a tax benefit, unless the transaction may reasonably be considered to have been undertaken or arranged primarily for bona fide purposes other than to obtain the tax benefit; or
- that is part of a series of transactions that, but for the GAAR, would result, directly or indirectly, in a tax benefit, unless the transaction may reasonably be considered to have been undertaken or arranged primarily for bona fide purposes other than to obtain the tax benefit.

Confidential Protection

A "confidential protection" with respect to a transaction would mean any limitation on disclosure to any other person, including the Canada Revenue Agency, that is placed by a promoter or tax advisor on the taxpayer, or on a person who entered into the transaction for the benefit of the taxpayer, in respect of the details or structure of the avoidance transaction that give rise to any tax benefit. This would not extend to a requirement that the advisor's professional liability exists only towards the taxpayer in the capacity of client and according to which a third party may not, for its own purposes, rely on the opinion given by the advisor to the client.

Contractual protection

A "contractual protection" with respect to a transaction would mean any form of insurance (other than standard professional liability insurance), indemnity or compensation that

- protects against a failure of the transaction to result in any portion of the tax benefit being sought from the transaction;
- pays for or reimburses any expenses to be incurred in respect of a tax benefit arising from a transaction; or
- is intended to guarantee a return of, or in respect of, the cost of any property acquired by the taxpayer in the course of the transaction.

Fee

A "fee" would mean any consideration that is, or could be, received or receivable by a promoter or tax advisor in respect of a transaction for

- advice with respect to that transaction;
- implementing the transaction;
- preparing the documents supporting the transaction, including tax returns or any information returns to be filed under the Income Tax Act; or
- a contractual protection.

Fee attributable to a tax benefit

A fee would be attributable to a tax benefit if the fee is based, in whole or in part, on the amount of a tax benefit sought to be obtained from a transaction by a taxpayer.

Fee that is to any extent contingent upon the obtaining of a tax benefit

A fee of a promoter or tax advisor that is to any extent contingent upon the obtaining of a tax benefit would include a fee that is refundable based upon the obtaining of the tax benefit, in whole or in part, in any manner whatever.

Person

A "person" would include a partnership.

Promoter

A "promoter" would be a person who

- engages in an activity that is the promoting or selling (whether as principal or agent and whether directly or indirectly) of an arrangement, plan or scheme (an "arrangement") where it can reasonably be considered that the arrangement includes or relates to an avoidance transaction; or
- accepts (whether as principal or agent and whether directly or indirectly) consideration in respect of the promotion or sale of an arrangement where it can reasonably be considered that the arrangement includes or relates to an avoidance transaction.

More than one person may be a promoter in respect of the same avoidance transaction.

Tax Advisor

A "tax advisor" would mean a person who, directly or indirectly, provides

- any aid, assistance or advice with respect to organizing or implementing an avoidance transaction entered into by or for the benefit of a taxpayer; or
- any contractual protection in respect of an avoidance transaction.

A person who provides such aid, assistance or advice to another tax advisor or promoter in respect of an avoidance transaction would also be considered a tax advisor in respect of the transaction.

More than one person may be a tax advisor in respect of the same avoidance transaction.

Tax Benefit

The existing definition of "tax benefit" for the purposes of the General Anti-Avoidance Rule in the Income Tax Act would apply for the purpose of these proposals.

Application date

These proposals, as modified to take into account the public consultations, would apply to avoidance transactions entered into after 2010, as well as avoidance transactions that are part of a series of transactions that commenced before 2011 and was completed after 2010.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: Information Reporting of Tax Avoidance Transactions — Public Consultation

Budget 2010 announces a public consultation on proposals to require the reporting of certain tax avoidance transactions. The Government will undertake consultations with stakeholders on these proposals, with a view to improving the fairness of the Canadian tax system. Details of these proposals will be released at the earliest opportunity and the consultation process will be announced at that time.

The fairness of the Canadian income tax system is essential to ensure the integrity of Canada's self-assessment system. Ensuring this fairness requires a balancing between a taxpayer's entitlement to plan their affairs in a manner that legally minimizes their tax liability and the need to ensure that the tax law is not abused. Aggressive tax planning arrangements entered into by some taxpayers can undermine the tax base and the fairness and integrity of the tax system, to the detriment of all Canadians.

The Income Tax Act already contains a number of substantive rules intended to counter aggressive tax planning. In some cases, these rules help identify certain transactions and their participants. In other cases, the rules deny the tax benefits sought to be obtained (including, but not limited to, the General Anti-Avoidance Rule).

However, in order to be able to effectively apply these substantive rules, the Canada Revenue Agency must be able to identify aggressive tax planning in a timely manner. In this regard, there are already information reporting requirements for tax shelters, as defined in the Income Tax Act. The reporting regime for tax shelters assists the Canada Revenue Agency to ensure that the benefits provided by a tax shelter are not unintended, inappropriate or contrary to a provision of the tax law. However, a significant number of aggressive tax planning arrangements do not meet the definition in the law of a tax shelter. Currently, there is no specific information reporting regime that identifies for the Canada Revenue Agency other types of potentially abusive tax avoidance transactions.

Budget 2010 therefore proposes a regime under which a tax "avoidance transaction" that features at least two of three "hallmarks" would be a "reportable transaction" that must be reported to the Canada Revenue Agency. The proposed hallmarks would reflect certain circumstances that commonly exist when taxpayers enter into tax avoidance transactions. Although the hallmarks are not themselves evidence of abuse, their presence often indicates that underlying transactions are present that carry a higher risk of abuse of the income tax system. In this regard, the proposed regime is similar to, but less strict than, the reporting regimes of other jurisdictions that use hallmarks as a means of identifying aggressive tax planning, such as those of the United States, the United Kingdom and most recently, the Province of Québec. This would minimize the possibility that normal tax planning would be subject to these proposals.

For this purpose, a reportable transaction would be an avoidance transaction, as currently defined in the Income Tax Act, that is entered into by or for the benefit of a taxpayer that bears at least two of the following three hallmarks:

1. A promoter or tax advisor in respect of the transaction is entitled to fees that are to any extent
 - attributable to the amount of the tax benefit from transaction,
 - contingent upon the obtaining of a tax benefit from the transaction, or
 - attributable to the number of taxpayers who participate in the transaction or who have been provided access to advice given by the promoter or advisor regarding the tax consequences from the transaction.

2. A promoter or tax advisor in respect of the transaction requires "confidential protection" about the transaction.

3. The taxpayer or the person who entered into the transaction for the benefit of the taxpayer obtains "contractual protection" in respect of the transaction (otherwise than as a result of a fee described in the first hallmark).

A transaction that is a tax shelter or a flow-through share arrangement will not be impacted by these proposals, but will be subject to the existing requirements for tax shelters and flow-through shares.

Upon discovery of a reportable transaction that has not been reported when required, the Canada Revenue Agency could deny the tax benefit resulting from the transaction. If the taxpayer still wanted to claim the tax benefit, it would be required to file with the Canada Revenue Agency any required information and to pay a penalty. The disclosure of a reportable transaction would have no bearing on whether the benefit is allowed under the law; rather it would simply assist the Canada Revenue Agency in identifying the transaction. In this regard, the disclosure of a reportable transaction would not be considered in any way as an admission that the General Anti-Avoidance Rule applies to the transaction.

These proposals, as modified to take into account the consultations, would apply to avoidance transactions entered into after 2010, as well as those that are part of a series of transactions completed after 2010.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 11, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in response to your letter dated December 19, 2002 in which you requested that an amendment be made to the transfer pricing rules in section 247 of the Income Tax Act to exclude explicitly from the ambit of those rules, certain loan guarantees provided by Canadian resident corporations in respect of their controlled foreign affiliates.

In your letter, you noted that subsection 247(7) of the Act provides an exception, from the ambit of the transfer pricing rules, for certain loans made by a Canadian resident parent corporation to its controlled foreign affiliates. Specifically, that subsection provides that where a non-resident person owes an amount to a corporation resident in Canada, the non-resident person is a controlled foreign affiliate of the corporation for the purposes of section 17 of the Act and the amount owing is described in either paragraph 17(8)(a) or (b), subsection 247(2) will not apply to adjust the amount of interest paid, payable or accruing in the year on the amount owing. In general terms, an amount owing is described in paragraph 17(8)(a) or (b) if it arose as a loan, or advance of money, that was used by the affiliate to earn active business income or if it arose in the course of an active business carried on by the affiliate.

We agree that it would be appropriate in tax policy terms to provide for a parallel exception to the transfer pricing rules for guarantees provided by Canadian resident corporations in respect of controlled foreign affiliates. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended to provide that subsection 247(2) of the Act will not apply to adjust the amount of consideration paid, payable or accruing to a corporation resident in Canada (the "parent") in a particular taxation year of the parent for the providing of a guarantee of the repayment, in whole or in part, of an amount owing by a non-resident person to a person or partnership (the "lender"), if

- the parent provided the guarantee pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into with the lender or with a person related to the lender,
- the non-resident person is a controlled foreign affiliate of the parent for the purpose of section 17 of the Act throughout the period in the particular year during which the amount owing is owing, and
- it is established that the amount owing would, if the amount owing were an amount owing to the parent, be an amount owing described in paragraph 17(8)(a) or (b).

If these recommendations are acted upon, I would anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

We will recommend that the amendment apply prospectively, with taxpayers having an option to also apply it to taxation years that begin after 1997. For taxation years that begin before February 24, 1998, the above-noted definition (of "controlled foreign affiliate") and descriptions from section 17, as it currently reads, would be applied.

I wish to thank you for raising this matter with us.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber, General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Jan. 24, 2005:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in response to your letter dated October 27 and 28, 2004 in connection with section 247 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

In a comfort letter dated March 11, 2003 issued on behalf of the Tax Legislation Division, we indicated that we were prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance an amendment to the Act in connection with section 247. The March 11, 2003 letter was drafted to address particular sets of circumstances.

In your correspondence, you ask that our recommended amendments to the Minister be modified to address a broader range of circumstances under which a corporation resident in Canada may guarantee an amount owing by a non-resident but not provide that guarantee in writing. To support your request, you cite examples of where a corporation resident in Canada could provide a guarantee of a non-resident's debt without written agreements between the corporation resident in Canada and the lender.

We concur with your view. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended so that subsection 247(2) of the Act will not apply to adjust the amount of consideration paid, payable or accruing to a corporation resident in Canada (the "parent") in a particular taxation year of the parent for the provision of a guarantee of the repayment, in whole or in part, of an amount owing by a non-resident person, if

- the non-resident person is a controlled foreign affiliate of the parent for the purpose of section 17 of the Act throughout the period in the particular year during which the amount owing is owing, and

- it is established that the amount owing would, if the amount owing were an amount owing to the parent, be an amount owing described in paragraph 17(8)(a) or (b).

If these recommendations are acted upon, I would anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

We will recommend that the amendment apply prospectively, with taxpayers having an option to also apply it to taxation years that begin after 1997. For taxation years that begin before February 24, 1998, the above-noted definition (of "controlled foreign affiliate") and descriptions from section 17, as it currently reads, would be applied.

In your correspondence, you also suggested that the Act be amended to provide that subsection 247(2) of the Act not apply to adjust the amount of consideration paid, payable or accruing to a corporation resident in Canada for the giving of a guarantee of the amounts owing by a controlled foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada as lessee under a lease of property. Although there may be some similarities as between a guarantee relating to a debt obligation and a guarantee relating to a lease obligation, I am not prepared, at this time, to recommend such an amendment without comprehensive review of the facts and information concerning the lease arrangements referred to in your letter. Should you provide the required facts and information, we will study your suggestion as part of our ongoing review of the provisions of the Act.

Thank you for your correspondence.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber

“disposition” of any property, except as expressly otherwise provided, includes

(a) any transaction or event entitling a taxpayer to proceeds of disposition of the property,

(b) any transaction or event by which,

(i) where the property is a share, bond, debenture, note, certificate, mortgage, agreement of sale or similar property, or an interest in it, the property is redeemed in whole or in part or is cancelled,

Proposed Amendment — 248(1) “disposition” (b)(i)

(i) where the property is a share, bond, debenture, note, certificate, mortgage, hypothecary claim, agreement of sale or similar property, or an interest, or for civil law a right, in it, the property is in whole or in part redeemed, acquired or cancelled,

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(3), will amend subpara. (b)(i) of the definition “disposition” in subsec. 248(1) to read as above, applicable to redemptions, acquisitions and cancellations that occur after December 23, 1998 and, where a particular redemption, acquisition or cancellation occurs before December 21, 2002, any assessment of a taxpayer’s tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for a taxation year that includes the time at which the particular redemption, acquisition or cancellation occurred shall, notwithstanding subssecs. 152(4) to (5), be made that is necessary to take into account the application of the amendment.

Technical Notes: The expression “disposition” is used throughout the Act, particularly in provisions relating to transactions involving property.

The definition “disposition” was added to subsection 248(1) by S.C. 2001, chapter 17, ss. 188(5) [formerly Bill C-22] [2001 technical bill — ed.]. In general, that definition is applicable to transactions and events that occur after December 23, 1998. The former definition “disposition” was contained in section 54, applicable to transactions and events that occurred before December 24, 1998.

Under the definition “disposition” in subsection 248(1), a “disposition” of any property includes a transaction or an event described in any of paragraphs (a) to (d) of that definition but does not include a transaction or an event described in any of paragraphs (e) to (m) of that definition.

Under subparagraph (b)(i) of that definition, a disposition of a property includes any transaction or event by which, where the property is a share, bond, debenture, note, certificate, mortgage, agreement of sale or similar property, or an interest in it, the property “is redeemed in whole or in part or is cancelled”.

The definition “disposition” in subsection 248(1) is amended in the following ways.

First, subparagraph (b)(i) of the definition now provides that a disposition of property includes any transaction or event by which, where the property is a share, bond, debenture, note, certificate, mortgage, agreement of sale or similar property, or an interest in it, the property “is in whole or in part redeemed, acquired or cancelled”. This amendment makes it clear that a disposition will also include a transaction or event by which the property is acquired.

In connection with redemptions, acquisitions and cancellations that occur before December 24, 1998, see the commentary to new subsection 248(1.1).

(ii) where the property is a debt or any other right to receive an amount, the debt or other right is settled or cancelled,

(iii) where the property is a share, the share is converted because of an amalgamation or merger,

(iv) where the property is an option to acquire or dispose of property, the option expires, and

(v) a trust, that can reasonably be considered to act as agent for all the beneficiaries under the trust with respect to all dealings with all of the trust’s property (unless the trust is described in any of paragraphs (a) to (e.1) of the definition “trust” in subsection 108(1)), ceases to act as agent for a beneficiary under the trust with respect to any dealing with any of the trust’s property.

Proposed Addition — 248(1) “disposition” (b.1) [to be changed or deleted]

(b.1) where the property is an interest in a life insurance policy, a disposition within the meaning of section 148,

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 1 — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 44(4), will add para. (b.1) to the definition “disposition”, applicable to taxation years that begin after 2006, except that it also applies to a taxation year of a taxpayer that begins before 2007 if ss. 94.1 to 94.4 apply to that taxation year of the taxpayer.

Technical Notes [foreign investment entities, now withdrawn]: The definition “disposition” is amended to add new paragraph (b.1). New paragraph (b.1) of the definition ensures that, where a property is an interest in a life insurance policy, what would constitute a disposition for the purposes of section 148 will also constitute a disposition for the entire Act.

Related Provisions: 148(9) “disposition” — Disposition of life insurance policy.

(c) any transfer of the property to a trust or, where the property is property of a trust, any transfer of the property to any beneficiary under the trust, except as provided by paragraph (f) or (k), and

(d) where the property is, or is part of, a taxpayer’s capital interest in a trust, except as provided by paragraph (h) or (i), a payment made after 1999 to the taxpayer from the trust that can reasonably be considered to have been made because of the taxpayer’s capital interest in the trust,

but does not include

(e) any transfer of the property as a consequence of which there is no change in the beneficial ownership of the property, except where the transfer is

(i) from a person or a partnership to a trust for the benefit of the person or the partnership,

(ii) from a trust to a beneficiary under the trust, or

(iii) from one trust maintained for the benefit of one or more beneficiaries under the trust to another trust maintained for the benefit of the same beneficiaries,

(f) any transfer of the property as a consequence of which there is no change in the beneficial ownership of the property, where

(i) the transferor and the transferee are trusts,

(ii) the transfer is not by a trust resident in Canada to a non-resident trust,

Proposed Amendment — 248(1)“disposition”(f)(i), (ii)

(i) the transferor and the transferee are trusts that are, at the time of the transfer, resident in Canada,

(ii) [Repealed]

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(4), will replace subparas. (f)(i) and (ii) of the definition “disposition” in subsec. 248(1) with subpara. (f)(i), applicable to transfers that occur after February 27, 2004.

Technical Notes: Third, the definition “disposition” in subsection 248(1) is also amended by restricting the circumstances in which a transfer of property between trusts will not be treated as a disposition. In particular, paragraph (f) of the definition is amended so that a transfer of property from a trust to another trust will avoid, under that paragraph, characterization as a disposition only if both trusts are, at the time of the transfer, resident in Canada.

(iii) the transferee does not receive the property in satisfaction of the transferee’s right as a beneficiary under the transferor trust,

(iv) the transferee held no property immediately before the transfer (other than property the cost of which is not included, for the purposes of this Act, in computing a balance of undeducted outlays, expenses or other amounts in respect of the transferee),

(v) the transferee does not file a written election with the Minister on or before the filing-due date for its taxation year in which the transfer is made (or on such later date as is acceptable to the Minister) that this paragraph not apply,

(vi) if the transferor is an amateur athlete trust, a cemetery care trust, an employee trust, an inter vivos trust deemed by subsection 143(1) to exist in respect of a congregation that is a constituent part of a religious organization, a related segregated fund trust (in this paragraph having the meaning assigned by section 138.1), a trust described in paragraph 149(1)(o.4) or a trust governed by an eligible funeral arrangement, an employees profit sharing plan, a registered disability savings plan, a registered education savings plan, a registered supplementary unemployment benefit plan or a TFSA, the transferee is the same type of trust, and

(vii) the transfer results, or is part of a series of transactions or events that results, in the transferor ceasing to exist and, immediately before the time of the transfer or the beginning of that series, as the case may be, the transferee never held any property or held only property having a nominal value,

(g) [Repealed]

(h) where the property is part of a capital interest of a taxpayer in a trust (other than a personal trust or a trust prescribed for the purpose of subsection 107(2)) that is described by reference to units issued by the trust, a payment after 1999 from the trust in respect of the capital interest, where the number of units in the trust that are owned by the taxpayer is not reduced because of the payment,

(i) where the property is a taxpayer’s capital interest in a trust, a payment to the taxpayer after 1999 in respect of the capital interest to the extent that the payment

(i) is out of the income of the trust (determined without reference to subsection 104(6)) for a taxation year or out of the capital gains of the trust for the year, if the payment was made in the year or the right to the payment was acquired by the taxpayer in the year, or

(ii) is in respect of an amount designated in respect of the taxpayer by the trust under subsection 104(20),

Proposed Amendment — 248(1)“disposition”(i)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 7, 2003: See under 132.11(4).

(j) any transfer of the property for the purpose only of securing a debt or a loan, or any transfer by a creditor for the purpose only of returning property that had been used as security for a debt or a loan,

(k) any transfer of the property to a trust as a consequence of which there is no change in the beneficial ownership of the property, where the main purpose of the transfer is

(i) to effect payment under a debt or loan,

(ii) to provide assurance that an absolute or contingent obligation of the transferor will be satisfied, or

(iii) to facilitate either the provision of compensation or the enforcement of a penalty, in the event that an absolute or contingent obligation of the transferor is not satisfied,

(l) any issue of a bond, debenture, note, certificate, mortgage or hypothecary claim, and

(m) any issue by a corporation of a share of its capital stock, or any other transaction that, but for this paragraph, would be a disposition by a corporation of a share of its capital stock;

Proposed Addition — 248(1)“disposition”(n)

(n) a redemption, an acquisition or a cancellation of a share or of a right to acquire a share (which share or which right, as the case may be, is referred to in this paragraph as the “security”) of the capital stock of a corporation (referred to in this paragraph as the “issuing corporation”) held by another corporation (referred to in this paragraph as the “disposing corporation”) if

(i) the redemption, acquisition or cancellation occurs as part of a merger or combination of two or more corporations (including the issuing corporation and the disposing corporation) to form one corporate entity (referred to in this paragraph as the “new corporation”),

(ii) the merger or combination

(A) is an amalgamation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1)) to which subsection 87(11) does not apply,

(B) is an amalgamation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1)) to which subsection 87(11) applies, if the issuing corporation and the disposing corporation are described by subsection 87(11) as the parent and the subsidiary, respectively,

(C) is a foreign merger (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(8.1)), or

(D) would be a foreign merger (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(8.1)) if subparagraph 87(8.1)(c)(ii) were read without reference to the words “that was resident in a country other than Canada”, and

(iii) either

(A) the disposing corporation receives no consideration for the security, or

(B) in the case where the merger or combination is described by clause (ii)(C) or (D), the disposing corporation receives no consideration for the security other than property that was, immediately before the merger or combination, owned by the issuing corporation and that, on the merger or combination, becomes property of the new corporation;

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(5), will add para. (n) to the definition “disposition” in subsec. 248(1), applicable on the same basis as the amendment to subpara. (b)(i) above.

Technical Notes: Second, paragraph (n) is added to the definition. New paragraph (n) provides that a redemption, an acquisition or a cancellation of a share, or of a right to be issued a share, (which share or which right, as the case may be, is referred to as the “security”) of the capital stock of a corporation (the “issuing corporation”) held by another corporation (the “disposing corporation”) is considered not to be a “disposition” in the case where

- the redemption, acquisition or cancellation occurs as part of a particular merger or combination of two or more corporations (including the issuing corporation and the disposing corporation) to form one corporate entity (referred to as the “new corporation”),
- the particular merger or combination
 - is an amalgamation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1)) to which subsection 87(11) does not apply,
 - is an amalgamation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1)) to which subsection 87(11) applies, if the issuing corporation and the disposing corporation are described by subsection 87(11) as the parent and the subsidiary, respectively, or
 - is a merger or combination of non-resident corporations (referred to in these Notes as a “subject merger”) that would be a foreign merger (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(8.1)) if subparagraph 87(8.1)(c)(ii) were read without reference to the words “that was resident in a country other than Canada”, and
- either
 - the disposing corporation receives no consideration for the security, or
 - in the case of where the particular merger or combination is a subject merger, the disposing corporation receives no consideration for the security other than property that was, immediately before the particular merger or combination, owned by the issuing corporation and that, on the foreign merger, becomes property of the new corporation.

In connection with redemptions, acquisitions and cancellations that occur before December 24, 1998, see the commentary to new subsection 248(1.1).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, April 12, 2002:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in reply to your faxed letter dated January 23, 2002 to Mr. Wally Conway in which you expressed concerns about the provisions in the Income Tax Act (the “Act”) relating to the cancellation of shares of a predecessor corporation on an “amalgamation” (within the meaning of subsection 87(1) of the Act) or on a “foreign merger” (within the meaning of subsection 87(8.1)).

In your letter, you give the following example of a foreign merger:

1. A corporation (“Canco”) resident in Canada owns all of the outstanding shares of a non-resident corporation (“Holdco”).
2. Holdco owns all of the outstanding shares of another non-resident corporation (“Parentco”).
3. Parentco owns all of the outstanding shares of another non-resident corporation (“Subco”).
4. Under the foreign corporate law, Subco is merged into Parentco.

In your letter, you note that you would expect that the relevant foreign law would generally deem the shares of Subco held by Parentco to be cancelled for no consideration on the merger. However, you speculate that it is possible that the law in some foreign jurisdictions may deem the consideration for such shares to be the property of Subco that would, on the merger, be transferred or otherwise become property of the corporate entity formed on the merger.

Subsection 87(4) of the Act deals with the tax consequences, to a shareholder of a corporation, upon an amalgamation involving the corporation where the consideration received by that shareholder for the disposition of the shares held by that shareholder in the capital stock of the corporation consists only of shares of the capital stock of another corporation resulting from the merger. Paragraph 95(2)(d) ensures that subsection 87(4), with necessary changes to reflect a foreign merger, applies in the case of a foreign merger. However, as you note in your letter, subsection 87(4) does not apply to a shareholder where that shareholder is itself a corporation that is part of the amalgamation or foreign merger. Thus, referring to your example, subsection 87(4) would not apply to Parentco in its capacity as a shareholder of Subco.

In the context of foreign mergers involving foreign affiliates of a taxpayer, if the shares are not excluded property (within the meaning of subsection 95(1)), it is possible that foreign accrual property income of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer could arise on the merger as a result of the non-applicability of subsection 87(4). Similarly, in the context of domestic amalgamations, capital gains or losses could arise on the amalgamation as a result of the non-applicability of subsection 87(4). In our view, these tax results are unintended.

We will, therefore, recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended so as to exclude from being a “disposition” for the purposes of the Act a cancellation of a share of the capital stock of a corporation (the “issuing corporation”) held by another corporation (the “disposing corporation”) where

- the cancellation occurred as part of a merger or combination of two or more corporations, that included the issuing corporation and the disposing corporation, to form one corporate entity (the “new corporation”),
- the merger or combination is an amalgamation to which subsection 87(11) did not apply, or is a foreign merger, and
- the disposing corporation received no consideration for the share or, in the case of a foreign merger, received no consideration for the share other than property that was, immediately before the foreign merger, owned by the issuing corporation and that, on the foreign merger, became property of the new corporation.

It will be recommended that this amendment apply to both past and future cancellations of shares.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

"dividend rental arrangement" of a person means any arrangement entered into by the person where it may reasonably be considered that

(b) under the arrangement someone other than that person bears the risk of loss or enjoys the opportunity for gain or profit with respect to the share in any material respect,

(d) the corporation is obligated to pay to another person an amount as compensation for

(i) that dividend,

(ii) a dividend on a share that is identical to the particular share, or

(iii) a dividend on a share that, during the term of the arrangement, can reasonably be expected to provide to a holder of the share the same or substantially the same proportionate risk of loss or opportunity for gain as the particular share, that, if paid, would be deemed by subsection 260(5) to have been received by that other person as a taxable dividend;

Proposed Amendment — 248(1) "dividend rental arrangement"

"dividend rental arrangement", of a person or a partnership (each of which is referred to in this definition as the "person"),

(a) means any arrangement entered into by the person where it can reasonably be considered that

(i) the main reason for the person entering into the arrangement was to enable the person to receive a dividend on a share of the capital stock of a corporation, other than a dividend on a prescribed share or on a share described in paragraph (e) of the definition "term preferred share" in this subsection or an amount deemed by subsection 15(3) to be received as a dividend on a share of the capital stock of a corporation, and

(ii) under the arrangement someone other than that person bears the risk of loss or enjoys the opportunity for gain or profit with respect to the share in any material respect, and

(b) includes, for greater certainty, any arrangement under which

(i) a corporation at any time receives on a particular share a taxable dividend that would, if this Act were read without reference to subsection 112(2.3), be deductible in computing its taxable income or taxable income earned in Canada for the taxation year that includes that time, and

(ii) the corporation or a partnership of which the corporation is a member is obligated to pay to another person or partnership an amount

(A) that is compensation for

(I) the dividend described in subparagraph (i),

(II) a dividend on a share that is identical to the particular share, or

(III) a dividend on a share that, during the term of the arrangement, can reasonably be expected to provide to a holder of the share the same or substantially the same proportionate risk of loss or opportunity for gain as the particular share, and

(B) that, if paid, would be deemed by subsection 260(5.1) to have been received by that other person or partnership, as the case may be, as a taxable dividend;

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(2), will amend the definition "dividend rental arrangement" in subsec. 248(1) to read as above, applicable (per subsec. 187(25) of former Bill C-10)

(a) to arrangements made after December 20, 2002; and

(b) to an arrangement made after November 2, 1998 and before December 21, 2002 if the parties to the arrangement jointly so elect in writing, and file the election with the Minister of National Revenue within 90 days after former Bill C-10 is assented to, except that the reference to "subsection 260(5.1)" in cl. (b)(ii)(B) of the definition, as amended, is to be, in the application of that definition to any of those arrangements made before 2002, read as "subsection 260(5)".

For arrangements made after 2001 and before December 21, 2002 other than an arrangement to which para. (b) above applies, the portion of para. (d) of the definition after subpara. (iii) is to be read as follows:

that, if paid, would be deemed by subsection 260(5.1) to have been received by that other person as a taxable dividend.

Technical Notes: A “dividend rental arrangement” is, in general terms, an arrangement under which one person receives a dividend on a share that has been borrowed from another person who retains the risk of loss or opportunity for gain from fluctuations in the share value. To clarify its application where a partnership is a party to the arrangement, the definition is restructured and amended; its language is also updated in certain respects.

Under the amended definition, the “person” who is the subject of the arrangement — that is, the person who enters into the arrangement in order to receive a dividend — may be a partnership or a person as otherwise defined.

Existing paragraph (c) of the definition ensures that the definition includes an arrangement under which a corporation receives a taxable dividend that would be deductible but for subsection 112(2.3), and is obligated to make dividend compensation payments. This paragraph is replaced by new paragraph (b), which adds to the arrangements described one in which it is not the corporation receiving the dividend that is obligated to make the compensation payment, but rather a partnership of which the corporation is a member.

At first reading, new paragraph (b) may seem asymmetrical, in that it expressly covers the case where a partnership is obligated to make the compensation payment, but not the case where a partnership receives the taxable dividend. In fact, the paragraph covers both: since in the latter case the corporate partner is itself already considered to receive the dividend, it is not necessary to add a reference to the partnership in that regard.

The reference to “subsection 260(5)” in this definition is replaced with “subsection 260(5.1)” consequential to the amendments to section 260. This amendment applies to paragraph (d) of the former definition and clause (b)(ii)(B) of the amended definition.

The amendment to paragraph (d) of the former definition applies between January 1, 2002 and December 20, 2002 unless an election noted below is filed.

The amended definition applies to arrangements made after December 20, 2002; it also applies to an arrangement made after November 2, 1998 and before the day after December 20, 2002, if the parties jointly elect in writing filed with the Minister of National Revenue within 90 days after this Act has been assented to, except that before 2002 the reference to “subsection 260(5.1)” in the amended definition should be read as “subsection 260(5)”.

History: That portion of the definition “dividend rental arrangement” after para. (b) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 74(1), applicable to dividends received at any time by a corporation on shares acquired

(a) before that time and after April 1989, where the corporation so elects by notifying the Minister of National Revenue in writing before 1996; and

(b) before that time and after June 1994, in any other case.

“employee benefit plan” means an arrangement under which contributions are made by an employer or by any person with whom the employer does not deal at arm’s length to another person (in this Act referred to as the “custodian” of an employee benefit plan) and under which one or more payments are to be made to or for the benefit of employees or former employees of the employer or persons who do not deal at arm’s length with any such employee or former employee (other than a payment that, if section 6 were read without reference to subparagraph 6(1)(a)(ii) and paragraph 6(1)(g), would not be required to be included in computing the income of the recipient), but does not include

(a) a fund or plan referred to in subparagraph 6(1)(a)(i) or paragraph 6(1)(d) or (f),

Proposed Amendment — 248(1) “employee benefit plan” (a)

Application: The February 26, 2010 draft legislation (ELHTs), subsec. 17(1), will amend para. (a) of the definition “employee benefit plan” in subsec. 248(1) to substitute “fund, plan or trust” for “fund or plan”, applicable after 2009.

Technical Notes: The definitions “employee benefit plan”, “retirement compensation arrangement” and “salary deferral arrangement” are amended to exclude employee life and health trusts from the ambit of each definition. Proposed Amendment — 248(1) "short-term preferred share"

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 11, 2005:

Mr. Alain Ranger, Fasken Martineau DuMoulin LLP, Montreal, QC

Dear Mr. Ranger:

Thank you for your letter of April 14, 2005 regarding paragraph (f) of the definition of "short-term preferred share" in subsection 248(1) of the Income Tax Act. That provision specifies that a share of the capital stock of a corporation that is issued in circumstances where the existence of the corporation was, or there was an agreement under which it could be, limited to a period within 5 years from the date of its issue is deemed to be a short-term preferred share of the corporation.

In your letter you have described a situation where employees of a company were granted stock options under an employee stock option plan at a time when the existence of the company was not limited. Although the options remain unvested, they will automatically vest following the decision of the company to sell all or substantially all of its assets and then liquidate, which it intends to do in the near future. Since the employees will be able to exercise their options only following the decision to liquidate the corporation, any share issued in those circumstances would be deemed to be a short-term preferred share.

The rules applicable to taxable preferred shares, of which short-term preferred shares are a subset, are intended to apply to situations where corporations that are not in need of an interest deduction, instead of issuing debt, issue equity having debt-like characteristics. One such debt-like characteristic is repayment within a fixed time period, which can be achieved indirectly with a limitation on the existence of the corporation, effectively guaranteeing that the "equity" investment will be returned within a certain period of time.

You have asked that shares issued pursuant to a grant of options occurring under an employee stock option plan or other employee arrangement, where such grant occurs at a time when the existence of the corporation was not limited to a period within 5 years from the date of grant, be excluded from the definition of short-term preferred share.

It does not seem appropriate that shares issued in the circumstances you describe should be brought into the ambit of the taxable preferred share rules. Consequently, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that such an amendment be made to the definition. Of course, we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendation that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, we trust that this statement of our position is helpful.

Thank you for bringing this matter to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber

General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Addition — 248(1)“specified proportion”

“specified proportion”, of a member of a partnership for a fiscal period of the partnership, means the proportion that the member’s share of the total income or loss of the partnership for the partnership’s fiscal period is of the partnership’s total income or loss for that period and, for the purpose of this definition, where that income or loss for a period is nil, that proportion shall be computed as if the partnership had income for that period in the amount of $1,000,000;

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(11), will add the definition “specified proportion” to subsec. 248(1), applicable after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: The definition “specified proportion” of a member of a partnership for a fiscal period of the partnership is currently found in subsection 206(1). The apportionment that results from the definition is, however, useful for many purposes of the Act, and a number of other provisions apply the same concept. For simplicity, the definition is moved to subsection 248(1). As a result, for all purposes of the Act a partner’s specified proportion for the period is that proportion of the partnership’s total income or loss for that period that is the member’s share. If the partnership’s income or loss for the period is nil, the proportion is computed as if the partnership had $1 million of income for the period.

“specified shareholder” of a corporation in a taxation year means a taxpayer who owns, directly or indirectly, at any time in the year, not less than 10% of the issued shares of any class of the capital stock of the corporation or of any other corporation that is related to the corporation and, for the purposes of this definition,

(a) a taxpayer shall be deemed to own each share of the capital stock of a corporation owned at that time by a person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm’s length,

(b) each beneficiary of a trust shall be deemed to own that proportion of all such shares owned by the trust at that time that the fair market value at that time of the beneficial interest of the beneficiary in the trust is of the fair market value at that time of all beneficial interests in the trust,

(c) each member of a partnership shall be deemed to own that proportion of all the shares of any class of the capital stock of a corporation that are property of the partnership at that time that the fair market value at that time of the member’s interest in the partnership is of the fair market value at that time of the interests of all members in the partnership,

(d) an individual who performs services on behalf of a corporation that would be carrying on a personal services business if the individual or any person related to the individual were at that time a specified shareholder of the corporation shall be deemed to be a specified shareholder of the corporation at that time if the individual, or any person or partnership with whom the individual does not deal at arm’s length, is, or by virtue of any arrangement, may become, entitled, directly or indirectly, to not less than 10% of the assets or the shares of any class of the capital stock of the corporation or any corporation related thereto, and

(e) notwithstanding paragraph (b), where a beneficiary’s share of the income or capital of the trust depends on the exercise by any person of, or the failure by any person to exercise, any discretionary power, the beneficiary shall be deemed to own each share of the capital stock of a corporation owned at that time by the trust;

Proposed Amendment — 248(1)“subsidiary wholly-owned corporation”

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Nov. 5, 2004:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of September 16, 2004 regarding the definition of “subsidiary wholly-owned corporation” in subsection 248(1) of the Income Tax Act (the “Act”) as it relates to subsection 138(11.94) of the Act. Subsection 138(11.94) of the Act provides for the transfer on a rollover basis of an insurance business carried on in Canada by an insurer resident in Canada to a corporation resident in Canada that is a “subsidiary wholly-owned corporation” of that insurer.

In your letter and in your conversations with officials of the department, you requested that, for the purposes of subsection 138(11.94), the definition “subsidiary wholly-owned corporation” be modified in anticipation of a proposed transfer of an insurance business as part of a reorganization of a corporate group. At present, the definition “subsidiary wholly-owned corporation” means a corporation all of the issued shares of which (other than directors’ qualifying shares) belong to the particular corporation of which it is a subsidiary. You have asked that, for the purposes of subsection 138(11.94), the definition “subsidiary wholly-owned corporation” be defined in respect of a particular corporation in such a manner that the holding of issued shares of the capital stock of the subsidiary by other corporations that are subsidiary wholly-owned corporations of the particular corporation are permitted.

We are of the view that, for the purposes of subsection 138(11.94), it would be appropriate to modify the definition “subsidiary wholly-owned corporation” in the manner requested. We are prepared to recommend that, for the purposes of subsection 138(11.94), the definition “subsidiary wholly-owned corporation” be defined in respect of a particular corporation resident in Canada, in effect, to have the same meaning as “qualified related corporation” in subsection 219(8) of the Act.

In the absence of any information suggesting that this issue has arisen in the past, we would recommend that the modified definition “subsidiary wholly-owned corporation” apply to transfers, after October 2004, of insurance businesses to which subsection 138(11.94) applies. If this recommendation is acted upon, the amendment will be included in a future technical bill.

Thank you for bringing this matter to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernwein

Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Addition — 248(1.1)

(1.1) Non-disposition before December 24, 1998 — A redemption, an acquisition or a cancellation, at any particular time after 1971 and before December 24, 1998, of a share or of a right to acquire a share (which share or which right, as the case may be, is referred to in this subsection as the "security") of the capital stock of a corporation (referred to in this subsection as the "issuing corporation") held by another corporation (referred to in this subsection as the "disposing corporation") is not a disposition (within the meaning of the definition "disposition" in section 54 as that section read in its application to transactions and events that occurred at the particular time) of the security if

(a) the redemption, acquisition or cancellation occurred as part of a merger or combination of two or more corporations (including the issuing corporation and the disposing corporation) to form one corporate entity (referred to in this subsection as the "new corporation");

(b) the merger or combination

(i) is an amalgamation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1) as it read at the particular time) to which subsection 87(11) if in force, and as it read, at the particular time did not apply,

(ii) is an amalgamation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1) as it read at the particular time) to which subsection 87(11) if in force, and as it read, at the particular time applies, if the issuing corporation and the disposing corporation are described by subsection 87(11) (if in force, and as it read, at the particular time) as the parent and the subsidiary, respectively,

(iii) occurred before November 13, 1981 and is a merger of corporations that is described by subsection 87(8) (as it read in respect of the merger or combination), or

(iv) occurred after November 12, 1981 and

(A) is a foreign merger (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(8.1) as it read in respect of the merger or combination), or

(B) all of the following conditions are met, namely

(I) the merger or combination is not a foreign merger (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(8.1) as it read in respect of the merger or combination),

(II) subsection 87(8.1), as it read in respect of the merger or combination, contained a subparagraph (c)(ii), and

(III) the merger or combination would be a foreign merger (within the meaning of subsection 87(8.1), as it read in respect of the merger or combination) if that subparagraph 87(8.1)(c)(ii) were read as follows:

"(ii) if, immediately after the merger, the new foreign corporation was controlled by another foreign corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "parent corporation"), shares of the capital stock of the parent corporation,";

and

(c) either

(i) the disposing corporation received no consideration for the security, or

(ii) in the case where the merger or combination is described by subparagraph (b)(iv), the disposing corporation received no consideration for the security other than property that was, immediately before the merger or combination, owned by the issuing corporation and that, on the merger or combination, became property of the new corporation.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(12), will add subsec. 248(1.1), in force on Royal Assent. In applying subsec. 248(1.1) to a particular redemption, acquisition or cancellation, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for a taxation year that includes the time at which the particular redemption, acquisition or cancellation occurred shall, notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5), be made that is necessary to take into account the application of the new subsection.

Technical Notes: The definition "disposition" was added to subsection 248(1) by S.C. 2001, chapter 17, subsection 188(5) [formerly Bill C-22]. In general, that definition applies to transactions and events that occur after December 23, 1998. The former definition "disposition" was contained in section 54, applicable to transactions and events that occurred before December 24, 1998.

New paragraph (n) is added to the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1), applicable to redemptions, acquisitions and cancellations of certain securities that occur after December 23, 1998. For more detail, see the commentary to subsection 248(1).

New subsection 248(1.1) is added to deal, in a corresponding fashion, with such redemptions, acquisitions and cancellations that occurred before December 24, 1998.

New subsection 248(1.1) provides that a redemption, an acquisition or a cancellation, at any particular time after 1971 and before December 24, 1998, of a share or of a right to acquire a share (which share or which right, as the case may be, is referred to as the "security") of the capital stock of a corporation (referred to as the "issuing corporation") held by another corporation (referred to as the "disposing corporation") is not a disposition of the security within the meaning of the definition "disposition" in section 54 (as that section read in its application to transactions and events that occur at the particular time), if

- the redemption, acquisition or cancellation occurred as part of a particular merger or combination of two or more corporations (including the issuing corporation and the disposing corporation) to form one corporate entity (referred to as the "new corporation"),

- the particular merger or combination

- is an amalgamation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1) as it read at the particular time) to which subsection 87(11) if in force, and as it read, at the particular time did not apply,

- is an amalgamation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1) as it read at the particular time) to which subsection 87(11) if in force, and as it read, at the particular time applies, if the issuing corporation and the disposing corporation are described by subsection 87(11) (if in force, and as it read, at the particular time) as the parent and the subsidiary, respectively,

- occurred before November 13, 1981 and is a merger of corporations that is described by subsection 87(8) (as it read in respect of the particular merger or combination), or

- is a merger or combination of non-resident corporations (referred to in these Notes as a "subject merger") that occurred after November 12, 1981 and

- is a foreign merger (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(8.1) as it read in respect of the particular merger or combination), or

- all of the following conditions are met, namely

- 1. the particular merger or combination is not a foreign merger (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(8.1) as it read in respect of the particular merger or combination),

- 2. subsection 87(8.1), as read in respect of the particular merger or combination, contained a subparagraph (c)(ii), and

- 3. the particular merger or combination would be a foreign merger (within the meaning of subsection 87(8.1), as it read in respect of the particular merger or combination) if that subparagraph 87(8.1)(c)(ii) were read as follows:

- "(ii) if, immediately after the merger, the new foreign corporation was controlled by another foreign corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "parent corporation"), shares of the capital stock of the parent corporation," and

- either

- the disposing corporation received no consideration for the security, or

- in the case where the particular merger or combination is a subject merger, the disposing corporation received no consideration for the security other than property that was, immediately before the particular merger or combination, owned by the issuing corporation and that, on the particular merger or combination, became property of the new corporation.

(4) Interest in real property — In this Act, an interest in real property includes a leasehold interest in real property but does not include an interest as security only derived by virtue of a mortgage, hypothecary claim, agreement for sale or similar obligation.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 3 — bijuralism), subsec. 278(13), will add subsec. 248(4.1), to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: Subsection 248(4) of the current legislation uses the term “droit sur un bien immeuble” in the French version as equivalent for the term “interest in real property” used in the English version. The term refers to the relationship between a person and property and for purposes of the I.T.A. includes a leasehold interest but not an interest as security.

Subsection 248(4) is amended so as to provide, for common law purposes, the scope of the term “interest in real property.” Reference to the civil law term “hypothecary claim” is removed from the English version of the provision. Furthermore, the term “intérêt sur un bien réel” is added in the French version of the Act. This term is the French equivalent of the common law term “interest in real property”.

For civil law purposes, new subsection 248(4.1) is added in both linguistic versions of the Act. The scope of the civil law term “real right in immovables” / “droit réel sur un immeuble” is adjusted in a similar manner as its common law counterpart by including the lease and excluding security rights.

Related Provisions: 248(4) — Interest in real property under common law; Interpretation Act 8.1, 8.2 — Common law and civil law equally authoritative.

(b) a transfer, distribution or acquisition of property as a consequence of a disclaimer, release or surrender by a person who was a beneficiary under the will or other testamentary instrument or on the intestacy of a taxpayer or the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner shall be considered to be a transfer, distribution or acquisition of the property as a consequence of the death of the taxpayer or the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner, as the case may be; and

History: The definition "disclaimer" in subsec. 248(9) substituted by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 109(7), applicable June 15, 1994. That definition formerly read:

(14) Related corporations — For the purpose of paragraph (g) of the definition "specified financial institution" in subsection (1), where in the case of 2 or more corporations it can reasonably be considered, having regard to all the circumstances, that one of the main reasons for the separate existence of those corporations in a taxation year is to limit or avoid the application of subsection 112(2.1) or (2.2) or 138(6), the 2 or more corporations shall be deemed to be related to each other and to each other corporation to which any such corporation is related.

History: Subsec. 248(14) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 192(17), to substitute "For the purpose of" for "For the purposes of" and "can reasonably" for "may reasonably", and to add "and to each other corporation to which any such corporation is related", applicable after July 13, 1990.

(15) Goods and services tax — change of use — For the purposes of this Act, where a liability for the goods and services tax is incurred in respect of a change of use at any time of a property, the liability so incurred shall be deemed to have been incurred immediately after that time in respect of the acquisition of the property.

(16) Goods and services tax — input tax credit and rebate — For the purposes of this Act, other than this subsection and subsection 6(8), an amount claimed by a taxpayer as an input tax credit or rebate with respect to the goods and services tax in respect of a property or service shall be deemed to be assistance from a government in respect of the property or service that is received by the taxpayer

(a) where the amount was claimed by the taxpayer as an input tax credit in a return under Part IX of the Excise Tax Act for a reporting period under that Act,

(i) at the time the goods and services tax in respect of the input tax credit was paid or became payable, if the tax was paid or became payable in the reporting period, or

(ii) if no such tax was paid or became payable in respect of the input tax credit in the reporting period, at the end of the reporting period; or

(b) where the amount was claimed as a rebate with respect to the goods and services tax, at the time the amount was received or credited.

Proposed Amendment — 248(16)

(16) Goods and services tax — input tax credit and rebate — For the purposes of this Act, other than this subsection and subsection 6(8), an amount claimed by a taxpayer as an input tax credit or rebate with respect to the goods and services tax in respect of a property or service is deemed to be assistance from a government in respect of the property or service that is received by the taxpayer

(a) where the amount was claimed by the taxpayer as an input tax credit in a return under Part IX of the Excise Tax Act for a reporting period under that Act,

(i) at the particular time that is the earlier of the time that the goods and services tax in respect of the input tax credit was paid and the time that it became payable,

(A) if the particular time is in the reporting period, or

(B) if,

(I) the taxpayer's threshold amount, determined in accordance with subsection 249(1) of the Excise Tax Act, is greater than $500,000 for the taxpayer's fiscal year (within the meaning assigned by that Act) that includes the particular time, and

(II) the taxpayer claimed the input tax credit at least 120 days before the end of the normal reassessment period, as determined under subsection 152(3.1), for the taxpayer in respect of the taxation year that includes the particular time,

(ii) at the end of the reporting period, if

(A) subparagraph (i) does not apply, and

(B) the taxpayer's threshold amount, determined in accordance with subsection 249(1) of the Excise Tax Act, is $500,000 or less for the fiscal year (within the meaning assigned by that Act) of the taxpayer that includes the particular time, and

(iii) in any other case, on the last day of the taxpayer's earliest taxation year

(A) that begins after the taxation year that includes the particular time, and

(B) for which the normal reassessment period, as determined under subsection 152(3.1), for the taxpayer ends at least 120 days after the time that the input tax credit was claimed; or

(b) where the amount was claimed as a rebate with respect to the goods and services tax, at the time the amount was received or credited.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(15), will amend subsec. 248(16) to read as above, applicable in respect of input tax credits that become eligible to be claimed in taxation years that begin after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 248(16) provides rules under which amounts received by, or credited to, a taxpayer as an input tax credit or rebate with respect to the goods and services tax (GST) are deemed to be assistance from a government received by a taxpayer. As a consequence, such amounts are either included in income or reduce the cost or capital cost of the related property, or the amount of the related expenditure or expenditure pool, for tax purposes.

Subsection 248(16) also specifies the time at which the receipt (or credit) of an input tax credit or rebate is deemed to be received as assistance. With respect to input tax credits, subparagraph 248(16)(a)(i) provides that the assistance (i.e., the input tax credit) is considered to be received by a taxpayer at the time the GST in respect of the input tax credit was paid or became payable by the taxpayer if the GST was paid or became payable in the same reporting period under the Excise Tax Act in which the input tax credit was claimed. If a taxpayer does not claim the input tax credit in the same reporting period in which the GST was paid or became payable, subparagraph 248(16)(a)(ii) includes the amount of assistance in the taxpayer's income for the taxation year that includes the end of the reporting period in which the taxpayer claimed the input tax credit.

Subsection 248(16)* is amended in three respects for input tax credits that become eligible to be claimed in taxation years that begin after December 20, 2002.

First, subparagraph 248(16)(a)(i) is amended to extend its application to cases where the input tax credit is claimed by a taxpayer in a reporting period that is subsequent to the period in which the related GST was paid or became payable if

- the taxpayer's threshold amount (as determined under subsection 249(1) of the Excise Tax Act) is greater than $500,000 for the taxpayer's fiscal year (as defined by that Act) that includes the earlier of the time that the GST in respect of the input tax credit was paid and the time that it became payable, and
- the taxpayer claimed the input tax credit at least 120 days before the end of the normal reassessment period (as determined under subsection 152(3.1) of the Income Tax Act) for the taxpayer in respect of the taxation year that includes that earlier time.

In general, the change to this subparagraph means that an input tax credit of a taxpayer (who is a GST filer with a threshold amount greater than $500,000 for GST purposes) is considered to have been received at the time the related GST was paid or became payable, even though the input tax credit is claimed in a later GST reporting period. However, this is the case only if the taxpayer claims the input tax credit at least 120 days before the taxation year in which the GST was paid or became payable becomes statute-barred for income tax purposes.

Second, subparagraph 248(16)(a)(ii) is amended to provide that an input tax credit is considered to be received at the end of the reporting period in which it is claimed only if

- subparagraph 248(16)(a)(i) does not apply, and
- the taxpayer's threshold amount (as determined under subsection 249(1) of the Excise Tax Act) is $500,000 or less for the fiscal year of the taxpayer that includes the earlier of the time that the GST in respect of the input tax credit was paid or became payable.

Thus, subparagraph 248(16)(a)(ii) does not apply if subparagraph 248(16)(a)(i) applies. Where subparagraph 248(16)(a)(i) does not apply, subparagraph 248(16)(a)(ii) provides that the input tax credit is considered to have been received at the end of the reporting period in which it is claimed only if the taxpayer's threshold amount for GST purposes was $500,000 or less at the time the GST was paid or became payable.

Third, new subparagraph 248(16)(a)(iii) is added to apply in any other case. If applicable, that subparagraph provides that the input tax credit is considered to have been received on the last day of the taxpayer's earliest taxation year

- that begins after the taxation year that includes the earlier of the time that the GST in respect of the input tax credit was paid and the time that it became payable, and
- for which the normal reassessment period for the taxpayer ends at least 120 days after the time at which the input tax credit was claimed.

Reference should also be made to the commentary to new subsection 248(17.1) of the Income Tax Act which provides a special rule in respect of the timing of a claim in respect of certain input tax credits assessed under the Excise Tax Act.

Proposed Addition — 248(16.1)

(16.1) Quebec input tax refund and rebate — For the purpose of this Act, other than this subsection and subsection 6(8), an amount claimed by a taxpayer as an input tax refund or a rebate with respect to the Quebec sales tax in respect of a property or service is deemed to be assistance from a government in respect of the property or service that is received by the taxpayer

(a) where the amount was claimed by the taxpayer as an input tax refund in a return under An Act respecting the Québec sales tax, R.S.Q., c. T-0.1, for a reporting period under that Act,

(i) at the particular time that is the earlier of the time that the Quebec sales tax in respect of the input tax refund was paid and the time that it became payable,

(A) if the particular time is in the reporting period, or

(B) if,

(I) the taxpayer's threshold amount, determined in accordance with section 462 of that Act is greater than $500,000 for the taxpayer's fiscal year (within the meaning assigned by that Act) that includes the particular time; and

(II) the taxpayer claimed the input tax refund at least 120 days before the end of the normal reassessment period, as determined under subsection 152(3.1), for the taxpayer in respect of the taxation year that includes the particular time,

(ii) at the end of the reporting period, if

(A) subparagraph (i) does not apply, and

(B) the taxpayer's threshold amount, determined in accordance with section 462 of that Act is $500,000 or less for the fiscal year (within the meaning assigned by that Act) of the taxpayer that includes the particular time, and

(iii) in any other case, on the last day of the taxpayer's earliest taxation year

(A) that begins after the taxation year that includes the particular time, and

(B) for which the normal reassessment period, as determined under subsection 152(3.1), for the taxpayer ends at least 120 days after the time that the input tax refund was claimed; or

(b) where the amount was claimed as a rebate with respect to the Quebec sales tax, at the time the amount was received or credited.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(16), will add subsec. 248(16.1), applicable in respect of input tax refunds and rebates that become eligible to be claimed in taxation years that begin after February 27, 2004.

Technical Notes: New subsection 248(16.1) provides special rules for amounts received, or credited to, a taxpayer as an input tax refund or rebate in respect of Quebec sales tax. Such amounts are either included in a taxpayer's income or reduce the cost or capital cost of the related property, or the amount of the related expenditure or expenditure pool, for tax purposes.

In general, an input tax refund in respect of Quebec sales tax may — depending on the circumstances — have to be included in a taxpayer's income in the taxation year in which the taxpayer may first claim the refund, rather than the year in which it is received. A rebate of Quebec sales tax is included in income at the time the rebate is received or credited. For a more detailed explanation of the application of subsection 248(16.1), reference should be made to the commentary accompanying amendments to subsection 248(16), which provides analogous special rules in respect of the timing of the inclusion in income of certain input tax credits and rebates assessed under the Excise Tax Act.

Related Provisions: 12(1)(x) — Inclusion in income; 12(2.2) — Deemed outlay or expense; 13(7.1) — Deemed capital cost of certain property; 37(1)(d) — Scientific research and experimental development; 53(2)(k) — Reduction in adjusted cost base; 66.1(6) "cumulative Canadian exploration expense" J — Assistance reduces CCEE; 66.2(5) "cumulative Canadian development expense" M — Assistance reduces CCDE; 66.4(5) "cumulative Canadian oil and gas property expense" I — Assistance reduces CCOGPE; 248(16) — Parallel rule for GST; 248(17.1) — Application of 248(16) to passenger vehicles and aircraft; 248(17.3) — Timing of deemed assistance where QST assessed; 248(18.1) — Repayment of input tax refund.

(17) Application of subsec. (16) to passenger vehicles and aircraft — Where the input tax credit of a taxpayer under Part IX of the Excise Tax Act in respect of a passenger vehicle or aircraft is determined with reference to subsection 202(4) of the Excise Tax Act, subparagraphs (16)(a)(i) and (ii) shall, as they apply in respect of such property, be read as follows:

Proposed Amendment — 248(17) opening words

(17) Application of subsec. (16) to passenger vehicles and aircraft — If the input tax credit of a taxpayer under Part IX of the Excise Tax Act in respect of a passenger vehicle or aircraft is determined with reference to subsection 202(4) of that Act, subparagraphs (16)(a)(i) to (iii) are to be read as they apply in respect of the passenger vehicle or aircraft, as the case may be, as follows:

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(17), will amend the opening words of subsec. 248(17) to read as above, applicable in respect of input tax credits that become eligible to be claimed in taxation years that begin after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 248(17) applies in the case of an input tax credit in respect of a passenger vehicle or aircraft claimable by an individual or partnership where the credit is determined by reference to capital cost allowance in respect of the vehicle or aircraft (i.e., where there is less than exclusive use in commercial activity). Subsection 248(17) is amended to reflect the amendments made to subsection 248(16) as described in the commentary to that subsection.

“(i) at the beginning of the first taxation year or fiscal period of the taxpayer commencing after the end of the taxation year or fiscal period, as the case may be, in which the goods and services tax in respect of such property was considered for the purposes of determining the input tax credit to be payable, if the tax was considered for the purposes of determining the input tax credit to have become payable in the reporting period, or

(ii) if no such tax was considered for the purposes of determining the input tax credit to have become payable in the reporting period, at the end of the reporting period; or”

Related Provisions: 248(17.1) — Parallel rule for QST.

Proposed Addition — 248(17.1)

(17.1) Application of subsec. (16.1) to passenger vehicles and aircraft — If the input tax refund of a taxpayer under An Act respecting the Québec sales tax, R.S.Q., c. T-0.1, in respect of a passenger vehicle or aircraft is determined with reference to section 252 of that Act, subparagraphs (16.1)(a)(i) to (iii) are to be read as they apply in respect of the passenger vehicle or aircraft, as the case may be, as follows:

“(i) at the beginning of the first taxation year or fiscal period of the taxpayer that begins after the end of the taxation year or fiscal period, as the case may be, in which the Québec sales tax in respect of such property was considered for the purposes of determining the input tax refund to be payable, if the tax was considered for the purposes of determining the input tax refund to have become payable in the reporting period, or

(ii) if no such tax was considered for the purposes of determining the input tax refund to have become payable in the reporting period, at the end of the reporting period; or”

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(18), will add subsec. 248(17.1), applicable in respect of input tax refunds and rebates that become eligible to be claimed in taxation years that begin after February 27, 2004.

Technical Notes: New subsection 248(17.1) applies in the case of an input tax refund of Québec sales tax, in respect of a passenger vehicle or aircraft, claimable by an individual or partnership where the credit is determinable by reference to capital cost allowance in respect of the vehicle or aircraft (that is, where there is less than exclusive use in commercial activity). In general, this subsection defers the time the input tax refund is considered to be received for income tax purposes to the taxation year or fiscal period following that in which Québec sales tax in respect of the property is considered as payable for the purposes of determining the input tax refund. This avoids circularity with subsection 248(16.1). The provision preserves the proper timing between the input tax refund entitlement and the adjustment to the capital cost. This change applies in respect of Québec input tax refunds that become eligible to be claimed in taxation years that begin after February 27, 2004.

Related Provisions: 248(17) — Parallel rule for GST.

Proposed Addition — 248(17.2)

(17.2) Input tax credit on assessment — An amount in respect of an input tax credit that is deemed by subsection 296(5) of the Excise Tax Act to have been claimed in a return or application filed under Part IX of that Act is deemed to have been so claimed for the reporting period under that Act that includes the time when the Minister makes the assessment referred to in that subsection.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(18), will add subsec. 248(17.2), applicable in respect of input tax credits that become eligible to be claimed in taxation years that begin after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: New subsection 248(17.2) determines, in respect of input tax credits that become eligible to be claimed in taxation years that begin after December 20, 2002, the time at which an input tax credit is considered to have been claimed in respect of certain input tax credit assessments made under the Excise Tax Act (ETA).

This subsection provides that, if an amount in respect of an input tax credit is deemed by subsection 296(5) of the ETA to have been claimed in a return or application filed under Part IX of that Act, the input tax credit is deemed to have been claimed for the GST reporting period that includes the time the Minister of National Revenue makes the GST assessment.

Accordingly, the rule in clause 248(16)(a)(i)(A) of the Income Tax Act (ITA) relating to the time at which an input tax credit is considered to have been received cannot apply to an input tax credit to which subsection 296(5) of the ETA applies. However, the other rules in paragraph 248(16)(a) of the ITA that determine the time at which an input tax credit is received are to be applied on the basis that an input tax credit (to which subsection 296(5) of the ETA applies) is not claimed by the taxpayer until the reporting period that includes the time at which the input tax credit is actually assessed — i.e., not the reporting period to which the assessment relates but the reporting period in which the input tax credit is deemed to be claimed for GST purposes.

Related Provisions: 248(17.3) — Parallel rule for QST.

Proposed Addition — 248(17.3)

(17.3) Quebec input tax refund on assessment — An amount in respect of an input tax refund that is deemed by section 30.5 of An Act respecting the Ministère du Revenu, R.S.Q., c. M-31, to have been claimed is deemed to have been so claimed for the reporting period under An Act respecting the Québec sales tax, R.S.Q., c. T-0.1, that includes the day on which an assessment is issued to the taxpayer indicating that the refund has been allocated under that section 30.5.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(18), will add subsec. 248(17.3), applicable in respect of input tax refunds and rebates that become eligible to be claimed in taxation years that begin after February 27, 2004.

Technical Notes: New subsection 248(17.3) provides that an input tax refund of Québec sales tax, that is deemed to be claimed by section 30.5 of An Act respecting the Québec Revenue Minister, is deemed to be claimed for the reporting period under An Act respecting Québec Sales Tax that includes the day on which an assessment is issued to the taxpayer indicating that the refund has been allocated to the taxpayer. This change applies in respect of Québec input tax refunds and rebates that become eligible to be claimed in taxation years that begin after February 27, 2004.

Related Provisions: 248(17.2) — Parallel rule for GST.

(18) Goods and services tax — repayment of input tax credit — For the purposes of this Act, where an amount is added at a particular time in determining the net tax of a taxpayer under Part IX of the Excise Tax Act in respect of an input tax credit relating to property or a service that had been previously deducted in determining the net tax of the taxpayer, that amount shall be deemed to be assistance repaid at the particular time in respect of the property or service pursuant to a legal obligation to repay all or part of that assistance.

Related Provisions: 20(1)(hh) — Deduction for repayment of assistance; 39(13) — Capital loss on repayment of assistance; 53(1)(e)(ix)(B) — Adjusted cost base of partnership interest; 127(10.7) — Investment tax credit — repayment of assistance; 248(18.1) — Parallel rule for QST.

Proposed Addition — 248(18.1)

(18.1) Repayment of Quebec input tax refund — For the purposes of this Act, if an amount is added at a particular time in determining the net tax of a taxpayer under An Act respecting the Québec sales tax, R.S.Q., c. T-0.1, in respect of an input tax refund relating to property or service that had been previously deducted in determining the net tax of the taxpayer, that amount is deemed to be assistance repaid at the particular time in respect of the property or service under a legal obligation to repay all or part of that assistance.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(19), will add subsec. 248(18.1), applicable after February 27, 2004.

Technical Notes: New subsection 248(18.1) provides that an amount added in determining net tax of a taxpayer under An Act respecting Quebec Sales Tax in respect of an input tax refund relating to a property or service that had previously been deducted in computing such net tax is treated, as assistance repaid under a legal obligation to repay that assistance. Such an amount could be so added under Quebec law pursuant to an assessment of Quebec sales tax. As a consequence, such an amount will either be deducted in computing income under paragraph 20(1)(hh) or will increase the cost or capital cost of the related property or the amount of the related expenditure or expenditure pool for tax purposes (as provided under subsection 13(7.1), paragraphs 37(1)(c) and 53(2)(k) and under the definitions “cumulative Canadian exploration expense” in subsection 66.1(6), “cumulative Canadian development expense” in subsection 66.2(5) and “cumulative Canadian oil and gas property expense” in subsection 66.4(5)).

Related Provisions: 20(1)(hh) — Deduction for repayment of assistance; 39(13) — Capital loss on repayment of assistance; 53(1)(e)(ix)(B) — Adjusted cost base of partnership interest; 127(10.7) — Investment tax credit — repayment of assistance; 248(18) — Parallel rule for GST.

(19) When property available for use — Except as otherwise provided, property shall be considered to have become available for use for the purposes of this Act at the time at which it has, or would have if it were depreciable property, become available for use for the purpose of subsection 13(26).

Related Provisions: 13(27)–(31) — Meaning of “available for use”; 37(1.2) — R&D capital expenditures; 127(11.2) — Investment tax credit.

History: Subsec. 248(19) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 192(18), applicable after 1989.

(20) Partition of property — Subject to subsections (21) to (23), for the purposes of this Act, where at any time a property owned by two or more persons is the subject of a partition, the following rules apply, notwithstanding any retroactive or declaratory effect of the partition:

(a) each such person who had an interest in the property immediately before that time shall be deemed not to have disposed at that time of that proportion, not exceeding 100%, of the interest that the fair market value of that person’s interest in the property immediately after that time is of the fair market value of that person’s interest in the property immediately before that time,

(b) each such person who has an interest in the property immediately after that time shall be deemed not to have acquired at that time that proportion of the interest that the fair market value of that person’s interest in the property immediately before that time is of the fair market value of that person’s interest in the property immediately after that time,

(c) each such person who had an interest in the property immediately before that time shall be deemed to have had until that time, and to have disposed at that time of, that proportion of the person’s interest to which paragraph (a) does not apply,

(d) each such person who has an interest in the property immediately after that time shall be deemed not to have had before that time, and to have acquired at that time, that proportion of the person’s interest to which paragraph (b) does not apply, and

(e) paragraphs (a) to (d) do not apply where the interest of the person is an interest in fungible tangible property described in that person’s inventory, and, for the purposes of this subsection, where an interest in the property is an undivided interest, the fair market value of the interest at any time shall be deemed to be equal to that proportion of the fair market value of the property at that time that the interest is of all the undivided interests in the property.

Proposed Amendment — 248(20)

(20) Partition of property — Subject to subsections (21) to (23), for the purposes of this Act, where at any time a property owned by two or more persons is the subject of a partition, the following rules apply, notwithstanding any retroactive or declaratory effect of the partition:

(a) each such person who had, immediately before that time, an interest in, or for civil law a right in, the property (which interest or right in the property is referred to in this subsection and subsection (21) as an “interest” or a “right”, as the case may be) shall be deemed not to have disposed at that time of that proportion, not exceeding 100%, of the interest or right that the fair market value of that person’s interest or right in the property immediately after that time is of the fair market value of that person’s interest or right in the property immediately before that time,

(b) each such person who has an interest or right in the property immediately after that time shall be deemed not to have acquired at that time that proportion of the interest or right that the fair market value of that person’s interest or right in the property immediately before that time is of the fair market value of that person’s interest or right in the property immediately after that time,

(c) each such person who had an interest or a right in the property immediately before that time shall be deemed to have had until that time, and to have disposed at that time of, that proportion of the person’s interest or right to which paragraph (a) does not apply,

(d) each such person who has an interest or a right in the property immediately after that time shall be deemed not to have had before that time, and to have acquired at that time, that proportion of the person’s interest or right to which paragraph (b) does not apply, and

(e) paragraphs (a) to (d) do not apply where the interest or right of the person is an interest or a right in fungible tangible property, or for civil law fungible corporeal property described in that person’s inventory, and, for the purposes of this subsection, where an interest or a right in the property is an undivided interest or right, the fair market value of the interest or right at any time shall be deemed to be equal to that proportion of the fair market value of the property at that time that the interest or right is of all the undivided interests or rights in the property.

(25.2) Trusts to ensure obligations fulfilled — Except for the purpose of this subsection, where at any time property is transferred to a trust in circumstances to which paragraph (k) of the definition “disposition” in subsection (1) applies, the trust is deemed to deal with the property as agent for the transferor throughout the period that begins at the time of the transfer and ends at the time of the first change after that time in the beneficial ownership of the property.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(22), will amend subpara. 248(25.3)(c)(i) to read as above, applicable to units issued after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 248(25.3) of the Income Tax Act applies where a trust (other than a personal trust or a trust prescribed for the purpose of subsection 107(2)) issues particular units of the trust to a taxpayer directly in satisfaction of a right to a qualifying amount payable from the trust in respect of the taxpayer's capital interest in the trust. In such a case, the cost to the taxpayer of the particular units is deemed to equal the amount so payable. Subparagraph 248(25.3)(c)(i) provides that in the case of particular units of a trust that are capital property, a qualifying amount payable is one that causes, or but for clauses 53(2)(h)(i.1)(A) and (B) would cause, a reduction under subparagraph 53(2)(h)(i.1) to the adjusted cost base of the taxpayer's capital interest in the trust.

Subparagraph 248(25.3)(c)(i) is amended to provide that, in the case of particular units of a trust that are capital property, a qualifying amount payable is an amount payable that does not represent proceeds of disposition of a capital interest in the trust.

- (ii) the particular unit is not capital property and subparagraph 53(2)(h)(i.1) does not apply in respect of the amount described in paragraph (a) but would so apply if that subparagraph were read without reference to clauses 53(2)(h)(i.1)(A) and (B).

(25.4) Where acquisition by another of right to enforce — If at a particular time a taxpayer's capital interest in a trust includes a right to enforce payment of an amount by the trust, the amount shall be added at the particular time to the cost otherwise determined to the taxpayer of the capital interest where

- immediately after the particular time there is a disposition by the taxpayer of the capital interest;
- as a consequence of the disposition, the right to enforce payment of the amount is acquired by another person or partnership; and
- if the right to enforce payment of the amount had been satisfied by a payment to the taxpayer by the trust, there would have been no disposition of that right for the purposes of this Act because of the application of paragraph (i) of the definition "disposition" in subsection (1).

- as consideration for any property acquired by the debtor or services rendered to the debtor, or
- that is deductible in computing the debtor's income, for the purposes of applying the provisions of this Act relating to the treatment of the debtor in respect of the liability, the liability shall be considered to be an obligation, issued at that time by the debtor, that has a principal amount at that time equal to the amount of the liability at that time.

- unless the context requires otherwise, an obligation issued by a debtor includes any part of a larger obligation that was issued by the debtor;
- the principal amount of that part shall be considered to be the portion of the principal amount of that larger obligation that relates to that part; and
- the amount for which that part was issued shall be considered to be the portion of the amount for which that larger obligation was issued that relates to that part.

Related Provisions: 43 — Partial disposition of capital property; 142.4(9) — Partial disposition of specified debt obligation by financial institution.

History: Subsec. 248(27) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 43(3), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994.

(28) Limitation respecting inclusions, deductions and tax credits — Unless a contrary intention is evident, no provision of this Act shall be read or construed

- to require the inclusion or permit the deduction, either directly or indirectly, in computing a taxpayer's income, taxable income or taxable income earned in Canada, for a taxation year or in computing a taxpayer's income or loss for a taxation year from a particular source or from sources in a particular place, of any amount to the extent that the amount has already been directly or indirectly included or deducted, as the case may be, in computing such income, taxable income, taxable income earned in Canada or loss, for the year or any preceding taxation year;
- to permit the deduction, either directly or indirectly, in computing a taxpayer's tax payable under any Part of this Act for a taxation year of any amount to the extent that the amount has already been directly or indirectly deducted in computing such tax payable for the year or any preceding taxation year; or

Technical Notes: At common law, it is generally the view that a gift includes only a property transferred voluntarily, without any contractual obligation and with no advantage of a material character returned to the transferor.

In contrast, under section 1806 of the Civil Code of Quebec ("CCQ"), a gift in Quebec is a contract by which ownership of property is transferred by gratuitous title. However, the rights of ownership may be separated, such that it may be possible for a transferor to transfer part of the rights of ownership without any material advantage returned (i.e., by way of gift) and to transfer the other Part separately for consideration. It is therefore possible, in Quebec, to sell a property to a charity at a price below fair market value, resulting in a gift of the difference.

Under both the common law and the CCQ, it is generally accepted that a transfer of property is not a gift unless the donor is impoverished by the transfer to the benefit of the donee and it is the donor's intention to enrich the donee without consideration.

At common law there is generally no ability to separate the rights of ownership of a single property in the course of making a gift. As such, at common law a contract to dispose of a property to a charity at a price below fair market value would not generally be considered to include a gift.

Nevertheless, there have been certain decisions made under the common law where it has been found that a transfer of property to a charity was made partly in consideration for services and partly as a gift.

Subsections 248(30), (31) and (32) are added to the Act to clarify the circumstances under which taxpayers and donees may be eligible for tax benefits available under the Act in respect of the impoverishment of a taxpayer in favour of a donee. In addition to the clarification provided by these new rules, on December 24, 2002, the Canada Revenue Agency released guidelines (Income Tax Technical News No. 26) that describe how it will apply the new rules to various situations and fundraising methods commonly used in the charitable sector. Subsection 248(34) provides technical rules regarding the repayment of debt that previously reduced the eligible amount of a gift. Subsections 248(35) to (39) provide technical rules, regarding the eligible amount of a gift or the value of property transferred and benefits receivable, that apply in calculating the eligible amount of a gift or political contribution. New subsection (40) provides that the rule in subsection 248(30) does not generally apply to inter-charity transfers. New subsection (41) deems the eligible amount of a gift to be nil if a donor fails to provide that information.

In general, these provisions are intended to reflect the policy that the amount eligible for an income tax benefit to a donor, by way of a charitable donation deduction or credit or a political contributions tax credit, should reflect the economic impact on the donor (before considering the income tax benefit) of the gift or contribution.

(30) Intention to give — The existence of an amount of an advantage in respect of a transfer of property does not in and by itself disqualify the transfer from being a gift to a qualified donee if

- (a) the amount of the advantage does not exceed 80% of the fair market value of the transferred property; or
- (b) the transferor of the property establishes to the satisfaction of the Minister that the transfer was made with the intention to make a gift.

Technical Notes: For the transfer of property to qualify as a gift, it is necessary that the transfer be voluntary and with the intention to make a gift. At common law, where the transferor of the property has received any form of consideration or benefit, it is generally presumed that such an intention is not present. New subsection 248(30), which applies in respect of transfers of property after December 20, 2002 to qualified donees (such as registered charities), allows the opportunity to rebut this presumption. New paragraph 248(30)(a) provides that the existence of an amount of an advantage to the transferor will not necessarily disqualify the transfer from being a gift if the amount of the advantage does not exceed 80% of the fair market value of the transferred property.

Example

Mr. Short transfers land and a building with a fair market value of $300,000 to a registered charity. The charity assumes liability for an outstanding $100,000 mortgage on the property. The assumption of the mortgage by the charity does not necessarily disqualify the transfer from being a gift for the purposes of the Act.

If the value of the mortgage is equal to the outstanding amount (e.g., the interest rate and terms and conditions are representative of current market conditions), the eligible amount of the gift, in respect of which Mr. Short may be entitled to a tax credit under subsection 118.1(3), is $200,000.

If the amount of an advantage in respect of a transfer of property exceeds 80% of the fair market value of the transferred property, new paragraph 248(30)(b) provides that the transfer will not necessarily be disqualified from being a gift if the transferor can establish to the satisfaction of the Minister of National Revenue that the transfer was made with the intention to make a gift.

In the above example, if the amount of the mortgage outstanding had been greater than $240,000, Mr. Short (or the charity on Mr. Short's behalf) could apply to the Minister of National Revenue for a determination as to whether the transfer was made with the intention to make a gift.

It is generally accepted that the tax benefit available to a taxpayer, by way of a charitable donation deduction or credit, is not considered an advantage or benefit that would reflect a lack of donative intent on the part of a taxpayer. However, there may be circumstances where the intention of a taxpayer to make a gift is in doubt because of the combination of tax and other benefits to the taxpayer. If the primary motivation of a taxpayer for entering into a transaction or series of transactions is to return a profit to the taxpayer by way of a combination of tax and other benefits, the taxpayer may not be impoverished by the transfer of a property to a charity. Subsection 248(30) is not intended to allow a taxpayer to profit by the making of a gift.

Dept. of Finance news release 2003-061, Dec. 5, 2003: The Minister also released draft amendments relating to limited-recourse debt and "split-receipting." These measures implement proposals introduced in Budget 2003 that address charitable donation arrangements that were promoted in recent years involving the use of limited-recourse debt. [See 143.2(6.1) and 248(34) — ed.] The draft amendments also incorporate changes put forward in December 2002 relating to the right to receive a benefit in respect of the donation. (31) Eligible amount of gift or monetary contribution [split receipting] — The eligible amount of a gift or monetary contribution is the amount by which the fair market value of the property that is the subject of the gift or monetary contribution exceeds the amount of the advantage, if any, in respect of the gift or monetary contribution.

Technical Notes: New subsection 248(31), which applies in respect of gifts and political contributions made after December 20, 2002, defines the eligible amount of a gift or contribution as the amount by which the fair market value of the property that is the subject of the gift or contribution exceeds the amount of the advantage, if any, in respect of the gift or contribution. Subsection 248(31) is added concurrently with amendments to subsections 110.1(1) and 118.1(1), which describe the types of gifts in respect of which an eligible amount will qualify for a deduction (for corporations) or a tax credit (for individuals). The amount of the advantage in respect of a gift or contribution is described in new subsection 248(32).

It is proposed that subsections 3501(1), (1.1) and (6) of the Regulations be amended to provide that official receipts issued by a registered organization in respect of a gift made after December 20, 2002 contain, in addition to the information already prescribed, the eligible amount of the gift.

Related Provisions: 38.1 — Allocation of capital gain where advantage exists; 110.1(3) — Fair market value of property donated by corporation; 118.1(6) — FMV of property donated by individual; 118.1(7)(d) — Determination of FMV of gift of art by artist; 127(4.1) — Monetary contribution (political); 248(30) — Existence of advantage does not negate gift; 248(32) — Determination of amount of advantage; 248(39)(a) — Anti-avoidance — selling property and donating proceeds; 248(41) — Donation value deemed nil if taxpayer does not inform donee of circumstances requiring reduction.

Charities Policies: CPC-025: Gift — expenses — volunteer; CPC-026: Fundraising — third-party fundraisers.

(32) Amount of advantage — The amount of the advantage in respect of a gift or monetary contribution by a taxpayer is the total of

- (a) the total of all amounts, other than an amount referred to in paragraph (b), each of which is the value, at the time the gift or monetary contribution is made, of any property, service, compensation, use or other benefit that the taxpayer, or a person or partnership who does not deal at arm's length with the taxpayer, has received, obtained or enjoyed, or is entitled, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently, to receive, obtain, or enjoy

- (i) that is consideration for the gift or monetary contribution,

- (ii) that is in gratitude for the gift or monetary contribution, or

- (iii) that is in any other way related to the gift or monetary contribution, and

- (b) the limited-recourse debt, determined under subsection 143.2(6.1), in respect of the gift or monetary contribution at the time the gift or monetary contribution is made.

Technical Notes: New subsection 248(32), which generally applies in respect of gifts or political contributions made after December 20, 2002, describes the amount of an advantage in respect of a gift or contribution as, in general, the total value of all property, services, compensation or other benefits to which the donor of a property is entitled.

Subsection 248(32) is added concurrently with the addition of subsection 248(31), which defines the eligible amount of a gift or contribution, and with the amendment of subsection 127(3) in respect of contributions to a political party. The amount of an advantage reduces the eligible amount of a gift or contribution.

In general, new subsection 248(32) is intended to apply in respect of any transaction or series of transactions having either the purpose or the effect of reducing the economic impact to a donor of a gift or contribution. This includes, for instance, situations where a charity invests funds or acquires property in a manner that benefits the donor. The reduction to an eligible amount also includes an advantage that is partial consideration for, or in gratitude for, the gift or contribution, or is in any way related to the gift or contribution. An example would include the option of a donor to satisfy or pay a loan by assigning or transferring to another person a property (including the rights under an insurance policy) that has less economic value than the amount of loan outstanding. Another example would include an assumption of a donor's risk by a charity, where the acquisition, directly or indirectly, of an interest in a property of the donor by the charity may have the effect of reducing the potential loss of the donor from that investment. (However, a tax credit or deduction resulting from a charitable donation is not considered a benefit.)

An advantage may exist even though it is not received at the time of the gift or contribution. For example, it may have been received prior to the time of the gift or may be contingent or receivable in the future. The advantage may accrue either to the donor or to a person not dealing at arm's length with the donor. It is not necessary that the advantage be receivable from the donee.

Paragraph 248(32)(b) includes as an advantage any limited-recourse debt in respect of the gift or contribution. For additional details regarding limited-recourse debt, see the commentary to new subsection 143.2(6.1).

It is proposed that subsections 2000(1), and (6) and 3501(1), (1.1) and (6) of the Regulations be amended to provide that official receipts issued by a registered organization or political party in respect of a gift or contribution contain, in addition to the information already prescribed, the eligible amount and the amount of the advantage, if any, in respect of the gift or contribution.

Related Provisions: 248(30) — Existence of advantage does not negate gift; 248(33) — Deemed cost of property acquired; 248(34) — Repayment of limited-recourse debt.

Charities Policies: CPC-025: Gift — expenses — volunteer; CPC-026: Fundraising — third-party fundraisers.

(33) Cost of property acquired by donor — The cost to a taxpayer of a property, acquired by the taxpayer in circumstances where subsection (32) applies to include the value of the property in computing the amount of the advantage in respect of a gift or monetary contribution, is equal to the fair market value of the property at the time the gift or monetary contribution is made.

Technical Notes: New subsection 248(33), which applies in respect of gifts or political contributions made after December 20, 2002, provides that the cost to a taxpayer of property acquired by the taxpayer in the course of the making of a gift or contribution by the taxpayer is the fair market value of the property at the time of the making of the gift or contribution. The fair market value of such a property is relevant in computing the amount of the advantage in respect of the gift or contribution under subsection 248(32).

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(23), will add subsecs. 248(30)–(33), applicable in respect of gifts and monetary contributions made after December 20, 2002, except that subsec. 248(32) is to be read without reference to

(i) its para. (b) in respect of gifts and monetary contributions made before February 19, 2003, and

(ii) its subpara. (a)(iii) in respect of gifts and monetary contributions made before 6:00 p.m. EST on December 5, 2003.

Proposed Addition — 248(34)

(34) Repayment of limited-recourse debt — If at any time in a taxation year a taxpayer has paid an amount (in this subsection referred to as the “repaid amount”) on account of the principal amount of an indebtedness which was, before that time, an unpaid principal amount that was a limited-recourse debt referred to in subsection 143.2(6.1) (in this subsection referred to as the “former limited-recourse debt”) in respect of a gift or monetary contribution (in this subsection referred to as the “original gift” or “original monetary contribution”, respectively, as the case may be) of the taxpayer (otherwise than by way of assignment or transfer of a guarantee, security or similar indemnity or covenant, or by way of a payment in respect of which any taxpayer referred to in subsection 143.2(6.1) has incurred an indebtedness that would be a limited-recourse debt referred to in that subsection if that indebtedness were in respect of a gift or monetary contribution made at the time that that indebtedness was incurred), the following rules apply:

(a) if the former limited-recourse debt is in respect of the original gift, for the purposes of sections 110.1 and 118.1, the taxpayer is deemed to have made in the taxation year a gift to a qualified donee, the eligible amount of which deemed gift is the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount that would have been the eligible amount of the original gift, if the total of all such repaid amounts paid at or before that time were paid immediately before the original gift was made,

exceeds

(ii) the total of

(A) the eligible amount of the original gift, and

(B) the eligible amount of all other gifts deemed by this paragraph to have been made before that time in respect of the original gift; and

(b) if the former limited-recourse debt is in respect of the original monetary contribution, for the purposes of subsection 127(3), the taxpayer is deemed to have made in the taxation year a monetary contribution referred to in that subsection, the eligible amount of which is the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount that would have been the eligible amount of the original monetary contribution, if the total of all such repaid amounts paid at or before that time were paid immediately before the original monetary contribution was made,

exceeds

(ii) the total of

(A) the eligible amount of the original monetary contribution, and

(B) the eligible amount of all other monetary contributions deemed by this paragraph to have been made before that time in respect of the original monetary contribution.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(23), will add subsec. 248(34), applicable in respect of gifts and monetary contributions made after February 18, 2003.

Technical Notes: New subsection 248(34), which applies in respect of gifts or political contributions made after February 18, 2003, generally provides that a repayment of the principal amount of a limited-recourse debt in respect of a gift or political contribution is deemed to be a gift in the year it is paid. However, in some circumstances the total amount of limited-recourse debt and other advantages to the donor may exceed the fair market value of the property transferred to a charity, resulting in no eligible amount to the donor under subsection 248(31). In this case, the donor must pay off the excess amount before any amount will be allowed as a gift. Also, a payment financed by other limited-recourse debt or made by way of assignment or transfer of a guarantee, security or similar indemnity or covenant is not recognized for these purposes. For example, the assumption of a taxpayer's limited-recourse debt by another person, in exchange for an insurance policy in favour of the taxpayer that guarantees a particular rate of return on an investment held by any person, would not qualify as a deemed gift under subsection 248(34).

Dept. of Finance news release 2003-061, Dec. 5, 2003: The Minister also released draft amendments relating to limited-recourse debt and “split-receipting.” These measures implement proposals introduced in Budget 2003 that address charitable donation arrangements that were promoted in recent years involving the use of limited-recourse debt. [See under 248(35)–(41) for full text of news release — ed.]

Proposed Addition — 248(35)–(41)

(35) Deemed fair market value [of donated property] — For the purposes of subsection (31), paragraph 69(1)(b) and subsections 110.1(2.1) and (3) and 118.1(5.4) and (6), the fair market value of a property that is the subject of a gift made by a taxpayer to a qualified donee is deemed to be the lesser of the fair market value of the property otherwise determined and the cost, or in the case of capital property, the adjusted cost base, of the property to the taxpayer immediately before the gift is made if

(a) the taxpayer acquired the property under a gifting arrangement that is a tax shelter as defined in subsection 237.1(1); or

(b) except where the gift is made as a consequence of the taxpayer's death,

(i) the taxpayer acquired the property less than 3 years before the day that the gift is made [see proposed exception in comfort letter below — ed.], or

(ii) the taxpayer acquired the property less than 10 years before the day that the gift is made and it is reasonable to conclude that, at the time the taxpayer acquired the property, one of the main reasons for the acquisition was to make a gift of the property to a qualified donee.

Technical Notes: New subsection 248(35), which applies in respect of gifts made after 6:00 p.m. (EST), December 5, 2003, provides that the fair market value of a property that is the subject of a gift is, for the purposes of determining the eligible amount of a gift under subsection 248(31), deemed to be the lesser of the actual fair market value of the property and its cost to the donor. This rule applies if the property was acquired by the donor as part of a gifting arrangement that is a tax shelter. For more information on gifting arrangements, refer to the commentary for subsection 237.1(1).

Unless the donation is made as a consequence of the donor's death, this rule also applies if the property was acquired

- less than three years before the time of donation, or
- less than 10 years before that time, if one of the main purposes of acquisition was to gift the property to a qualified donee.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 23, 2004:

Mr. Alain Ranger, Fasken Martineau DuMoulin LLP, Montreal, QC

Dear Mr. Ranger:

SUBJECT: Draft Amendments Regarding Charitable Donations

I am writing in regard to your letter of April 15, 2004 and your subsequent discussions with us, concerning the draft amendments to the Income Tax Act ("the Act") proposed by the Minister of Finance on December 5, 2003. You have suggested that these proposed amendments be revised to grandfather gifts made pursuant to a written undertaking given before that date.

It is our view that such a basis for grandfathering could be problematic in the area of gifting, since it may be argued as a matter of law that a promise to make a gift is not enforceable. However, we have read with interest the submissions of others who have suggested that proposed subsection 248(35) of the Act not apply in respect of newly-issued shares acquired in the context of a rollover of property to a corporation. We also understand that, in the situation you describe, the donated shares are publicly listed shares that do not meet the exception in proposed paragraph 248(36)(c) of the Act because the gift will be made to a private foundation.

The proposed rule in subsection 248(35) is not, in general, intended to apply in respect of property that has been held for longer than three years and was not originally acquired with an expectation of donation. Accordingly, a result that would cause subsection 248(35) to apply simply because that property has been substituted with another property for the purposes of making a donation, would be inconsistent with the intent of the proposed rule. However, we would have policy concerns if an exception to the proposed rule could be used by a donor, or a related group of taxpayers that includes the donor, to avoid the application of the rule to property that has been held less than three years or acquired with an expectation of donation.

To accommodate your concerns, without creating an opportunity for avoidance, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that an exception to proposed subsection 248(35) apply in respect of the donation of certain shares of a private corporation controlled by the donor or a person related to the donor. These shares would be exempted from the proposed rule if they were received as consideration for property, transferred to the corporation, to which subsection 248(35) would not have applied if instead that property had been donated, at the time of the transfer, by the transferor to a qualified donee. However, no tax deduction or credit would be available if it could reasonably be concluded that a particular gift was related to a transaction or series of transactions in respect of which one of the purposes was to avoid the application of subsection 248(35) to any gift of any property.

We will recommend that this exception have the same coming-into-force as subsection 248(35) of the Act.

Of course, I can offer no assurance that the Minister of Finance will agree with the recommendation that I have described. Nonetheless, I hope that this discussion is helpful.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber, General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Related Provisions: 52(4) — Cost of property acquired as prize is its fair market value; 87(2)(m.2), 88(1)(e.2) — Amalgamation or windup — continuing corporation; 237.1(1) — Definitions of "gifting arrangement" and "tax shelter"; 248(36) — Non-arm's length acquisition by donor; 248(37) — Exceptions; 248(38) — Anti-avoidance rule — artificial transactions; 248(39) — Anti-avoidance — selling property and donating proceeds; 248(41) — Donation value deemed nil if taxpayer does not inform donee of circumstances requiring reduction.

(36) Non-arm's length transaction — If a taxpayer acquired a property that is the subject of a gift to which subsection (35) applies because of subparagraph (35)(b)(i) or (ii) and the property was, at any time within the 3-year or 10-year period, respectively, that ends when the gift was made, acquired by a person or partnership with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length, for the purpose of applying subsection (35) to the taxpayer, the cost, or in the case of capital property, the adjusted cost base, of the property to the taxpayer immediately before the gift is made is deemed to be equal to the lowest amount that is the cost, or in the case of capital property, the adjusted cost base, to the taxpayer or any of those persons or partnerships immediately before the property was disposed of by that person or partnership.

Technical Notes: New subsection 248(36) applies in conjunction with subsection 248(35), to "look-back" to discern whether a donated property was previously acquired by a person dealing non-arm's length with the donor. If subsection 248(35) applies because the donor acquired the property within the three years of donation, then if a non-arm's length person owned that property within that three-year period, the value of the gift to the donor will be the lower of the taxpayer's cost and the lowest cost to any such non-arm's length person.

Similarly, the rule will apply if subsection (35) applies because the taxpayer acquired the property within the last ten years and one of the main reasons of the acquisition was to gift the property, if a non-arm's length person acquired that property within that ten-year period.

Related Provisions: 248(41) — Donation value deemed nil if taxpayer does not inform donee of circumstances requiring reduction.

(37) Non-application of subsec. (35) — Subsection (35) does not apply to a gift

- (a) of inventory;
- (b) of real property or an immovable situated in Canada;
- (c) of an object referred to in subparagraph 39(1)(a)(i.1);
- (d) of property to which paragraph 38(a.1) or (a.2) would apply, if those paragraphs were read without reference to "other than a private foundation";
- (e) of a share of the capital stock of a corporation if
 - (i) the share was issued by the corporation to the donor,
 - (ii) immediately before the gift, the corporation was controlled by the donor, a person related to the donor or a group of persons each of whom is related to the donor, and
 - (iii) subsection (35) would not have applied in respect of the consideration for which the share was issued had that consideration been donated by the donor to the qualified donee when the share was so donated;
- (f) by a corporation of property if
 - (i) the property was acquired by the corporation in circumstances to which subsection 85(1) or (2) applied,
 - (ii) immediately before the gift, the shareholder from whom the corporation acquired the property controlled the corporation or was related to a person or each member of a group of persons that controlled the corporation, and
 - (iii) subsection (35) would not have applied in respect of the property had the property not been transferred to the corporation and had the shareholder made the gift to the qualified donee when the corporation so made the gift; or
 - (g) of a property that was acquired in circumstances where subsection 70(6) or (9) or 73(1), (3) or (4) applied, unless subsection (36) would have applied if this subsection were read without reference to this paragraph.

Technical Notes: New subsection 248(37) provides exceptions to the application of subsection 248(35) where the property that is the subject of a gift is an ecological gift, inventory, real property situated in Canada, publicly-traded securities or cultural property; the value of which is certified by the Cultural Property Export Review Board.

In some circumstances, a shareholder might transfer a property to a controlled corporation in exchange for shares issued by the corporation, and then donate the shares. Alternatively, the corporation might donate the property it received. If subsection 248(35) would not have applied to a gift of a property by a shareholder, either because it is a type of property referred to above or because subsection 248(35) would not apply to the shareholder in any event, and if the shareholder donates the share, subsection 248(37) will further exempt the share from the application of subsection 248(35). If subsections 85(1) or 85(2) applied to the transfer of such an exempt property to the corporation, then subsection 248(37) will preclude the application of subsection 248(35) to that property if it is then donated by the corporation.

Similarly, sometimes a donor will make a gift of a property that was acquired in circumstances where subsection 70(6) or (9) or 73(1), (3) or (4) applied. In such a case, the donor has acquired the property from a transferor (such as a spouse) on a tax-deferred "rollover" basis. Unless the transferor acquired the property within the 3-year period referred to in subsection 248(35) (or the 10-year period, if applicable), subsection 248(37) provides that subsection 248(35) will not apply in these circumstances to deem the value of the gift to be the donor's rollover cost or adjusted cost base.

(38) Artificial transactions — The eligible amount of a particular gift of property by a taxpayer is nil if it can reasonably be concluded that the particular gift relates to a transaction or series of transactions

(a) one of the purposes of which is to avoid the application of subsection (35) to a gift of any property; or

(b) that would, if this Act were read without reference to this paragraph, result in a tax benefit to which subsection 245(2) applies.

Technical Notes: New subsection 248(38) applies in respect of gifts made after 6:00 p.m. (EST), December 5, 2003, to prevent a donor from avoiding the application of subsection 248(35) by disposing and reacquiring a property before donating it to a qualified donee. If this is the purpose of any transaction or series of transactions that includes a disposition or acquisition of a property, for such gifts made before July 18, 2005, the cost of the property to the donor for the purpose of subsection 248(35) is deemed to be the lowest cost incurred by the taxpayer at any time to acquire that property or an identical property.

For gifts made on or after July 18, 2005, the eligible amount is deemed to be nil if a transaction or series of transactions

- has, as one of its purposes, the avoidance of the application of subsection 248(35), or
- would otherwise result in a tax benefit to which the General Anti-Avoidance Rule in subsection 245(2) would otherwise apply.

For example, the eligible amount of a gift resulting from a transaction or series to which subsection 248(38) would apply, if the gift were made before July 18, 2005, would be deemed to be nil if instead the gift were made on or on or after July 18, 2005.

The objectives of the provisions in the Act related to gifting are generally described above under the heading "Gifts and Contributions", but are not limited to that description.

Related Provisions: 248(41) — Donation value deemed nil if taxpayer does not inform donee of circumstances requiring reduction.

(39) Substantive gift [selling property and donating proceeds] — If a taxpayer disposes of a property (in this subsection referred to as the "substantive gift") that is a capital property or an eligible capital property of the taxpayer, to a recipient that is a registered party, a provincial division of a registered party, a registered association or a candidate, as those terms are defined in the Canada Elections Act, or that is a qualified donee, subsection (35) would have applied in respect of the substantive gift if it had been the subject of a gift by the taxpayer to a qualified donee, and all or a part of the proceeds of disposition of the substantive gift are (or are substituted, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, for) property that is the subject of a gift or monetary contribution by the taxpayer to the recipient or any person dealing not at arm's length with the recipient, the following rules apply:

(a) for the purpose of subsection (31), the fair market value of the property that is the subject of the gift or monetary contribution made by the taxpayer is deemed to be that proportion of the lesser of the fair market value of the substantive gift and the cost, or if the substantive gift is capital property of the taxpayer, the adjusted cost base, of the substantive gift to the taxpayer immediately before the disposition to the recipient, that the fair market value otherwise determined of the property that is the subject of the gift or monetary contribution is of the proceeds of disposition of the substantive gift;

(b) if the substantive gift is capital property of the taxpayer, for the purpose of the definitions "proceeds of disposition" of property in subsection 13(21) and section 54, the sale price of the substantive gift is to be reduced by the amount by which the fair market value of the property that is the subject of the gift (determined without reference to this section) exceeds the fair market value determined under paragraph (a); and

(c) if the substantive gift is eligible capital property of the taxpayer, the amount determined under paragraph (a) in the description of E in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) in respect of the substantive gift is to be reduced by the amount by which the fair market value of the property that is the subject of the gift (determined without reference to this section) exceeds the fair market value determined under paragraph (a).

Technical Notes: New subsection 248(39), which applies in respect of gifts made after February 26, 2004, prevents a donor from avoiding the application of subsection 248(35) by disposing a property (the "substantive gift") to a qualified donee and donating the proceeds, rather than donating the property itself. The provision applies similarly in respect of political contributions. The fair market value of the gift or contribution of the proceeds, for the purpose of determining its eligible amount under subsection 248(31), is deemed to be the lesser of the fair market value of the property sold and its cost. Subsection 248(39) does not apply if subsection 248(35) would not have applied to a gift by the taxpayer of that property.

Related Provisions: 248(41) — Donation value deemed nil if taxpayer does not inform donee of circumstances requiring reduction.

(40) Inter-charity gifts — Subsection (30) does not apply in respect of a gift received by a qualified donee from a registered charity.

Related Provisions: 248(41) — Eligible amount deemed nil if information not provided.

Technical Notes: The July 18, 2005 proposal in respect of subsection 248(40) has been removed and replaced with an unrelated amendment.

New subsection 248(30) allows the opportunity for a donor to rebut the general presumption that the receipt of any form of consideration or benefit reflects that lack of an intention to make a gift. Such a rule is unnecessary in the context of inter-charity transfers and could lead to complication of the "disbursement quota" calculation of a charity under section 149.1. New subsection 248(40) therefore precludes the application of subsection 248(30) to transfers made by a registered charity to a qualified donee. Consequently, the eligible amount of a gift under new subsection 248(31) should always equal its fair market value.

[This was not included in the July 18, 2005 draft legislation. That draft contained a 248(40) which proposed that charities be required to make inquiries with respect to any donation of $5,000 or more, before issuing a receipt, to ascertain compliance with 248(31)-(39). It was withdrawn following objections from the charity sector — ed.]

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Nov. 29, 2005 [re former 248(40)]:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in response to your letter of November 2, 2005 in which you expressed concern regarding the administrative burden on charities that may be implied by [former] proposed subsection 248(40) of the Income Tax Act.

This proposal was made in response to suggestions from the charitable sector that charities were unsure as to what information should be obtained from donors in order to correctly prepare a receipt. It was recognized that in some cases charities would not have direct knowledge of all circumstances that might have implications for the eligible amount of a gift. The provision was intended to provide clarity as to what charities should ask their donors before preparing a receipt.

However, we recognize the difficulties that have been brought to light by this proposal. Therefore, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that proposed subsection 248(40) be withdrawn. As was the case before the proposal of this provision, charities will still be responsible [for seeking] relevant information from donors where the need for such information is apparent to them in the particular circumstances.

Thank you for bringing this matter to my attention.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber, General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(41) Information not provided — Notwithstanding subsection (31), the eligible amount of a gift or monetary contribution made by a taxpayer is nil if the taxpayer does not — before a receipt referred to in subsection 110.1(2), 118.1(2) or 127(3), as the case may be, is issued in respect of the gift or monetary contribution — inform the qualified donee or the recipient, as the case may be, of any circumstances in respect of which subsection (31), (35), (36), (38) or (39) requires that the eligible amount of the gift or monetary contribution be less than the fair market value, determined without reference to subsection (35) and subsections 110.1(3) and 118.1(6), of the property that is the subject of the gift or monetary contribution.

Technical Notes: New subsection 248(41), which applies in respect of gifts and monetary contributions made after 2005, provides that the eligible amount of a gift is nil if, before an official charitable receipt is issued by a donee, the donor fails to inform the donee of information that would be relevant to the application of subsections 248(31), (35), (36), (38) or (39). The donee requires such information for correct preparation of the receipt.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 187(23), will add subsecs. 248(35)–(41), applicable in respect of gifts and monetary contributions made after December 20, 2002, except that

(a) subsecs. 248(35), (37) and (38) do not apply in respect of gifts made before 6:00 p.m. EST on December 5, 2003 and, in respect of gifts made after that time but before July 18, 2005, subsec. 248(38) is to be read as follows:

(38) If it can reasonably be concluded that one of the reasons for a series of transactions, that includes a disposition or acquisition of a property of a taxpayer that is the subject of a gift by the taxpayer, is to increase the amount that would be deemed by subsection (35) to be the fair market value of the property, the cost of the property for the purpose of that subsection is deemed to be, the lowest cost to the taxpayer to acquire that property or an identical property at any time.

(b) subsec. 248(36) does not apply in respect of gifts or monetary contributions made before July 18, 2005;

(c) subsec. 248(39) does not apply in respect of gifts or monetary contributions made before February 27, 2004;

(d) subsec. 248(40) does not apply in respect of gifts made before November 9, 2006; and

Dept. of Finance news release 2003-061, Dec. 5, 2003: Government Announces Restrictions on Charitable Donation Tax Shelter Arrangements

John Manley, Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance, today released draft amendments to the Income Tax Act limiting the tax benefits of charitable donations made under tax shelter and other arrangements.

The amendments proposed today respond to concerns that various promoters are marketing charitable gifting schemes to the public in which property acquired by a taxpayer is donated to a charity at a value represented to be in excess of the taxpayer's acquisition cost. These "buy-low, donate-high" arrangements provide taxpayers with a tax benefit greater than their actual cost of the donated property. These proposed amendments will not apply to gifts of publicly traded securities, certified cultural property, ecological gifts, or real property situated in Canada.

As of 6:00 p.m. EST on December 5, 2003, the value of a gift of property for charitable donation purposes will be limited to a donor's cost of the property, where it is donated within three years of acquisition by the donor or is otherwise acquired through a gifting arrangement or in contemplation of donation.

The Minister also released draft amendments relating to limited-recourse debt and "split-receipting." These measures implement proposals introduced in Budget 2003 that address charitable donation arrangements that were promoted in recent years involving the use of limited-recourse debt [see 143.2(6.1), 237.1(1) "gifting arrangement" (b) and 248(34) — ed.]. The draft amendments also incorporate changes put forward in December 2002 relating to the right to receive a benefit in respect of the donation [see 248(30)–(33) — ed.].

References in the draft legislation to "Announcement Time" should be read as referring to 6:00 p.m. EST on December 5, 2003.

249. (1) Definition of "taxation year" — For the purpose of this Act, a "taxation year" is

(a) in the case of a corporation or Canadian resident partnership, a fiscal period, and

(b) in the case of an individual, a calendar year, and when a taxation year is referred to by reference to a calendar year, the reference is to the taxation year or years coinciding with, or ending in, that year.

Proposed Amendment — 249(1)

249. (1) Definition of "taxation year" — Except as expressly otherwise provided in this Act, a "taxation year" is

(a) in the case of a corporation, a fiscal period;

(b) in the case of an individual (other than a testamentary trust), a calendar year; and

(c) in the case of a testamentary trust, the period for which the accounts of the trust are made up for purposes of assessment under this Act.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 188(1), will amend subsec. 249(1) to read as above, applicable after December 20, 2002. See also the addition of para. 249(1)(d) by S.C. 2007, c. 29 (Bill C-52) below.

Technical Notes: Subsection 249(1) sets out, for purposes of the Act, the definition "taxation year". Paragraph 249(1)(a) provides that in the case of a corporation, a taxation year is a fiscal period. Paragraph 249(1)(b) provides that the taxation year of an individual is the calendar year. Subsection 249(1) also provides that when a taxation year is referred to by reference to a calendar year, the reference is to the taxation year or years coinciding with, or ending in, that year.

Subsection 249(1) is amended to clarify that the definition "taxation year" contained in that subsection applies for purposes of the Act except as otherwise provided. For examples of exceptions, which apply for limited purposes, see the definitions "taxation year" in subsections 95(1) and 149.1(1).

Subsection 249(1) is also amended to add new paragraph 249(1)(c), which provides that the taxation year of a testamentary trust is the period for which the accounts of the trust are made up for purposes of assessment under the Act. This definition was previously contained in paragraph 104(23)(a), which is being repealed.

New subsection 249(1.1) provides that, when a taxation year is referred to by reference to a calendar year, the reference is to the taxation year or taxation years that coincide with, or that end in, that calendar year. This rule combines the identical rules previously found in paragraph 104(23)(b), which is repealed, and subsection 249(1).

Proposed Addition — 249(1)(d)

Application: S.C. 2007, c. 29 (Bill C-52, Royal Assent June 22, 2007), s. 42, will add para. 249(1)(d) once former Bill C-10 (see proposed amendment above) receives Royal Assent, deemed to have come into force on October 31, 2006.

Technical Notes (Dec. 21, 2006): Subsection 249(1) defines "taxation year" in the case of a corporation or an individual. Subsection 249(1) is amended, in conjunction with the introduction of Part IX.1, to provide that the taxation year of a Canadian resident partnership is its fiscal period.

Proposed Addition — 249(5), (6)

(5) Testamentary trusts — The period for which the accounts of a testamentary trust are made up for the purposes of an assessment under this Act may not exceed 12 months, and no change in the time when such a period ends may be made for the purposes of this Act without the concurrence of the Minister.

Technical Notes: New subsection 249(5) is added consequential on the repeal of paragraph 104(23)(a).

Subsection 249(5) provides that the period for which the accounts of a testamentary trust are made up for purposes of assessment under the Act may not exceed 12 months and that no change in the time when such a period ends may be made for the purposes of the Act without the concurrence of the Minister of National Revenue. The rule was previously found in paragraph 104(23)(a), which is being repealed.

This amendment applies after December 20, 2002. For a related set of amendments, see the commentary on paragraphs 104(23)(a) and (b) and subsection 249(1) and 1.1).

Related Provisions: 249(6) — Deemed year-end on loss of testamentary trust status.

(6) Loss of testamentary trust status — If at a particular time after December 20, 2002 a transaction or event, described in any of paragraphs (b) to (d) of the definition “testamentary trust” in subsection 108(1), occurs and as a result of that occurrence a trust or estate is not a testamentary trust, the following rules apply:

(a) the fiscal period for a business or property of the trust or estate that would, if this Act were read without reference to this subsection and those paragraphs, have included the particular time is deemed to have ended immediately before the particular time;

(b) the taxation year of the trust or estate that would, if this Act were read without reference to this subsection and those paragraphs, have included the particular time is deemed to have ended immediately before the particular time;

(c) a new taxation year of the trust or estate is deemed to have started at the particular time; and

(d) in determining the fiscal period for a business or property of the trust or estate after the particular time, the trust or estate is deemed not to have established a fiscal period before that time.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 188(2), will add subsecs. 249(5) and (6), subsec. (5) applicable after December 20, 2002, and subsec. (6) applicable after July 18, 2005 and, if a trust or estate so elects in writing by filing the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before its filing due date for its taxation year in which former Bill C-10 is assented to, it also applies to that trust or estate, as the case may be, after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: New subsection 249(6) provides a set of rules that apply where a trust or estate loses its status under the Act as a “testamentary trust”. This loss of status will generally occur where property has been contributed or loaned to the trust or estate in circumstances described in any of paragraphs (b) to (d) of the definition “testamentary trust” in subsection 108(1) or where the trust or estate has been created by someone other than the deceased person on and as a consequence of whose death the trust or estate arose (in this regard, see paragraph (a) of that definition). Under the existing rules in the Act, where a transaction or event described in any of those paragraphs occurs at a particular time, the trust or estate will lose its status as a testamentary trust for its entire taxation year that would otherwise include that time. As a result, the trust will be treated as an inter vivos trust at all times after the end of its last taxation year, if any, throughout which it was a testamentary trust.

As such, its first taxation year after that last taxation year will be, given the definition “taxation year” in subsection 249(1), the calendar year.

New subsection 249(6) provides transitional relief for trusts or estates that lose their “testamentary trust” status. Under that subsection, if at a particular time after December 20, 2002 a transaction or event, described in any of paragraphs (b) to (d) of the definition “testamentary trust” in subsection 108(1), occurs and as a result of that occurrence a trust or estate is not a testamentary trust, a number of special rules apply in determining its taxation years and fiscal periods. (Note that a trust or estate that fails to qualify as a testamentary trust because of paragraph (a) of the definition “testamentary trust” will be an inter vivos trust from its creation and is, therefore, not in need of this transitional relief.) In particular,

- under paragraph 249(6)(a), the fiscal period, for a business or property of the trust or estate, that would, if the Act were read without reference to subsection 249(6) and paragraphs (b) to (d) of the definition “testamentary trust”, have included the particular time, is deemed to have ended immediately before the particular time. Subsection 249.1(3) ensures that the next fiscal period starts at the particular time and subsection 249.1(1) requires that that next fiscal period end no later than the calendar year in which it began (i.e. the new taxation year) — this is because the trust would then have become an inter vivos trust.

- the taxation year of the trust or estate that would, if this Act were read without reference to this subsection and paragraphs (b) to (d) of the definition "testamentary trust", have included the particular time is deemed to have ended immediately before the particular time. As a result, the trust or estate maintains testamentary trust status until the offside event occurs.
- a new taxation year of the trust or estate is deemed to have started at the particular time.
- in determining the fiscal period for a business or property of the trust or estate after the particular time, the trust or estate is deemed not to have established a fiscal period before that time.

New subsection 249(6) applies after November 9, 2006. However, if a trust or estate elects in writing filed with the Minister of National Revenue on or before its filing-due date for its taxation year in which the subsection receives Royal Assent, it also applies to that trust or estate, as the case may be, after December 20, 2002.

Example:

Trust A was created on and as a consequence of the death of John Smith in 2004. Trust A has a November 30 year-end. For its 2004 and 2005 taxation years, Trust A is a testamentary trust. On April 15, 2006, Trust A becomes indebted to a beneficiary of the trust by way of an interest-free loan.

Results:

(i) Existing scheme of the Act

Because of paragraph (d) of the definition "testamentary trust", Trust A cannot qualify as a testamentary trust at any time in its taxation year that began December 1, 2005. Therefore, Trust A becomes an inter vivos trust effective December 1, 2005. Trust A would, as an inter vivos trust, have a December 31, 2005 year-end, with an April 1, 2006 filing-due date.

(ii) New Subsection 249(6)

Because of paragraph (d) of the definition "testamentary trust", Trust A cannot qualify as a testamentary trust. Its taxation year that began December 1, 2005 is deemed to have ended immediately before April 15, 2006 — that is to say, on April 14, 2006 (Assume that a reference to time in the legislation is to a day.) Therefore, Trust A maintains its status as a testamentary trust throughout the stub year that began on December 1, 2005 and ended on April 14, 2006. The trust would have 90 days from the end of that taxation year to file its return of income for the stub year. A new taxation year is deemed to begin April 15, 2006. As the April 15, 2006 loan occurs in the new taxation year, Trust A is an inter vivos trust throughout the new taxation year, which, accordingly, will end on December 31, 2006. As a result, Trust A is able to maintain testamentary trust status until the time immediately before the offside event. With respect to any late-filing for the stub year, relief may be available under the provisions in section 220.

Technical Notes (April 2008): Coordinating Amendments — [former] Bill C-10

Bill C-10, introduced in the 2nd session of the 39th Parliament and entitled the Income Tax Amendments Act, 2006, includes a number of measures that enact or amend provisions that are also the subject of the present enactment. If both are enacted, it will be necessary to ensure that the changes to those provisions are coordinated. This is accomplished through a series of technical coordinating amendments in the present enactment.

The coordinating amendment in clause 42 ensures that the present enactment modifies the correct version of subsection 252(3), which provides extended meanings of "spouse" and "former spouse" for a number of purposes under that Act. Bill C-10 includes a change to one of the statutory references in the subsection, while the present enactment adds a reference in relation to the TFSA rules [146.2 and 207.01 — ed.]. Clause 42 ensures that both of these will operate as intended, regardless of the order of the two enactments.

Related Provisions: 147.1(1) — RPP — Definition of spouse; Reg. 8500(5) — Rule in 252(3) applies to Regs. 8500–8520.

253.1 Investments in limited partnerships [deemed not carrying on business] — For the purposes of subparagraph 108(2)(b)(ii), paragraphs 130.1(6)(b), 131(8)(b), 132(6)(b) and 146.1(2.1)(c), subsection 146.2(4) [will be changed to 146.2(6) as per later amendment — ed.], paragraphs 146.4(5)(b) and 149(1)(o.2), the definition "private holding corporation" in subsection 191(1) and regulations made for the purposes of paragraphs 149(1)(o.3) and (o.4), if a trust or corporation holds an interest as a member of a partnership and, by operation of any law governing the arrangement in respect of the partnership, the liability of the member as a member of the partnership is limited, the member shall not, solely because of its acquisition and holding of that interest, be considered to carry on any business or other activity of the partnership.

Application: S.C. 2007, c. 35 (Bill C-28, Royal Assent December 14, 2007), s. 134, will add reference to para. 146.1(2.1)(c) to s. 253.1, once former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 1 — NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 191(1), receives Royal Assent, applicable in respect of 2008 et seq. Note: amendments made by S.C. 2008, c. 28 (Bill C-50, Royal Assent June 18, 2008), s. 36, adding reference to 146.2(4) applicable to 2009 et seq., are incorporated in the final version above, per s. 43 of said c. 28. This will have to be changed to 146.2(6) due to renumbering of that subsec.

Technical Notes (Nov. 2006 to Bill C-33): Section 253.1 applies for specified provisions of the Act and Regulations where a trust or corporation holds an interest as a limited partner in a limited partnership. It provides that the trust or corporation will not, solely because of its acquisition and holding of the limited partnership interest, be considered to carry on any business or other activity of the partnership.

Section 253.1 is amended so that it also applies for the purpose of paragraph 146.1(2.1)(c), which provides that the registration of a registered education savings plan (RESP) is revocable if a trust governed by the plan carries on a business. The amendment to section 253.1 ensures that the acquisition and holding of a limited partnership interest by an RESP trust does not jeopardize the registered status of the plan, provided the interest is a qualified investment for the trust.

Technical Notes (April 2008): Coordinating Amendments — [former] Bill C-10

Bill C-10, introduced in the 2nd session of the 39th Parliament and entitled the Income Tax Amendments Act, 2006, includes a number of measures that enact or amend provisions that are also the subject of the present enactment. If both are enacted, it will be necessary to ensure that the changes to those provisions are coordinated. This is accomplished through a series of technical coordinating amendments in the present enactment.

Clause 43 performs a comparable function [to that of clause 42; see Technical Notes to proposed amendment to 252(3) above — ed.] in respect of amendments to section 253.1, which treats the mere acquisition and holding of a limited partnership interest as not constituting the carrying on of the partnership's business for certain purposes of that Act.

History: S. 253.1 amended by 2009, c. 2, s. 77, applicable to 2009 et seq. It formerly read:

253.1 For the purposes of subparagraph 108(2)(b)(ii), paragraphs 130.1(6)(b), 131(8)(b) and 132(6)(b), subsection 146.2(4), paragraphs 146.4(5)(b) and 149(1)(o.2), the definition "private holding corporation" in subsection 191(1) and regulations made for the purposes of paragraphs 149(1)(o.3) and (o.4), if a trust or corporation holds an interest as a member of a partnership and, by operation of any law governing the arrangement in respect of the partnership, the liability of the member as a member of the partnership is limited, the member shall not, solely because of its acquisition and holding of that interest, be considered to carry on any business or other activity of the partnership.

S. 253.1 amended to substitute "132(6)(b), 146.4(5)(b)" for "132(6)(b)" and "if a trust" for "where a trust" by 2007, c. 35, s. 124, applicable to 2008 et seq.

S. 253.1 added by 2001, c. 17, s. 193, applicable after 1992, except that for taxation years that end after December 16, 1999 and before 2003, the section shall be read as follows:

History: Para. 256(1.1)(d) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 198(1), to substitute subparas. (i) and (ii) for “the prescribed rate of interest at the time the shares were issued”, applicable to 1989 et seq.

Regulations: 4301(c) (prescribed rate of interest).

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-64R4: Corporations: association and control.

(1.2) Control, etc. — For the purposes of this subsection and subsections (1), (1.1) and (1.3) to (5),

(a) a group of persons in respect of a corporation means any two or more persons each of whom owns shares of the capital stock of the corporation;

(b) for greater certainty,

(i) a corporation that is controlled by one or more members of a particular group of persons in respect of that corporation shall be considered to be controlled by that group of persons, and

(ii) a corporation may be controlled by a person or a particular group of persons notwithstanding that the corporation is also controlled or deemed to be controlled by another person or group of persons;

(c) a corporation shall be deemed to be controlled by another corporation, a person or a group of persons at any time where

(i) shares of the capital stock of the corporation having a fair market value of more than 50% of the fair market value of all the issued and outstanding shares of the capital stock of the corporation, or

(ii) common shares of the capital stock of the corporation having a fair market value of more than 50% of the fair market value of all the issued and outstanding common shares of the capital stock of the corporation are owned at that time by the other corporation, the person or the group of persons, as the case may be;

(d) where shares of the capital stock of a corporation are owned, or deemed by this subsection to be owned, at any time by another corporation (in this paragraph referred to as the “holding corporation”), those shares shall be deemed to be owned at that time by any shareholder of the holding corporation in a proportion equal to the proportion of all those shares that

(i) the fair market value of the shares of the capital stock of the holding corporation owned at that time by the shareholder is of

(ii) the fair market value of all the issued shares of the capital stock of the holding corporation outstanding at that time;

(e) where, at any time, shares of the capital stock of a corporation are property of a partnership, or are deemed by this subsection to be owned by the partnership, those shares shall be deemed to be owned at that time by each member of the partnership in a proportion equal to the proportion of all those shares that

(i) the member's share of the income or loss of the partnership for its fiscal period that includes that time is of

(ii) the income or loss of the partnership for its fiscal period that includes that time and for this purpose, where the income and loss of the partnership for its fiscal period that includes that time are nil, that proportion shall be computed as if the partnership had had income for that period in the amount of $1,000,000;

(f) where shares of the capital stock of a corporation are owned, or deemed by this subsection to be owned, at any time by a trust,

(i) in the case of a testamentary trust under which one or more beneficiaries were entitled to receive all of the income of the trust that arose before the date of death of one or the last surviving of those beneficiaries (in this paragraph referred to as the "distribution date") and no other person could, before the distribution date, receive or otherwise obtain the use of any of the income or capital of the trust,

(A) where any such beneficiary's share of the income or capital therefrom depends on the exercise by any person of, or the failure by any person to exercise, any discretionary power, those shares shall be deemed to be owned at any time before the distribution date by the beneficiary, and

(B) where clause (A) does not apply, those shares shall be deemed to be owned at any time before the distribution date by any such beneficiary in a proportion equal to the proportion of all those shares that the fair market value of the beneficial interest in the trust of the beneficiary is of the fair market value of the beneficial interests in the trust of all those beneficiaries,

(ii) where a beneficiary's share of the accumulating income or capital therefrom depends on the exercise by any person of, or the failure by any person to exercise, any discretionary power, those shares shall be deemed to be owned at that time by the beneficiary, except where subparagraph (i) applies and that time is before the distribution date,

(iii) in any case where subparagraph (ii) does not apply, a beneficiary shall be deemed at that time to own the proportion of those shares that the fair market value of the beneficial interest in the trust of the beneficiary is of the fair market value of all beneficial interests in the trust, except where subparagraph (i) applies and that time is before the distribution date, and,

(iv) in the case of a trust referred to in subsection 75(2), the person referred to in that subsection from whom property of the trust or property for which it was substituted was directly or indirectly received shall be deemed to own those shares at that time; and

(b) that the estate or trust under which the executor, liquidator or trustee acquired control of each of the corporations arose only on the death of the individual creating the estate or trust,

(i) the acquisition at any time of shares of any corporation by

(A) a particular person who acquired the shares from a person to whom the particular person was related (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) immediately before that time,

(B) a particular person who was related to the particular corporation (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) immediately before that time,

(C) an estate that acquired the shares because of the death of a person, or

(D) a particular person who acquired the shares from an estate that arose on the death of another person to whom the particular person was related, or

Proposed Addition — 256(7)(a)(i)(E)

(E) a corporation on a distribution (within the meaning assigned by subsection 55(1)) by a specified corporation (within the meaning assigned by that subsection) if a dividend, to which subsection 55(2) does not apply because of paragraph 55(3)(b), is received in the course of the reorganization in which the distribution occurs,

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007; requires reintroduction) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 192(2), will add cl. 256(7)(a)(i)(E), applicable to acquisitions of shares that occur after 2000.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 256(7)(a) describes the circumstances where control of a corporation (or a corporation controlled by the corporation) is considered not to have been acquired for the purposes of certain provisions of the Act. That paragraph is amended in two ways.

First, subparagraph 256(7)(a)(i) is amended effective with respect to the acquisition of shares after 2000 to add clause (E) which precludes an acquisition of control of a corporation on a distribution (within the meaning assigned by subsection 55(1)) by a specified corporation (within the meaning assigned by that subsection) if a dividend is received in the course of a spin-off distribution in which no portion of the dividend is treated as a capital gain by the anti-avoidance rule in subsection 55(2) because of the application of the exception for certain reorganizations under paragraph 55(3)(b).

Example:

Facts:

Pubco is a specified corporation under the butterfly rules in section 55 and a person or group of persons does not control it. Pubco owns all of the shares of Subco. In the course of a distribution (as defined by subsection 55(1)), Pubco distributes the Subco shares to Newco, which is established in the course of the reorganization for the purposes of the distribution. The same shareholders that own all of the shares of Pubco own all of the shares of Newco. Because there is no person or group of persons that control Pubco and Newco, an acquisition of control of Subco would occur upon Newco's acquisition of the Subco shares on the distribution despite the fact the same shareholders own Pubco and Newco.

Application:

In this example, new clause 256(7)(a)(i)(E) provides that there is no acquisition of control of Subco by Newco if Pubco's distribution of its Subco shares to Newco is a distribution to which the anti-avoidance rule in subsection 55(2) does not apply because the distribution complies with the exception in paragraph 55(3)(b).

Second, new subparagraph 256(7)(a)(iii), which applies to the acquisition of shares after 2000, provides that, where there is an acquisition of any shares of a corporation, there is no acquisition of control of the corporation by a related group of persons if each member of each group of persons that controls the corporation was related to the corporation immediately before the change of control.

Example:

Facts:

Corporation X has issued 100 common shares with 1 vote per share. There are no other issued shares. Mr. X owns 51% of Corporation X's issued shares. Ms. D who is the daughter of Mr. X owns 49% of the common shares issued by Corporation X. Mr. X has de jure control of Corporation X. Mr. X disposes of 10 shares of Corporation X to Mr. Z, an arm's length person. Consequently, Mr. X no longer has de jure control, and a group of persons acquires de jure control of Corporation X.

Application:

If Mr. X and Ms. D form a related group of persons that otherwise acquires control of Corporation X upon the disposition of shares by Mr. X, new subparagraph 256(7)(a)(iii) deems no acquisition of control if no other group of persons that includes Mr. Z acquires control of Corporation X. It is a question of fact whether Mr. X and Ms. D form a group of persons that would otherwise acquire control of Corporation X and, if so, whether there exists another group of persons that also acquires control. Depending on the circumstances, Mr. X and Ms. D; Mr. X and Mr. Z; Ms. D and Mr. Z; or Mr. X, Ms. D and Mr. Z could form a group of persons that acquires control of Corporation X. Consequently, new subparagraph 256(7)(a)(iii) applies only if, in this example, Mr. X and Ms. D form a group of persons that control Corporation X and there exists no other group of persons (which includes Mr. Z) that acquires control of Corporation X.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, July 3, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

This is in reply to your firm's letters of December 22, 2000, January 24 and 31, February 5, 9 and 23, 2001, and telephone conversations with members of this Division regarding the application of section 55 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") to a proposed Canadian public corporation spin-off.

You have expressed the concern that the mechanics of a public spin-off butterfly under paragraph 55(3)(b) of the Act should not, by and of themselves, result in any acquisition of control on a "no types of property" Canadian public corporation spin-off. As well, you are concerned that certain shares referred to below should not be considered to be taxable Canadian property for the purposes of the Act. I propose to address each matter separately.

Acquisition of Control

Under paragraph 55(3)(b) of the Act, a Canadian public corporation ("Pubco") will spin-off the shares of its subsidiary corporation ("Subco") to a newly created public corporation ("Newco"). We understand that, pursuant to a Plan of Arrangement, the shareholders of Pubco will exchange their common shares for common shares and "special" shares of Pubco. Pubco shareholders will transfer to Newco, in exchange for common shares of Newco, their special Pubco shares, which have a total value equal to the value of the Subco shares owned by Pubco. Pubco will transfer all of its Subco shares to Newco in consideration for preferred shares of Newco. There will be a cross repurchase of the special Pubco shares held by Newco and the Newco preferred shares held by Pubco. Pubco will be a "specified corporation" within the meaning of subsection 55(1) of the Act in relation to the distribution of the shares of Subco.

Your concern is that Newco will acquire control of Subco on the acquisition of the Subco shares from Pubco, with the result that the acquisition of control and successor rules under the Act will apply to Subco after its acquisition by Newco.

We agree there should not be an acquisition of control and the successor rules of the Act should not apply to the acquisition of the Subco shares by Newco in the circumstances you describe provided the spin-off of Subco is not subsequently tainted. In this regard therefore we will recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended to ensure there is no acquisition of control in these circumstances.

In particular, we will recommend an amendment [now 256(7)(a)(i)(E) — ed.] which will provide that where Pubco, a "specified corporation" within the meaning of subsection 55(1) of the Act, spins off its shares of Subco to Newco in the course of a reorganization in which all the dividends that are received are ones to which paragraph 55(3)(b) of the Act applies, control of Subco will be considered not to have been acquired solely as a result of the acquisition of the Subco shares by Newco. We will also recommend that such an amendment be effective for acquisitions made after 2000. If the recommendation is acted upon, we anticipate that such an amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Taxable Canadian Property

As well, because of subparagraph 115(1)(b)(iv) of the Act, the special shares of Pubco that will be acquired by a non-resident shareholder of Pubco pursuant to a Plan of Arrangement will be considered to be taxable Canadian property for the purposes of the Act. Under the provisions of sections 85 and 85.1 of the Act, the taxable Canadian property status of the special shares issued by Pubco will cause the Newco shares acquired by the non-resident in exchange for the non-resident's special shares of Pubco to be taxable Canadian property of the non-resident even though the Newco shares will be listed on a prescribed stock exchange. As well, the special shares of Pubco will not be excluded property for the purpose of subsection 116(3) of the Act because the definition "excluded property" in subsection 116(6) applies in the case of shares of the capital stock of a corporation only if the shares are listed on a prescribed stock exchange.

In these circumstances, we agree that the Newco shares should not be considered to be taxable Canadian property by reason only of a deeming rule that applies on the exchange of the special shares for the Newco shares (i.e., because subparagraph 115(1)(b)(iv) applied before the exchange to the special shares of Newco). Consequently, we will recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended [now 55(6) — ed.] to ensure that the above-mentioned special shares of Pubco held by a non-resident shareholder will not be considered to be taxable Canadian property of the non-resident in these circumstances for the purposes of the Act. We will recommend that such an amendment be effective for such special shares issued by a public corporation after April 26, 1995 where the shares are issued by the corporation as part of the series of transactions or events that includes a distribution of property by the corporation in the course of a butterfly reorganization. The date of April 26, 1995 is the date upon which the related amendments to paragraph 115(l)(b) took effect. If the recommendation is acted upon, we anticipate that such an amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch
